Mr. Eggar: The provisions relating to the sale of Crown land in the Turks and Caicos Islands are set out at section 56 of the Constitution (The Turks and Caicos Islands Constitution) Order 1976.

Our policy on the sale of Crown land was circulated to the Governors of dependent Territories in a dispatch dated 12 September 1969. It requires the Governments of grant-aided territories to consult the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as soon possible whenever property developers or other commercial organisations put propositions to them for the conclusion of agreement in order that the proposals may be scrutinised in London.

Cameroon

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by him to the Government of the Cameroon about human rights in the Cameroon.

Mrs. Chalker: None.

Members' Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available, for each right hon. and hon. Member, the arithmetic mean in days that his Department took to reply to letters.

Mr. Eggar: The precise information can be supplied only at disporportiate cost. However, it is our office practice to reply to all letters from right hon. and hon. Members within, as far as possible, two weeks from receipt. In the majority of cases these replies are substantive.

Islamic Holy Places

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Comonwealth Affairs what message Her Majesty's Government have received from King Hassan of Morocco about allegations against Israel's supervision of Islamic holy places in Jerusalem and other towns; and what response has been made to this message.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from Her Majesty's ambassadors in Morocco and Israel about the announcement of King Hassan on 22 January that he was taking charge of the protection of the Al-Aqsa mosque in Jerusalem; and what message he has instructed to be conveyed to King Hassan about these proposals.

Mr. Eggar: We are aware of press reports that King Hassan had offered to send 150 Moroccan volunteers to Jerusalem to guard and protect the Al-Aqsa mosque. No message has been conveyed to King Hassan about this.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Additives

Mr. Coombs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider implementing recommendations 11, 13, 14, 15 and 16 of the report on water in food of the Food Standards Committee (1978).

Mrs. Fenner: The Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations 1984, which come fully into effect on 1 July 1986, require that cooked and uncooked whole and cured meat should carry a declaration of maximum added water content, and corned beef an indication of its minimum corned beef content. These controls take into account the recommendations of the Food Standards Committee in its 1980 "Report on Meat Products", the Committee's earlier report on "Water in Food" and representations from interested parties.

The recommendations in the "Water in Food" report relating to fish products are among the issues currently being examined by the Food Advisory Committee in its review of coated fish products.

Mr. Coombs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the average amount per capita of coal tar dyes (Azo dyes) consumed by (a) the general public and (b) children of five, 10 and 15 years of age.

Mrs. Fenner: There are 10 colours presently permitted in food in the United Kingdom which contain the "azo" chemical grouping. The total intakes of these in the United Kingdom have been estimated as

(a) 20·9 mg per day for a typical 70 kg adult and
(b) 29·2 mg per day for a typical 25 kg child.

The estimates of the intakes of colours by children were based on assumptions about energy intake and no estimates were made for children of different ages.

Agricultural Development and Advisory Service

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the scale of the proposed cut in public funding for the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service for the financial year 1986-87.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 February, at column 257, by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to the hon. Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy).

Farms (Statistics)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farms run on a full-time basis there are in England.

Mrs. Fenner: About 98,000 according to the EC farm classification system. Such farms have crops and stock considered sufficient to generate margins to support at least one person.

Animals (Transit)

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to improve and expand both the quality and number of animal holding facilities at selected United Kingdom air and seaports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Holding facilities for animals subject to our rabies control arrangements are maintained at selected sea and airports by the port authorities, as recommended by the Waterhouse committee. Such facilities must conform with the Ministry's specifications and are regularly inspected.

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have taken place in each year since May 1979 under the United Kingdom Transit of Animals (General) Order 1973.

Mr. Gummer: Statistics collected by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department do not separately identify prosecutions under the Transit of Animals Order 1973 which applies to Great Britain. However, information available to my Ministry, which may be incomplete, indicates that the following numbers of prosecutions under the order were brought in the years in question:

Year	number
1979 (full year)	16
1980	42
1981	37
1982	50
1983	45
1984	11
1985 (Jan-Aug)	7

Members' Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available, for each right hon. and hon. Member, the arithmetic mean in days that his Department took to reply to letters.

Mr. Jopling: This information could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Intervention Stores

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the location of each intervention store within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jopling: As at 31 January 1986 the locations of intervention stores in the United Kingdom and the amounts stored were as follows:

Dairy Produce (Export Subsidy)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to the reply of 10 March, Official Report, column 357, he will publish in the Official Report the basic features of the proposal presented by the Commission to the Management Committee on 28 February.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986]: This proposal has been adopted as a Commission regulation and we expect it to be published shortly in the Official Journal of the European Communities.

Labour Statistics

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fishieries and Food if, pursuant to his reply of 10 February, Official Report, column 377, he will state what percentage of farms in the United Kingdom employ (a) one to five hired workers, (b) five to 10 hired workers and (c) over 10 hired workers; and if he will state the equivalent figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and each of the standard regions in England.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986, c. 356]: The information requested is presented in the tables:—

Notes:

Hired workers are defined as: regular whole-time hired workers, male and female; regular part-time hired workers, male and female; seasonal-casual workers, male and female; salaried managers.

Figures exclude 900 salaried managers in Scotland and 5,096 seasonal-casual workers in Northern Ireland.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Lodiva Ltd.

Mr. William Powell asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland whether he has yet received a report from the official liquidator investigating the affairs of Lodiva Ltd.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The official liquidator has made no formal report but the Crown Office fraud unit is in contact with him.

TRANSPORT

Railway Accidents

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria he uses in deciding whether or not to order a public inquiry into railway accidents.

Mr. David Mitchell: The criteria include the severity of the accident, in terms of loss of life or serious injury to passengers, railway staff, or others; where the accident forms part of a trend with potentially serious consequences; where the cause is unclear or there is doubt about the proper functioning of equipment or operational procedures; and where there is a need if appropriate to reassure the public about the safety of rail traffic and there is no reasonable alternative to a public inquiry available to achieve these purposes.

East Cleveland (Road System)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instigate an urgent inquiry into the management of the road system in east Cleveland, with particular reference to the provision of bypasses.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. The road system in east Cleveland is the responsibility of the local highway authority.

Sewage Works, Heathrow

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate when he expects the report on the possibility of moving the Perry Oaks sewage works at Heathrow to be published.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand that the consultants' study is likely to be completed in the late spring. Progress was slightly delayed by the severe winter weather. I expect the British Airports Authority and the Thames Water Authority to make the findings public in due course.

Airlines (Extended Range Operations)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements the Civil Aviation Authority has made for the implementation and enforcement of CAP 513, the criteria under which has extended range operations are to be assessed, for United Kingdom and foreign operators.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation safety regulation is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. However, the authority has informed me that it has not received any application for extended range operations, but until the Air Navigation (General) Regulations are amended, it will regulate such operations by twin-engined aircraft through the machinery of the air operator's certificate. Operators of twin-engined aeroplanes whose certificates include geographical regions where extended range operations would be possible will have a condition inserted into the certificate prohibiting their operation of such aircraft over routes which include positions further than one hour flying time from a place where the aircraft can safely land. When the authority is satisfied that the criteria set out in CAP 513 can be met, the operator's certificate will be varied to permit extended range operations.

Pilot Fatigue

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if the Civil Aviation Authority has conducted any research in the area of pilot fatigue into the average time that flight crews have been awake on arrival in the United Kingdom following three-day transatlantic trips.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation safety is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. However, the CAA has informed me that it is at present taking part in an international co-operative research programme on pilot fatigue and sleep, during the course of which problems related to sleep disturbance and deprivation during long east-to-west and west-to-east flights are being studied.

Interim reports are being produced at each stage of the project. The first, on sleep quality and planning strategies following eight-hour time zone change, was published by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on 20 February 1986.

Helicopters (Offshore Diversions)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if the Civil Aviation Authority has completed the analysis of the total risk involved in the use of offshore diversions for helicopters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation safety is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. The authority has informed me that it expects the study into the risks involved in the use of offshore diversions for helicopters to be completed in mid-April and a paper to be available in May.

Ship Registration

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department's review of the modernisation of ship registration arrangements was completed; what conclusions it reached; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Ridley: Two years ago my hon. Friend the Minister of State announced the Government's intention of modernising this area of law and he invited comments on proposals that were set out in a consultative document that was put to all the interested parties. The responses were most helpful and I have considered them carefully. This is a complex technical subject and some problems are still unresolved. But I envisage introducing appropriate amending legislation if and when parliamentary time can be found.

Departmental Land, Shrewsbury

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will arrange for the land owned by his Department on the A49 south of Bayston hill, Shrewsbury, to be cleared of gipsies and tidied.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no plans at present to clear this land of gipsies. The situation could be reconsidered if an authorised gipsy site is established in the area to which they can be moved.

Motor Cyclists (Hearing)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the noise effects of motor cycles on the rider's hearing.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This has been the subject of research which suggests that under certain conditions motor cyclists may risk damaging their hearing. I shall send my hon. Friend a copy of a recent paper published by the institution of Mechanical Engineers, which summarises the available information.

Members' Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available, for each right hon. and hon. Member, the arithmetic mean in days that his Department took to reply to letters.

Mr. Ridley: This question could be answered only at disproportionate cost to my Department.

Chemicals (Conveyance)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if O,O-diethyl phosphorodithioate has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road; and (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are unable to find any references to this substance.

A range of similarly named pesticides are regarded as "toxic" for the purposes of supply and use under the Classification, Packaging and Labelling Regulations 1984 and packages must be marked with a number of appropriate risk and safety phrases. Such substances are also considered to be toxic for transport purposes and under the Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981 the appropriate hazard warning panels must be displayed on vehicles.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if 3-aminopropyldimethylamine has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road, and (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: 3-aminopropyldiethylamine is classified as "flammable and corrosive" for the purposes of supply and use under the Classification, Packaging and Labelling Regulations 1984 and packages must be marked with a number of appropriate risk and safety phrases. It is also considered to be corrosive for transport purposes and under the Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981 the appropriate hazard warning panels must be displayed on vehicles.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if gamma-BHc, (Lindane), has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road and (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This pesticide is classified as "toxic" for the purposes of supply and use under the Classification, Packaging and Labelling Regulations 1984 and packages must be marked with a number of appropriate risk and safety phrases. It is considered to be "harmful" for transport purposes and under the Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981 the appropriate hazard warning panel must be displayed on vehicles.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if aminomethyl-propanol has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road, and (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This substance is not regarded as dangerous in transport and vehicles carrying it in tanks are not required to display hazard warning panels.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) why benzylamine does not carry a substance identification number in column 5 of part 1A of the Health and Safety Commission's publication "Information Approved for the Classification, Packaging and Labelling of Dangerous Substances"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) why benzylamine does not carry an agreed warning sign in column 6 of part 1A of the Health and Safety Commission's publication "Information Approved for the Classification, Packaging and Labelling of Dangerous Substances"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Classification for transport purposes in the authorised and approved list under the Classification, Packaging and Labelling Regulations 1984 is based on a United Nations list of substances recognised as being dangerous in transport. It is assumed that benzylamine is not transported internationally in significant quantities. In such cases, a consignor must classify a substance himself in accordance with the criteria in schedule 2 to the regulations.

M4 (Coach Crash)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Christchurch on 20 January, he will now make a further statement about the coach crash on the M4 near Reading on 15 January involving a double decker bus; whether the speed limiter device on the coach was working; what speed was registered; and what information was provided by the tachograph.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Both the speed limiter device and the tachograph fitted to this vehicle were working. As the police are now considering prosecution, detailed facts relating to the accident are sub judice.

European Road Safety Year

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will be encouraging cycling and walking during Europe Road Safety Year; and what steps they will be taking to seek to make these modes of transport safer.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Fostering safer walking and cycling is an important part of the Department's approach to all roads and traffic matters. Initiatives includes programmes of research, advice on good practice and regular publicity campaigns, including during this European Road Safety Year.

Safe Routes to School Project

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will undertake an area-wide environmental and road safety improvement project, based on the concepts developed in the Safe Routes to School project.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall consider this interesting suggestion in the light of work being undertaken on related aspects of cycling and pedestrian safety.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the exclusive rights awarded to Channel Tunnel Group comply with European Economic Community competition policy.

Mr. David Mitchell: Both Governments have taken care to ensure that the concession agreement with the Channel Tunnel Group and France Manche is consistent with Community law. There have also been contacts with the Commission of the European Communities about the application of EEC competition rules to the Channel fixed link.

BR (Rolling Stock)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Transport what response he has given to the request by British Rail for authority to order new rolling stock for use on the Waterloo-Southampton-Bournemouth railway line.

Mr. David Mitchell: I approved, on 28 January, British Rail's proposal to electrify the Bournemouth-Weymouth line and provide new rolling stock for Waterloo-Southampton-Bournemouth-Weymouth services. 121 new air-conditioned electric multiple unit vehicles are to be built, costing some £28·5 million. The first of these is due in service in 1987.

Public Service Vehicles

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report, by operator group, the numbers of public service vehicles which (a) failed the annual test for each traffic area in Great Britain for each year from 1982-83 onwards and (b) failed the annual test for each traffic area in Great Britain after rectification of minor faults, for each year from 1982-83 onwards.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986, c. 364]: The information requested is shown in the table.

The figures show that, except in a few instances, all operator groups in all areas have achieved a significant reduction in the percentage of vehicles that fail the annual test at the first attempt and in the percentage that fail after the rectification of minor faults.

DEFENCE

Visual Display Units

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many visual display units are used by his Department and the armed forces; and how many of these visual display units are Tempest shielded.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Department does not maintain records of VDUs in a way which would permit a reply to be provided without disproportionate cost and effort.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

16. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Paymaster General how many men between the ages of 50 and 59 years have been unemployed for more than 12 months, two years and three years, respectively.

17. Mr. Evans asked the Paymaster General how many men over 50 years have been unemployed for over 12 months.

Mr. Lang: On 9 January 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, the numbers of unemployed men in the United Kingdom between the ages of 50 and 59 who had been unemployed for more than 12 months, two years and three years were 238,700, 172,400 and 122,600 respectively. The number of unemployed men over 50 years who have been unemployed for over 12 months in the United Kingdom was 256,700.

18. Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General what are the total numbers of employees in employment, with the estimated full-time equivalents for the years 1979, 1984 and 1985; and what estimated increases in full-time job equivalents ignoring increases in special employment measures, have taken place since the 1984 and 1985 Budgets.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There were an estimated 22·64 million employees in employment in June 1979, 20·70 million in June 1984, and 20·83 million in June 1985. Over the same period the number of people in self-employment grew from 1·9 million to over 2·5 million.

Insufficient detail is available to calculate reliable estimates of full-time equivalents which would, in any case, not reflect the importance of increasing labour market flexibility. The continuing growth of part-time jobs is part of a long-standing process of social change and has benefited both employers and employees.

19. Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the number of (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years who are currently in employment.

Mr. Lang: The labour force survey conducted in the spring of 1984 estimated that there were 1,015,000 men and 476,000 women, aged 60 and over, in paid employment in Great Britain.

21. Mr. Fisher asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently in full-time employment in Great Britain.

Mr. Lang: The figure for employees in employment at September 1985 was 16,543,000, including part-time male employees, for whom figures are not separately available.

24. Mr. Garrett asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment.

31. Mr. Clelland asked the Paymaster General how many people are unemployed now in the United Kingdom.

35. Mr. Rogers asked the Paymaster General how many people are unemployed in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

68. Mr. Hardy asked the Paymaster General if he will state the current level of unemployment.

72. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Paymaster General how many people are currently unemployed.

Mr. Lang: On 6 February 1986 the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom was 3,381,893.

32. Mr. Knox asked the Paymaster General how many people were out of work in the Staffordshire, Moorlands parliamentary constituency at the most recent count.

Mr. Lang: On 6 February 1986 the number of unemployed claimants in the Staffordshire, Moorlands parliamentary constituency was 3,724.

33. Mr. Flannery asked the Paymaster General what is the latest figure of people who are unemployed; and how many people he estimates are unemployed though not listed as claimants.

Mr. Lang: On 6 February 1986 the number of unemployed people claiming benefits in Great Britain was 3,255,589.

According to the results of the labour force survey, in the spring of 1984 in Great Britain there were about 870,000 people without jobs seeking work who were not included in the monthly count of benefit claimants. There were also about 940,000 people claiming benefit who either had a paid job or were not looking for work.

37. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what has been the percentage increase in unemployment since March 1983.

Mr. Lang: Between March 1983 and February 1986, seasonally adjusted unemployment, excluding school leavers and adjusted for discontinuities, increased by 11·9 per cent. in the United Kingdom.

46. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Paymaster General what information he has on the percentage rate of unemployment in the European Economic Community as a whole at the most recent date for which figures are available; and what was the comparable percentage 10 years previously.

Mr. Lang: Using the latest figures available from national sources, the unemployment rate in the 12 European Community countries was 12·1 per cent. in December 1985. Comparable figures for 10 years ago are not available; but in December 1975, the rate in the nine EC countries, excluding Greece, Portugal and Spain, was 5·0 per cent. compared with 11·3 per cent. in December 1985.

54. Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will state the latest unemployment figures for Merseyside.

Mr. Lang: On 6 February 1986, the number of unemployed claimants in the Merseyside metropolitan county was 141,009.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many people currently registered as unemployed are seeking their first job; what percentage this figure represents of the under 19 years age group; and how these figures compare with those for the same period in 1979.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the form requested. However, on 6 February 1986 there were 307,916 unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom who had never had a job since leaving school, of which 153,948 were aged under 19 years. Figures for the number of employees in the under 19 years of age group are not separately identified.

Direct comparisons of unemployment by age since 1979 are not possible because of changes in the way figures are collected. However, the number of unemployed registrants in the United Kingdom in February 1979 who have never had a job was 70,938. A breakdown of this figure by age group is possible only for Great Britain (figures not collected by age group for Northern Ireland) and this shows that out of a total number of 68,254 unemployed registrants in Great Britain who have never had a job, 44,352 were aged under 19 years.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of persons unemployed for each of the wards of Rochester Medway city council.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. Figures are given showing the numbers of unemployed claimants in the wards of the Rochester-upon-Medway local authority district as at 6 February 1986.

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General what recent representation he has received concerning the present level of youth unemployment.

Mr. Trippier: Since the beginning of February we have received three letters from hon. Members and four from members of the public on the subject.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will list his most recent figures for (a) the numbers of long-term unemployed, (b) the numbers unemployed for more than two years and (c) the number unemployed for more than three years in the northern region.

Mr. Lang: On 9 January 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available, the number of claimants in the northern region who had been unemployed for over one year, over two years and over three years was 109,342, 70,092 and 47,156, respectively.

This information is in the Library.

Youth Opportunities Programme

20. Mr. Sedgemore: asked the Paymaster General what was the real value of the youth opportunities programme allowance in 1979 compared with the current YTS allowance.

Mr. Trippier: The youth opportunities programme allowance in 1979 was £20·55 per week, equivalent to about £35 at today's prices. The current YTS allowance is £27·30 and the allowance for second-year trainees will be £35 from 1 April this year. Allowance levels must reflect the fact that trainees are only learning, and YTS provides substantially upgraded training compared with the youth opportunities programme.

Youth Unemployment

22. Mr. Wareing asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the current level of youth unemployment on Merseyside.

Mr. Trippier: On 9 January 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of unemployed persons aged under 25 years in the Merseyside metropolitan county was 54,875.

Community Programme

23. Mr. Kennedy asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the current operation of the community programme.

Mr. Lang: The community programme continues to operate successfully and currently provides 192,000 long-term unemployed people with the opportunity of worthwhile employment on projects of benefit to the community.

56. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Paymaster General how the value of the average allowance paid on the community programme compares with the allowances paid since 1979 under the special temporary employment programme and the community enterprise programme.

Mr. Lang: Under all three programmes participants have been paid the locally agreed hourly rate for the job, not an allowance. For each programme there has been a limit on the extent to which sponsors of projects are reimbursed the wages costs of participants. Under the community programme the limit is £63 per week per participant (excluding managers and supervisors whose wages costs are fully reimbursed). The limit under the special temporary employment programme was £71 per week per participant in 1979, rising to £83 from July 1980. The limit for the community enterprise programme was originally £83 per week per participant, rising to £89 in June 1982.

The current limit for the community programme is not directly comparable with those for the other programmes because of the large number of part time workers on the community programme.

74. Mr. Terry Davis asked the Paymaster General how many people obtained jobs under the community programme in 1985 or for the most recent 12-month period for which statistics are available; and how many of these people had been unemployed for more than three years.

Mr. Lang: During the 12 months period ending on 31 January 1986 (the latest date for which statistics are available) 220,399 people obtained employment on community programme projects.

Information on the number of these people who have been unemployed for more than three years is not readily available, and could only be obtained at a disporportionate cost.

Mr. Favell asked the Paymaster General if he will review the present system of eligibility for the community programme.

Mr. Lang: The operation of community programme eligibility is kept under continuous review, including the eligibility criteria for priority entry.

Industrial Relations

25. Mr. Litherland asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the operation of industrial relations legislation passed since 1979.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Our industrial relations legislation has given members a greater say in the affairs of their own union, provided a fairer balance of power between unions and employers and contributed to the general improvement in industrial relations in British industry.

Long-term Unemployed (Counselling Services)

26. Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General how many long-term unemployed have succeeded in finding work as a result of the counselling services provided in the pilot areas.

Mr. Lang: By 7 March, 629 people had left the unemployment register since being interviewed. Four hundred and thirty seven of these were placed in jobs or community programme vacancies as a direct result of submissions made during the counselling interviews.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

27. Mr. Rowe asked the Paymaster General what percentage of those long-term unemployed so far approached under the Manpower Services Commission's jobcentre initative have responded positively to the approach; what percentage have accepted an offer from the list of openings available through the Manpower Services Commission by item; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Over 73 per cent. of those so far approached have responded positively by attending for interview. Of those:

19 per cent. of those interviewed have been submitted to a job;
21 per cent. to a community programme place;
1 per cent. to a voluntary project programme opportunity;
5 per cent. for entry into a job club;
14 per cent. to an opportunity for further training;
14 per cent. to a place upon a restart course;
4 per cent. to an information session about starting their own business under the enterprise allowance scheme;
9 per cent. have been referred to other agencies or to specialist Manpower Services Commission services;
12 per cent. declined an offer and
8 per cent. were not made an offer.

These percentages exceed 100 because some people were offered more than one type of opportunity.

29. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General what was the real value of the allowance paid to long-term unemployed workers on the special temporary employment programme in 1979 compared with the current average wage on the community programme.

Mr. Lang: Under both the special temporary employment programme and the community programme workers have been paid the locally agreed hourly rate for the job, not an allowance. For both programmes there have been limits on the extent to which sponsors of projects are reimbursed the wage costs of participants. Under the special temporary employment programme, this limit was £71 per week per participant in 1979. Adjusting this figure according to the retail prices index would raise it to £122·80 at January 1986 prices. The limit for the community programme is £63 per week per participant, excluding managers and supervisors whose wages are reimbursed in full. However, the figures are not directly comparable because of the large numbers of part-time workers on community programme projects.

Wages

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what has been the movement in wage levels for the top 20 per cent. of employees since 1979; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Between April 1979 and April 1985 the level of gross average weekly earnings exceeded by the top 20 per cent. of full-time adult employees increased by 97 per cent. for men and by 108 per cent. for women.

Tourism

30. Mr. Maclean asked the Paymaster General what is the proportion of (a) employees in employment and (b) self-employed persons directly and indirectly engaged in the tourist industry.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chipping Barnet (Mr. Chapman) on 29 October 1985, at columns 425-26, for the latest comprehensive estimate on employment supported directly or indirectly by tourists' spending.

The most recent available information on employees and the self-employed in the industries most closely related to tourism is given in table 8.1 of "Labour Market Data" in Employment Gazette for February 1986, a copy of which is in the Library.

Supplementary Benefit

34. Mr. Nicholls asked the Paymaster General if he will make it his policy to refuse supplementary benefits to those who reject an offer of training under the YTS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The small number of young people who unreasonably refuse a suitable place on YTS risk having their supplementary benefit reduced in the same way as those who unreasonably refuse a suitable offer of employment. Each case is judged individually on its merits by the independent adjudicating authorities. I am sure that this is the right approach, and there are no plans to change the current rules.

Wages Bill (Job Creation)

36. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Paymaster General what is the Government's best estimate of the number of jobs likely to be created for young people as a result of the Wages Bill.

Mr. Trippier: There is clear evidence in studies both in the United Kingdom and internationally of the link between pay and jobs, especially for the young. There are several studies on the employment effects of the wages council system, all of which contain evidence that the councils inhibit employment. I am not aware of any studies which estimate the number of jobs which will arise from the specific reforms which we have proposed and attempts to quantify the job gains are not likely to be fruitful. However, the removal of statutory minima which prevent employers offering jobs at rates which young people would accept must result in increased employment.

Local Enterprise Agencies

38. Mr. Bellingham asked the Paymaster General how many secondments there currently are with local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Trippier: There are currently 166 secondees with local enterprise agencies in England.

47. Mr. Richard Page asked the Paymaster General what action he will take to seek to encourage more secondments from large firms to local enterprise agencies.

Mr. Trippier: Business in the Community is taking the lead in encouraging an increase in secondments to local enterprise agencies from large firms. Such secondments can qualify for tax relief. The Government fully support BIC's efforts in this area.

50. Mr. Burt asked the Paymaster General how many local enterprise agencies there were as at the end of February.

Mr. Trippier: At the end of February there were 320 enterprise agencies in the United Kingdom, of which 233 meet the requirements of the Finance Act 1982, which allows private sector sponsors tax relief on their contributions to such bodies.

Confederation of British Industry

39. Mr. Amess asked the Paymaster General when he last met the Confederation of British Industry; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I met the Director General of the Confederation of British Industry on 12 March. We discussed the Government's inner cities initiative and a number of other matters.

Trade Union Ballots

40. Mr. Hargreaves asked the Paymaster General how many unions have received public funds for trade union ballots.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am informed by the certification officer that 29 trade unions have received public money under the provisions of section 1 of the Employment Act 1980.

Business (Marketing Skill)

41. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Paymaster General what steps he proposes to seek to improve the levels of marketing skill prevalent amongst those starting up in business.

Mr. Trippier: Advice on marketing is available to those starting-up in business as part of the general business advice offered by the Department's small firms service. The Department of Trade and Industry provides help with marketing and market research to small businesses in areas affected by closures in the steel, shipbuilding and textile industries through its business improvement services package. The British Overseas Trade Board provides a range of assistance which can help the small exporter with marketing overseas. Consideration is being given to the possibility of extending the business and technical advisory services financed by the Department of Trade and Industry to cover marketing.

New Businesses

42. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Paymaster General what is the latest figure for firms setting up in business in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: Using the number of new registrations for VAT it is estimated that there were 176,729 new business starts in the United Kingdom in 1984. The estimates were published in an article in British Business 23 August 1985, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Small Firms (Payments)

43. Mr. Harris asked the Paymaster General what recent representations he has received about the problems that small firms have with late payment of bills.

Mr. Trippier: We continue to receive representations on this issue from small firms and small firms organisations. These representations confirm the adverse effect of delays on the financial position of small businesses. We shall publish guidance shortly on good practice in payment of bills.

Jobcentres and Benefit Offices

44. Mr. Ottaway asked the Paymaster General what steps are being taken to encourage links between jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices.

Mr. Ian Lang: Most jobcentres already have close links with unemployment benefit offices and liaison arrangements are kept under review.

In order to increase the awareness of jobcentre services amongst claimants, including longer term unemployed. Thirty-four pilot projects in unemployment benefit offices are currently under way and a further 33 are planned. The projects include vacancy displays, some with jobcentre staff in attendance, information displays and the installation of electronic equipment which gives information on jobcentre services.

Youth Training Scheme

45. Mr. O'Brien asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on progress to date towards implementation of the two-year YTS.

Mr. Trippier: Progress towards setting up two-year YTS has been excellent. With the new programme due to begin in April, already some 86 per cent. of required places are definitely or likely to be provided. We aim to provide high quality training for young people of all abilities and circumstances and are well on the way to achieving this.

63. Mr. Hunter asked the Paymaster General what recent representations he has received about the extended YTS scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We have received many representations on the shape and content of YTS. The new two-year programme has been widely welcomed. It is designed to meet the needs of industry and of young people, and will be a major advance for training in Britain.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the percentage of young people who can expect to go straight into full-time employment after completing a YTS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission conducts a monthly follow-up survey of all young people leaving YTS. The latest results, covering young people who left between 1 April and 30 September 1985, show that 59 per cent. went straight into full-time work on completion of their YTS training. The survey also shows that 66 per cent. were in full-time work some three months after completing their training, with a further 4 per cent. in part time work and 3 per cent. in full-time education/ training.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Carttiss asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to provide business training and counselling for people joining the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: People on the enterprise allowance scheme can take advantage of both public and private sector training and counselling. Including the provision made available through the Manpower Services Commission's training for enterprise programme.

We have recently agreed that from 1 April that programme should be expanded and, in respect of start up provision, it will offer 44,500 places in 1986-87.

In addition. I understand that the commission, itself will shortly consider proposals for a revised approach to training, advice and counselling for those who wish to take advantage of the enterprise allowance scheme.

51. Mr. Sackville asked the Paymaster General what is the latest success rate of those starting up in business under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The latest available survey evidence shows that of those taking advantage of the full year's allowance, 61 per cent. were still trading three years after starting up in business. For every 100 of these continuing businesses at the three-year point 99 additional new jobs had been created, of which 50 were full time and 49 were part time.

59. Mr. Spencer asked the Paymaster General how many entrants there have been to the enterprise allowance scheme in England between 1 August 1983 and the latest available date.

Mr. Trippier: 103,476 people entered the enterprise allowance scheme in England between 1 August 1983 and the end of January 1986.

71. Mr. Maples asked the Paymaster General how many additional jobs have been generated by businesses set up under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The latest survey evidence indicates that of every 100 businesses still trading two years after the allowance has stopped, 99 additional jobs have been created. No statistics are available which show the total number of additional jobs generated by the enterprise allowance scheme.

Self-employed Persons

49. Mr. Hirst asked the Paymaster General what is the latest estimate of the number of self-employed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lang: In September 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom was provisionally estimated to be 2,651,000.

YTS Weekly Allowance

52. Mr. Ashton asked the Paymaster General what are the latest figures for the YTS weekly allowance as a percentage of the average weekly wage of 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time employment.

Mr. Trippier: In April 1985, the YTS allowance was 39 per cent. of the average gross weekly earnings and 48 per cent. of the take-home pay of 16 and 17-year-olds in full-time employment.

Franchising Opportunities

53. Mr. Terlezki asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to the role played by franchising opportunities for those wishing to set up in business.

Mr. Trippier: We are aware of the growth in Franchising over recent years and of projections for future growth in this area. It is clear that franchising can make an important contribution to the creation of new businesses, wealth and jobs. We are maintaining contact with the British Franchise Association.

Further Education

55. Mrs Virginia Bottomley asked the Paymaster General what measures have been taken to improve the quality of work-related non-advanced further education.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 21 January 1986 at column 126.

Small Business Sector (Tourism)

57. Mr. Gregory asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the wealth and job creation potential of the small business sector over the next 12 months in the tourism sector.

Mr. Trippier: The Department does not produce forecasts of wealth and job creation linked to tourism spending. Many factors are involved. But if tourism spending continues to grow (the estimated increase between 1984 and 1985 was £1·2 billion at current prices or 10 per cent.) There will be scope for many thousands of new jobs in tourism-related sectors over the coming years. Job creation of the order of 50,000 jobs a year is feasible according to estimates from the BTA/ETB. Since the tourism sector has a high proportion of small businesses much of the growth could be expected to benefit the small business sector.

Pre-strike Ballots

58. Mrs. Roe asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to how many pre-strike ballots have taken place since the implementation of the Trade Union Act 1984.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Our Department is aware of about 160 pre-strike ballots believed to comply with the provisions of the Trade Union Act 1984 but there will have been other ballots which we do not know about.

Manufacturing Industry (Employment Trends)

60. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Paymaster General what are the employment trends in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Lang: In the last two years the number of employees employed in manufacturing has reduced at an average rate of 13,000 a quarter, a much slower reduction than in previous years.

69. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General when he will next seek to meet the Trades Union Congress to discuss employment prospects in the manufacturing industry.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am always prepared to discuss matters of mutual interest with the Trades Union Congress, but I have no plans for a meeting on this specific subject in the near future.

Our policies have created the climate which has led to strong growth in manufacturing output, investment and exports. The decline in manufacturing employment, which has been experienced by all major industrialised nations, has eased considerably in this country since 1983.

Air Pollution

61. Mr. Evennett asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to increase resources available to the Health and Safety Executive for the investigation of air pollution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Decisions on the allocation of resources to particular areas of work are a matter for the executive, subject to the limits set by the Government on its total salary expenditure and manpower. The executive plans to increase the number of industrial air pollution inspectors in the field, up to five new inspectors are expected to take up post shortly.

Youth Training Policies (Educational Advice)

62. Mr. Pawsey asked the Paymaster General from where he obtains educational advice in formulating his youth training policies.

Mr. Trippier: We are in close touch with the Secretary of State for Education and Science and his Department. In addition, we receive recommendations from the Manpower Services Commission, which runs YTS. The commission itself includes a representative of education interests, and a number of its advisory committees include education service representatives.

Beveridge Report (Work Test)

64. Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General what plans he has for implementing a work test as recommended in the Beveridge report.

Mr. Lang: The measures proposed in the 1942 Beveridge report would require considerable resources and I am not convinced they would be either cost-effective or practicable. We are currently reviewing the availability test for unemployed claimants so as to ensure that abuse is properly identified and dealt with.

Skilled and Professionally Qualified People

65. Sir Dudley Smith asked the Paymaster General what new initiatives he proposes to help the skilled and professionally qualified unemployed to obtain work.

Mr. Lang: There is a wide variety of existing help available for skilled and professionally qualified unemployed people from the Manpower Services Commission employment division, including the professional and executive recruitment service, and from the training division. Access to all this help is provided by jobcentres.

In addition, jobcentres are operating a pilot programme of counselling interviews for long-term unemployed people in nine locations throughout the country.

Small Firms (Venture Capital Investment)

66. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Paymaster General what is the trend in venture capital investment in small firms.

Mr. Trippier: There has been significant growth in venture capital investment in the United Kingdom during the last six years. The United Kingdom venture capital journal has reported aggregate investments in the United Kingdom by United Kingdom-based venture capital organisations of £110 million in 1982, £166 million in 1983 and £228 million in 1984. Comparable figures for 1985 are not yet available, but independent venture capital funds are reported to have raised total funds of £273 million against £193 million in 1984.

In 1984 approximately a quarter of total investment supported start ups or other early stage financings. In addition, direct investment by individuals under the business expansion scheme is providing significant amounts of equity finance for small firms.

Manufacturing Industry (Employment Prospects)

67. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Paymaster General when he will next meet the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the prospects for employment in manufacturing industries.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: All the Ministers in my Department meet officials and members of the Confederation of British Industry frequently to discuss various aspects of employment, economic and industrial policy. I have no plans for a meeting on this specific subject in the near future.

Job Creation Schemes

70. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his policy for job creation schemes for people over 50 years of age; and what is the present number of such people now on such schemes.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to part 3.7 of volume 11 of the White Paper "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89" (Cmnd. 9702) which sets out the policy of the Department's employment measures. Statistics on the number of people over 50 benefiting from the employment measures could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Youth Wages

73. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Paymaster General what was the level of youth wages in the United Kingdom as a percentage of adult wages (a) in 1979 and (b) the latest figures available.

Mr. Lang: The latest available information is as follows:

Gross weekly earnings of full-time young employees as a percentage of those of full-time adult employees

GB

	*Boys	Girls†
April 1979	39·7	58·1
April 1985	35·6	51·6

Source: New Earnings Survey.

* Full-time males aged under 18 as a percentage of full-time males aged 21 and over.

† Full-time females aged under 18 as a percentage of full-time females aged 18 and over.

Wage Levels

75. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Paymaster General what has been the change in wage levels for the top 20 per cent. of workers since 1979 compared with the bottom 20 per cent.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Between April 1979 and April 1985 the level of gross weekly earnings exceeded by the top 20 per cent. of full-time adult employees increased by 97 per cent. for men and by 108 per cent. for women. Over the same period the level below which the earnings of the bottom 20 per cent. of full-time adults lay increased by 79 per cent. for men and by 86 per cent. for women.

Wage Statistics

Mr. Yeo asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the number of full-time workers who have a gross wage of less than £140 per week.

Mr. Lang: About 6·3 million full-time adult employees in April 1985.

Fire Brigades (Rights of Entry)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to introduce legislation to increase the rights of entry of local fire brigades into premises controlled by the Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No.

Members' Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available, for each right hon. and hon. Member, the arithmetic mean in days that his Department took to reply to letters.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. However, a sample survey taken for all replies dispatched in the month of March shows that the average time taken to reply was 14 working days from the date of receipt of the letter. If the hon. Member is concerned about a delay on a particular case, I would be very willing to look into the matter.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the analysis of statistics collected to monitor the promotion of the code of good practice on the employment of disabled people.

Mr. Lang: Statistical and other information monitoring the promotion of the code of good practice on the employment of disabled people is collected by the Manpower Services Commission's disablement advisory service. Quarterly returns show that the disablement advisory service teams are promoting the code to employers in their areas by a variety of means, including presentations to individuals and groups of employers, mailshot exercises, and local press and broadcast coverage. In many parts of the country, considerable help is given by local committees for the employment of disabled people. So far, well over 60,000 copies of the code have been distributed to employers and others. Promotion of the code will continue to be a priority task for the disablement advisory service.

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General what results he has so far received from the monitoring of employers' reactions to the code of good practice on the employment of disabled people.

Mr. Lang: Indications so far are that employers welcome the code, like its style, and find it easy to use. Employers are using it both as a reference document and as a programme for action. When the code was launched in November 1984, it was recognised that employers had to be given time to turn the code's guidance into actual practice in the workplace. An in-depth evaluation of the extent to which employers are making use of the code will begin later this year.

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General when he expects the Manpower Services Commission to report on the further research it is carrying out on ways in which disabled people might be encouraged to register as disabled; and who is represented on the working party established to do this.

Mr. Lang: I expect to receive by the end of April the Manpower Services Commission's proposal for research into questions related to the quota scheme. Subject to looking at the details of these proposals I expect results to be available in the second half of 1987. The National Advisory Council on the employment of disabled people and also members of the commission's working group which proposed the research will be consulted about its design and its results.

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General what is the latest information available on how many employers are subject to the disabled persons quota; of these, what percentages meet the quota; what percentages were issued with permits within the last 12 months and what percentages were issued with bulk permits; and what percentages were below their quota but had not been issued with permits.

Mr. Lang: On 1 June 1985, the latest date for which information is available, 35,481 employers were subject to the provisions of the quota of which 28·1 per cent. employed the full quota of registered disabled people. A further 52·7 per cent. of this total were below quota but had been issued with permits during the previous 12 months, 52·1 per cent. with bulk permits. The remaining 19·2 per cent. of employers were below quota and had not been issued with permits. However, these were not necessarily breaking the law unless they had engaged other than registered disabled people in the period.

Mr. Ashley asked the Paymaster General which organisations applied for funding under the scheme announced in April 1985 established to encourage voluntary organisations to assist disabled people in finding and retaining employment; and which received funding and for how much.

Mr. Lang: Twenty three voluntary organisations have applied for funding under the pilot employment initiatives for disabled people scheme. Of these, three applications to date have been approved in principle by the Manpower Services Commission, and others are under consideration. No contracts have yet been finalised. Applications are treated as confidential until contracts are agreed.

Noise Levels

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General what information he has available on the exposure risks for high-noise levels generated from the industrial and commercial use of motor mowers, chain saws, circular saws and other power tools.

Mr. Trippier: Noise levels produced by power tools at the operator position vary considerably, depending on the individual machine, method of use and position of the operator. For the specific machines mentioned, levels generally exceed 90 dB(A). Risk of hearing damage depends on the adequacy of any ear protection used and the length of exposure.

Co-operatives

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what he intends to do to seek to encourage the growth of co-operatives.

Mr. Trippier: Co-operatives can benefit from a number of schemes introduced by the Government to help and encourage small businesses. In addition, the Co-operative Development Agency, which is sponsored by our Department, seeks to stimulate the growth of co-operatives by providing help and advice to co-operatives and to people wishing to set up such enterprises. The number of co-operatives has increased from less than 500 in 1982 to over 1,200 in 1985.

Job Losses

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General what is his latest figure for the number of jobs that have been lost in (a) manufacturing, (b) shipbuilding, (c) engineering, (d) textiles and (e) construction in (i) the north, (ii) the north-west, (iii) Scotland, (iv) Wales and (v) Great Britain since 1979.

Mr. Lang: Information about job gains and job losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

The following table gives, for the industries and areas specified, the net changes in employment between September 1979 and September 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available). Separate estimates are available for the shipbuilding and engineering industries only at national level. At regional level they are included in the metal goods, engineering and vehicles industries (division 3 of the 1980 standard industrial classification). Regional estimates for the textiles (including man-made fibres) industry are not available.

Ethnic Minorities (Entrepreneurial Skills)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Paymaster General what steps he is taking to promote a growth in entrepreneurial skills amongst the ethnic minority population in the inner cities.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986]: Our Department, through the Manpower Services Commission, is already involved in enterprise training for the ethnic minority population in the inner cities. The commission is currently planning over 100 courses for the disadvantaged in 1986, each of which will probably cater for the needs of 12 to 16 trainees, and these courses will include many members of the ethnic minority population. At my request the commission is now consideration other proposals.

The Government are in the process of setting up eight inner city task forces to help tackle all the unemployment problems faced by residents in these areas. We and the task forces will aim to promote entrepreneurial skills among residents, including members of ethnic minority groups.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Shops Bill [Lords]

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the hon. Member for Wokingham, as representing the Church Commissioners, if the Church Commissioners will make it their policy to dispose of their shareholdings in all companies which have indicated an intention to take advantage of the provisons contained in the Shops Bill/Lords]; and if he will make a statement.

Sir William van Straubenzee: The Church Commissioners cannot anticipate what action they might wish to take following enactment of legislation that is still under consideration by Parliament. The hon. Member will be aware of the strength of feeling expressed by the General Synod and church people in respect of the provisons of this Bill.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Criminal Trials (Corroborated Evidence)

Mr. Best asked the Attorney-General whether he has received any representations concerning the use of the uncorroboated evidence of accomplices in criminal trials in Northern Ireland; whether the practice of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland in this respect is the same as that of the Director of Public Prosecutions for England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have received or seen a number of expressions of view on this matter. Many of them have clearly been founded on the quite erroneous belief that there is a difference, as regards the use of accomplice evidence, between the law and practice in Northern Ireland and the law and practice in England and Wales. Since that belief may be held more widely, it is desirable that I should take this opportunity to state publicly and categorically that it is indeed erroneous, to explain once more what the law and practice is on both sides of the Irish Sea, and to put this whole matter in the correct perspective.

As I explained in the answer which I gave on 24 October 1983 to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer)—and I shall repeat the exact words which I used then—the law in England and Wales and Northern Ireland is the same. In both jurisdictions, where an accomplice gives evidence for the prosecution, it is the duty of the judge to warn the jury that, although they may convict on his evidence, it is dangerous to do so unless it is corroborated. This is an old rule, well-recognised and rigidly applied, and it now has the force of a rule of law. A precisely similar rule applies where a judge is trying a case without a jury. The judge must warn himself that, although he may convict on the evidence of an accomplice, it is dangerous to do so unless it is corroborated. subject to these rules, the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is admissible in law and the tribunal of fact has the right to convict upon it.

The practice of the prosecuting authorities in deciding whether to mount a prosecution based on the evidence of an accomplice is also the same in Northern Ireland as it is in England and Wales. The practice of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland is as follows.

When the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary has evidence of terrorist offences it is his duty to put that evidence, and the full facts surrounding it, before the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland. This is the position irrespective of whether the evidence is that of an accomplice who is willing to testify against his co-participants or whether it is evidence of any other nature.

The director must then consider whether, on the evidence, there is a reasonable prospect of a conviction. That is to say, he must decide whether in relation to an identifiable person there is credible evidence of an offence which the prosecution can adduce before a court and upon which an impartial tribunal of fact, properly directed in accordance with the law, may reasonably be expected to find the offence proved beyond reasonable doubt.

Where the testimony of an accomplice is presented to him, the Director will, in order to decide whether it is a sufficiently credible basis upon which to institute proceedings, look for corroboration. A definition of corroboration in law was given by Lord Reading C.J. in R v Baskerville (1916) 2KB 658 in the following terms: "evidence of corroboration must be independent testimony which affects the accused by connecting or tending to connect him with the crime. In other words, it must be evidence which implicates him, that is which confirms in some material particular not only the evidence that the crime has been committed but also that the defendant committed it."

However, the term "corroboration" is often used in a looser sense to mean other supporting evidence which, though not amounting to corroboration in law, may support the testimony of the accomplice in that, while it does not implicate a particular accused, it does tend to show that the accomplice is a truthful witness.

Both in England and Wales and in Northern Ireland the decision of the Director whether or not to proceed in reliance on the evidence of an accomplice is approached on exactly the same basis. Neither Director regards himself as bound by a rigid rule or practice on the matter: his decision depends on the circumstances of the particular case. In respect of corroboration in its strict legal sense, there is no general practice whereby corroboration is regarded as essential. On the other hand, the absence of such corroboration might be a decisive factor against proceedings in a particular case. If there is no corroboration in the strict sense, however, the availability of other cogent supporting evidence becomes an important factor. In a case where there is no corroboration at all, either in the strict sense or in the looser sense of supporting evidence, it is very unlikely that a prosecution will be instituted.

It is sometimes suggested that, whatever may be the formal position as to the caution which a court must exercise in approaching the evidence of an accomplice, the fact that terrorist offences in Northern Ireland are tried by a judge sitting without a jury renders it impossible for that caution to be properly exercised, with the result that the standard of justice which is in fact applied in such cases falls short of the standard which would be applied in comparable cases in England and Wales. Nothing could be further from the truth. The care with which the Northern Ireland judges approach the evidence of accomplices has been demonstrated in numerous cases and was illustrated vividly by the judgment which the Lord Chief Justice, Lord Lowry, gave on 26 October 1983 in the case of R v Gibney and others. That judgment explained and exemplified the scrupulous care taken by the courts to ensure that nobody is convicted except on proof beyond reasonable doubt. I referred to that judgment in the answer which I gave in this House on 14 November 1983 to the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) and, as I then said I would do, I arranged for a transcript of it to be placed in the Library of the House. I recommend that all those who may be tempted to criticise the attitude of the Northern Ireland judges should read it to see for themselves the care with which accomplice evidence is examined and assessed.

A further illustration of this may be found in the statistics of acquittals in cases involving accomplice evidence. In respect of trials on indictment for scheduled offences where evidence was given by an accomplice the position for the years 1983 to 1985 is as follows:

Number of trials	4	4	3
Number of persons convicted or pleading guilty	55	26	41
Number of persons acquitted	13	46	41

In addition, the convictions of 14 of the persons tried in 1983 were quashed on appeal to the Court of Appeal in 1984. It should also be remembered that, if a person is convicted on indictment of a scheduled offence, he has an automatic right, by virtue of section 7(6) of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978, to appeal against conviction and sentence to the Northern Ireland Court of Appeal. Thus each case can, in effect, be heard twice and be considered by four judges.

The impression is also sometimes given, and sometimes believed by some persons, that the trial of persons accused of terrorist offences on the basis of the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices is a routine and frequent occurrence in the courts of Northern Ireland. As I have explained, the use of such evidence is perfectly legitimate and it is indeed the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland to have recourse to it whenever he considers that, in accordance with the criteria which I have described, it is in the public interest that a prosecution should be instituted and pursued on that basis. I make it clear that he has my full authority and support for his practice in this respect. But the number of cases in which such evidence has actually been relied on represents a very small proportion of the total number of cases involving scheduled offences which have come before the Diplock courts. The relevant statistics for the last three years are as follows:

Number of persons tried on indictment for scheduled offences	627	514	725
Total number of persons pleading guilty or convicted in such trials	569	439	574
Total number of persons tried in such trials where evidence was given by an accomplice	68	72	82
Total number of persons pleading guilty or convicted in such trials where evidence was given by an accomplice	55	26	41

As I have earlier noted, 14 of the 55 persons who were convicted in 1983 in trials where evidence had been given by accomplices had their convictions quashed on appeal in 1984.

Public Order Act 1936

Mr. Soley asked the Attorney-General how many people have been referred to him for prosecution for offences under section 5A of the Public Order Act 1936; and how many have been prosecuted since 1979.

The Attorney-General: The number of persons reported to me for this offence cannot be accurately ascertained except at disproportionate cost. However, I am writing today to the hon. Member about this matter. Fifty-nine people have appeared before the courts between 1 January 1979 and 19 March 1986 for an offence under section 5A Public Order Act 1936 or conspiracy to commit an offence under section 5A. There are at present prosecutions outstanding in respect of five persons.

WALES

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list those local authorities in Wales whose latest estimate of 1985-86 expenditure levels are below those on which grant-related poundage levels were based; and what representations he has received on this matter;

(2) whether he estimates that any Welsh district councils will end the 1985-86 financial year outside the expenditure target he set;

(3) whether the settlement working group at its meeting on Monday 10 March considered those district councils whose rate support grant for 1986-87 was based on the likelihood that they would overspend in 1985-86; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Three district and two county councils budgeted to spend over their expenditure target in 1985-86. Only one authority, Ynys Môn, has so far indicated to the Welsh Office that it expects its expenditure for the year to be within target. Revised expenditure estimates will be submitted to the department shortly, but the actual level of spending incurred by any council will not be known until accounts for the year have been finalised.

In relation to 1986-87, the expenditure base for grant-related poundages has been determined on the basis of councils' own budgets for 1985-86 as set out in the first supplementary report for that year. My hon. Friend has written to my right hon. Friend about the position in Ynys Môn and, as was explained to him, this decision was endorsed by the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance and we do not propose to change it.

The expenditure base for 1987-88 has yet to be determined. It was the subject of discussion at the settlement working group meeting on 10 March and will be considered further in conjunction with other aspects of the 1987-88 settlement.

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to increase the guarantee price for wool this year to Welsh sheep producers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The wool guarantee price level for 1986 is currently being considered. Interested parties are being consulted and an announcement will be made in due course.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mergers

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to seek to reduce the length of time taken by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in considering mergers referred to it.

Mr. Howard: The six-month period specified in the legislation is described as a maximum, although it can be extended by one period of three months. Collecting and evaluating the evidence is a complex process and it is important that the commission has sufficient time to do justice to all the aspects of a case. But I am prepared to consider whether there are circumstances in which the commission might be asked to report in a shorter period.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, when evaluating the competitive position of proposed mergers, what criteria he uses to evaluate the international context and, in particular, the competitive position of United Kingdom companies in overseas markets; and if he will define the international context referred to in his answer of 3 March to the hon. Member for Northampton, South (Mr. Morris) Official Report, columns 40-41.

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, South (Mr. Morris) on 3 March, Official Report, column 41, how he defines the international context in applying merger and competition policy criteria to the examination of take over bids involving companies whose markets are largely overseas.

Mr. Howard: The market share test in the merger control legislation is expressed in terms of the supply of goods or services within the United Kingdom. However, our mergers policy recognises that in some cases it is necessary to have regard to the international context. This can take a variety of forms, depending on the circumstances of particular cases. Imports may be a competitive factor within the United Kingdom market: or a reduction of competition in the United Kingdom market may have to be weighed against advantages in terms of a merged company's competitive position in international markets.

British Publishers (Piracy)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last made representations to the authorities in Taiwan about the piracy there of the works of British publishers; what further steps he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: It is not possible for the Government to make representations direct to the authorities in Taiwan, which the United Kingdom does not recognise. Taiwan has, however, recently introduced a new copyright law which will protect foreign works if they are registered in Taiwan, provided that the country of which the authors of those works are nationals gives reciprocal copyright protection. To ensure eligibility of works of United Kingdom authors for registration in Taiwan the United Kingdom made an Order in Council on 18 November 1985 providing the necessary protection in the United Kingdom for works originating in Taiwan. No further action is contemplated unless there is evidence that the new Taiwan law is failing to protect United Kingdom works against copyright piracy.

Board of Trade

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what anniversary of the Board of Trade is currently being celebrated by his Department; and in what manner.

Mr. Butcher: The year 1986 is the 200th anniversary of the Order in Council under which the Committee of Privy Council for Board of Trade was created in its present form. To commemorate the occasion the Department is being honoured by a visit from Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh. In addition, the celebrations include a service of commemoration which took place on 28 February, a meeting of the Board of Trade, a programme of lectures related to the work of the Department, and the publication of the history of the Board of Trade, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when was the most recent meeting of the Board of Trade; who attended; what was the purpose of the meeting; and what business was transacted.

Mr. Butcher: The last meeting of the Board of Trade, when the President, the right hon. Henry Labouchere and the Parliamentary Secretary, the right hon. Earl Granville were present, was in 1851. There was no formal agenda; day to day business of the Board of Trade was discussed.

English Industrial Estates Corporation

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the normal date for publication of English Estates' annual report and accounts; and why the report and accounts for 1984-85 have not yet been published.

Mr. Channon [pursuant to the reply, 14 March 1986, c. 601]: English Estates would normally publish its accounts by the August following the end of the relevant financial year. However, last year, before its accounts were ready for publication, the Comptroller and Auditor General qualified the accounts of the Welsh and Scottish Development Agencies as regards the treatment of property valuations in them. The Public Accounts Committee has been considering this issue and I understand that its report is due soon.

As the same issue arises in the case of English Estates 1984-85 accounts, its publication has been delayed. They will be published as soon as the discussions now under way about the most appropriate treatment in them of property valuations are satisfactorily concluded.

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the funding of the English Industrial Estates Corporation.

Mr. Channon: The 1985 Industrial Development Act introduced a more commercial system of funding the EIEC with effect from 1 April 1986, and I have now agreed the arrangements for the 1986-87 financial year under this new system. In the future, English Estates will use the income from rents and the sale of assets such as factories and land to fund its development programmes and my Department will contribute a fixed amount of grant-in-aid each year.

The chairman of English Estates has confirmed that under these new arrangements he is confident that English Estates will be able to spend at least £32 million on new development in the assisted areas next year and continue the redevelopment of Chatham dockyard without affecting the programme in the assisted areas.

Consistent with the 20 per cent. increase in the provision for EIEC announced by my right hon. and learned Friend last November, my Department will contribute £12·6 million grant-in-aid towards this development programme and the balance will be raised by English Estates itself from rents and sales.

These new arrangements should allow English Estates to continue its development programme in the assisted areas without any cutback from the average level of recent years.

Enriched Uranium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of Friday 7 March, to what uses the enriched uranium will be put when returned to the United Kingdom from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics under the economic and industrial co-operation programme.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply.

On return, the enriched uranium will be fabricated into fuel elements for use in the UK generating boards' power stations.

Land Rover

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the implications of a possible sale of Land Rover to General Motors for the prospects for an order worth approximately £50 million from the Australian Government for Land Rover vehicles.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Guinness-Distillers Merger

Mr. Sims asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the Government's consideration of the proposed revised Guinness-Distillers merger.

The Prime Minister: The decision on the revised proposals for a Guinness-Distillers merger will be taken by my hon. Friend the Minister for Information Technology, who will have regard to the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading, and the views of other interested Government Departments, including the Scottish Office and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

South Korea (Book Piracy)

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if, prior to her proposed meeting with Mr. Chun Doo Hwan of South Korea, she will raise with the Government of that country the question of piracy in South Korea of books published by British publishers; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom raised the issue of improved protection in Korea for its intellectual property at the Anglo-Korean bilateral economic policy consultations in Seoul last month. We were informed that the Koreans were preparing legislation on copyright to go to the National Assembly this year and that it was their intention to accede to one of the international copyright conventions in 1987. We shall continue to monitor the situation and the matter will be raised in the course of President Chun Doo Hwan's visit.

Mr. Olof Palme

Mr. Rooker asked the Prime Minister if she has paid an official visit to the Swedish embassy to sign the book of remembrance for Olof Palme.

The Prime Minister: Yes, on 3 March.

Mr. Winnick asked the Prime Minister why she did not herself attend the funeral of the Swedish Prime Minister; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I would have wished to attend Mr. Palme's funeral had it not conflicted with a very long-standing engagement in this country. Instead, my right hon. and noble Friend, the Lord President of the Council attended the funeral as the representative of the British Government.

I shall be reading the lesson at a memorial service for Mr. Palme later this week.

ENERGY

Sellafield

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what was the isotope and chemical form of the isotope responsible for the exposure of the individual worker at Sellafield who received in February one year's permissible radiation dose;

(2) what was the measurement of activity on the personal air sampler of the worker at Sellafield who received in February one year's permissible radiation dose; and what was the sampling rate of the instrument at that time;

(3) what was the critical organ exposed in the body of the worker at Sellafield in February who received his annual permissible exposure; and what was the estimate of the dose to this organ in milliseiverts;

(4) what will be the lifetime cumulative dose to the lungs of the worker, in millisieverts, at Sellafield in February, who received one year's permissible dose of radiation;

(5) what is the assessment of the whole body dose, effective dose equivalent, in millisieverts received by the worker at Sellafield in February who received one year's permissible dose of radiation.

Mr. Goodlad: I have asked the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc to write to the hon. Member with the detailed information that he has requested.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the hon. and learned Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) on 11 February, Official Report, columns 394-95, what representations he has received on the draft guidelines concerning representations made by right hon. and hon. Members in immigration cases; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: My hon. and learned Friend and I have had meetings with, and have received written comments from, a number of right hon. and hon. Members from both sides of the House.

We remain convinced that the working of the present system creates serious strains which could destroy it if numbers continue to increase rapidly, and that it is therefore in the interests of all concerned to find means of improvement.

The main points which emerged from these consultations concerned the proposals about contacts with the ports, the need to provide for right hon. and hon. Members to act for a constituency Member when he or she is not available, the references in the draft guidelines to temporary admission and detention, and the need to emphasise that persons who marry while on temporary admission should be required to return to their own counry to obtain entry clearance.

In the light of the points raised I am today placing in the Library revised draft guidelines. The principal change reflects the wish of a number of right hon. and hon. Members that they should still be able to ring my private office and that of my hon. and learned Friend to ask for the removal of a passenger to be deferred while representations are made and considered. Although I believe that many of the objections raised to the proposal for contacting the ports were misconceived, I am ready to see if the present arrangements can effectively be sustained for the future.

An opportunity will be provided for the House to debate the revised proposals before new guidelines become effective.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dependants of United Kingdom citizens were accepted for admission in the 12-month period from May 1980 to April 1981.

Mr. Waddington: The available information relates to the numbers subject to immigration control who were accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom. In the year ending March 1981, a total of 40,800 wives, children and other dependant relatives were accepted for settlement.

Draize Eye Test

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to find an alternative to the Draize eye irritancy test; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that a number of alternatives to the Draize eye test are currently being investigated, though there is not yet a proven non-sentiment alternative to this test. We shall shortly be issuing guidelines to researchers with the aim of ensuring that the test is used only where absolutely necessary and that any painful effects are reduced to a minimum.

Prisoners (Transfer)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what notice is given to (a) a prisoner and (b) a prisoner's relatives before a prisoner is moved or transferred.

Mr. Mellor: Where possible and where security considerations permit, a prisoner is given sufficient notice of a transfer to enable him to inform relatives by post. Where for any reason a prisoner has not had the opportunity to do this and he has a visiting order outstanding, he may ask on arrival at his new establishment for his prospective visitors to be immediately informed of his transfer by telephone at public expense. Where a visiting order is not outstanding, he is not allowed to have a telephone call made, but may be provided with a letter at public expense instead.

Prison Property (London)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present number of properties which are owned by his Department and let to prison officers working at each of the London prisons.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of occupied quarters are as follows:

	No.
Brixton	335
Holloway	159
Pentonville	221
Wandsworth	232
Wormwood Scrubs	320

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison properties at each of the London prisons have been sold in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: The information is as follows:

	Number of housing units sold
	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Brixton	—	—	30	—	1
Holloway	—	—	—	—	—
Pentonville	—	—	—	7	1
Wandsworth	—	—	1	—	8
Wormwood Scrubs	—	—	—	—	—

Probation Officers

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to restore the cuts in funding for training probation officers working in prisons effected in 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Funds will be available from 1 April 1986 for the training of probation officers working in prisons.

Citizenship

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for (a) registration with entitlement, (b) naturalisation and (c) registration of minors his Department received between (i) April 1983 and March 1984, (ii) April 1984 and March 1985 and (iii) April 1985 and the nearest available date.

Mr. Waddington: The numbers of applications received by type of application are:

Citizenship applications received

	Registration of adults	Naturalisation	Registration of minors
April 1983—March 1984	21,661	13,618	9,173
April 1984—March 1985	19,824	15,640	8,205
April 1985—February 1986	19,214	14,970	8,637

Notes:
(1) Registration figures include entitlement and non-entitlement registrations.
(2) The figures for 1985-86 are provisional and subject to verification at a year-end stock-take.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are currently in post in B4 division of his Department; how many of them work wholly on the processing of citizenship applications; (a) November 1985, (b) March 1985, (c) November 1984 and (d) June 1984, or the nearest available dates.

Mr. Waddington: The available information is:

Nationality Division Staff

Month	Staff in post	Staff working wholly on processing applications
March 1986	218·5	170·5
November 1985	220	169
March 1985	246	195
November 1984	263	215
June 1984	263·5	217

Notes:
(1) Part-time staff are reckoned at half a full-time post.
(2) The 1984 figures for staff working wholly on processing applications are estimates.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) applications and (b) grants of British citizenship have been made in each month since April 1985 for (i) naturalisation, (ii) registration with entitlement and (iii) registration of minors.

Mr. Waddington: The information available is as follows:

Applications Received and Granted

Month	Registration of Adults		Naturalisation		Registration of Minors
	Received	Granted	Received	Granted	Received	Granted
1985
April	1,818	1,669	1,432	1,221	838	847
May	1,592	1,308	1,350	970	857	663

Note:
(1) Registration figures include entitlement and non-entitlement registrations.
(2) The figures for applications received are provisional and subject to verification at a year-end stock-take.

Prisons (Suicides)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) suicides and (b) attempted suicides have taken place in Her Majesty's prisons during each of the last seven years.

Mr. Waddington: The number of prisoners adjudged by inquests as having committed suicide in prison custody and the number of prisoners recorded as having injured themselves with apparent suicidal attempt in England and Wales was as follows:

Year	Suicide	Non-fatal self injury with apparent suicidal intent
1979	21	250
1980	21	271
1981	16	214
1982	18	243
1983	†21	212
1984	†23	390
1985	‡21	*

* Not yet available.

† Including in each year one prisoner who died in an outside hospital as a result of a suicide attempt before his reception into prison custody.

‡ Inquest verdicts on 16 prisoners who died in custody during 1985 are still awaitedd; some of these are likely to be verdicts of suicide.

Magistrates Courts (Waiting Times)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the national information collection system described in circular HOC 67/1984 LCDTC (84)I can now indicate waiting times for cases to be heard in magistrates courts; and when he expects delays, broken down by types of offence, to be published.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her question on 17 February, at column 46.

Soviet Sailors

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what constraints are imposed by his Department on the ability of Soviet sailors to travel freely in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 20 January, at columns 7-8.

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 7 March, Official Report, column 30, if he will relax the criteria for admission to the United Kingdom of relatives of Vietnamese refugees settled here.

Mr. Waddington: In its response to the Home Affairs Committee's report on refugees the Government accepted the Committee's recommendation that the family reunion criteria should be relaxed in respect of a number of Vietnamese in camps in countries of temporary asylum. The Committee did not recommend, nor do the Government think it justified to propose, any more general relaxation of the normal criteria.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what evidence he decided to change the criteria for the admission to the United Kingdom of relatives of Vietnamese refugees settled here.

Mr. Waddington: It was decided to revert to the criteria applied to the relatives of all other refugees, with effect from May 1981 in the light of, among other factors, the United Kingdom's participation in the orderly departure programme from Vietnam, our wide-ranging commitments to refugees of many other nationalities, and to the admission of the spouses and minor children of others accepted for settlement in this country.

Prison Statistics

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on housing and construction costs on (a) Ashwell, (b) Her Majesty's prison, Welford road, (c) Her Majesty's prison, Gartree, (d) Glen Parva youth custody centre and (e) Stokenhall in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how many inmates there are at each institution.

Mr. Mellor: The following table shows expenditure by the Home Office on housing and new capital construction at the existing establishments mentioned during the period 1 March 1985 to 28 February 1986, and the number of inmates at each establishment on 7 March 1986:

	Housing	Construction	Inmate population
HM Prison Ashwell	1,397	1,125,633	365
HM Prison Leicester	7,403	15,767	424
HM Prison Gartree	4,787	59,762	306
HM Youth Custody and Remand Centre Glen Parva	Nil	12,262	729

HM prison Stocken, which opened in July 1985, is a new establishment, constructed by the Property Services Agency at an estimated cost of £12,751,000 for the prison and £2,510,000 for the associated staff housing. Expenditure incurred by the Property Services Agency and the Home Office during the period 1 February 1985 to 31 January 1986, the last 12-month period for which figures are available, totalled £861,379 on prison construction and £1,312,000 on housing. On 7 March 1986 Stocken's inmate population was 279.

Children and Young Persons Act 1933

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases have been brought to court under section 7 (2) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933; and how many orders have been made under that subsection in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member from Brent, South (Mr. Pavitt) on 13 March, at columns 534-35.

Civil Defence

Mr. Peter Rees asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is satisfied with the state of civil defence preparations in east Kent, in view of Dover's strategic position.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes. The county council has made excellent progress in implementing the 1983 regulations, and Dover has appointed its own part-time emergency planning officer.

Indictable Offences (Reading)

Sir Gerard Vaughan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many indictable offences were recorded in Reading in 1978 and in the latest year for which figures are available, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: The information collected centrally relates to police force areas and is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 2.4 and 2.5 of the issue for 1984, Cmnd. 9621) and Home Office "Statistical Bulletins" (table 6 of issue No. 4/86). Comparisons with years prior to 1980 can be misleading because of changes in the counting rules from the beginning of 1980. Thames Valley police force recorded 74,400 notifiable offences in 1980 and 109,100 in 1985.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of staffing requirements for the immigration service to deal with persons arriving at Waterloo station on trains using the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Waddington: No decisions have yet been taken about the methods by which immigration control will be exercised over passengers using the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of staffing requirements for the Metropolitan police as a result of increased traffic flow generated by passengers arriving at Waterloo on trains using the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the Metropolitan police have not so far considered what impact, if any, the Channel fixed link might have on traffic levels in the vicinity of Waterloo station or on their work load. The policing of the station itself is the responsibility of the British Transport police.

Drunk-driving

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the annual number of drivers (a) charged and (b) convicted of drunk driving offences in each year from 1970 to 1985; and how many breathalyser tests were carried out in each year in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: The available information for court proceedings and findings of guilt, relates to offences of driving and so on, after consuming alcohol and taking drugs, and is published annually in table 1 of "Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables". Information on findings of guilt over the past decade is also summarised in table 5 of Home Office "Statistical Bulletin" issue 28/85, "Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales 1984" and figures for earlier years are summarised in issue 23/81. Information on breath tests over the past decade is published in table 1 of Home Office "Statistical Bulletin" issue 18/85, "Statistics of Breath Tests, England and Wales, 1984"; earlier data are summarised in table 10 of Home Office "Statistical Bulletin" issue 23/81. Figures for 1985 will not become available until later this year.

French National Front

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that no French National Front member will be permitted to enter the United Kingdom for any reason; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: No.

EMPLOYMENT

Leeds (Interdepartmental Task Force)

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General whether he will announce the area in Leeds to be covered by the interdepartmental task force established following his statement of 6 February.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We have not yet finally settled the boundaries of the Leeds task force. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as we have finalised the area.

Parental Leave

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General which European Economic Community Governments have opposed the implementation of the European Economic Community draft directive on parental leave; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At the December Social Affairs Council of Ministers meeting which I attended, several member states apart from the United Kingdom indicated that they had difficulties with various aspects of the proposal. After a broad discussion, the Luxembourg President concluded that no agreement could be reached on the draft directive. Neither at this nor at any previous Council has a vote been taken.

YTS

Mr. Lawler asked the Paymaster General if he is satisfied with the progress being made in Bradford to provide sufficient places under the two-year YTS due to commence on 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. Progress in setting up two-year YTS in Bradford has been excellent. Already by 25 February, the latest date for which statistics are available, 92 per cent. of the required places were definitely or likely to be provided. Around 93 per cent. of basic places have been found, together with 86 per cent. of premium places, which are designed to help young people and parts of the country with special needs. The position is being regularly monitored.

Departmental Suppliers

Mr. Ottaway asked the Paymaster General what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: During the first 11 months of the current financial year to the end of February 1986 the average time taken in our Department's finance offices from receipt of an invoice from a supplier to dispatch of a payment has been five working days.

Job Release Schemes

Mr. Sayeed asked the Paymaster General if he will announce the results of the review of the rates of allowance payable under both the job release scheme and the part-time job release scheme.

Mr. Lang: Following our annual review of allowances, the rates payable under the full-time job release scheme from 7 April will be as follows:

For disabled men aged 60, 61, 62 and 63 (and for men who have joined the scheme aged 62 and 63) who are married with a dependent wife whose net income from all sources does not exceed £13 a week, £74·00 a week, taxable; for all others £60·65 a week, taxable.

For women aged 59 and men aged 64 who are married with a dependent spouse whose net income from all sources does not exceed £13 a week; £65·50 a week, tax free; and for all others £51·95 a week, tax free.

The part-time job release scheme will close on 30 May in order to concentrate resources on more effective forms of provision. None the less, the rates of allowances for those who have entered the scheme on or before that date will also be increased from 7 April as follows:

For disabled men aged 60 and 61 and men aged 62 and 63 who are married with a dependent wife whose net income from all sources does not exceed £13 a week; £42·35 a week taxable; for all others £35·15 a week, taxable.

For women aged 59 and men aged 64 who are married with a dependent spouse whose net income from all sources does not exceed £13 a week; £37·00 a week, tax free; for all others £30·10 a week, tax free.

TRANSPORT

Chemicals (Conveyance)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if picramic acid has been (a) approved as a dangerous substance that is permitted for conveyance by road and (b) classified for the purpose of assigning a hazard warning sign on transporting vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. There is no evidence that the substance is transported in quantity.

Railways (Punctuality)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the British Railways Board is taking to seek to improve the punctuality of express services.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a management matter for the board. I understand it is currently putting more resources into improving punctuality where it knows performance is poor.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received about British Rail service punctuality in the last 12 months.

Mr. David Mitchell: Separate records are not kept for representations on punctuality. On quality of service generally, I estimate that about 400 representations have been received over the last year.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Transport by what mechanism the Government plan to monitor the operation of the concession agreement with respect to the level of charges for the proposed fixed link to ensure that tunnel charges are not contrary to Her Majesty's Government's competition policy.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Director General of Fair Trading has a duty to keep under review and collect information about commercial activities in the United Kingdom in order to fulfil his functions under competition legislation. In addition, under the terms of the concession agreement, the concessionaires will be required to notify the intergovernmental commission of their tariffs at least 15 days before they come into force.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what study has been done by his Department to determine whether there would be sufficient spare capacity on underground trains at the two rush hours to take the projected level of Channel fixed link travellers; and what allowance was made for the probability that most of the additional travellers would be carrying one or more pieces of luggage.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail has commissioned transport consultants to examine access by international travellers to and from Waterloo. It has also consulted London Regional Transport. BR believes that the underground lines serving Waterloo can accommodate this new traffic. Underground trains at Waterloo are most heavily loaded from 8 am to 9 am but levels are around a third down on 1973 and BR does not envisage international trains arriving at Waterloo during this peak hour. Luggage handling is clearly a matter that will need to be taken into account by the operators.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what study has been made by his Department of the effect of a single terminal for Channel fixed link trains at Waterloo on traffic on Westminster bridge road, Westminster bridge, York road, Stamford street, Waterloo bridge, the Strand underpass, Waterloo road, and Baylis road disaggregated by time of day, day of week, month, type of vehicle, and speed of journey;

(2) what arrangements will be made for private car, taxi, coach and other set-down and pick-up provision (a) within the station boundaries and (b) in the Waterloo area that is bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames, as a result of the proposed Waterloo terminal for the Channel fixed link;

(3) what estimate he has of the effects of the proposed terminal at Waterloo of the Channel fixed link on existing parking facilities in the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames; what additional (a) on-street and (b) off-street parking provision will be introduced in the area for (i) coaches and (ii) other vehicles as a result; and whether this will be consequent on a survey of potential users;

(4) what information he has on the projected effects of a single central London terminal for Channel fixed link rail passengers upon traffic in the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames;

(5) what study has been made by his Department of the overall impact of all the additional vehicular traffic to be created by the proposed Channel tunnel terminal at Waterloo.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail's traffic consultants are assessing the numbers of private cars, taxis and coaches which will use Waterloo station when the new facilities are operational. They have identified a number of possible sites within the station area for parking and for setting down and picking up passengers. British Rail is discussing the possible impact on the local roads with Lambeth borough council.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will survey the attitudes of existing users of Waterloo to the proposed use of part of Waterloo station for passengers using the Channel fixed link and take account of the views expressed in formulating his policy towards the precise siting of the terminal;

(2) if he will undertake a study of the effects, broken down by time of day, day of week, and month, of the proposed new Channel fixed link passenger services on (a) the existing southern region rail service in general and (b) the south London line in particular.

Mr. David Mitchell: These are matters for British Rail. It is its normal procedure to explain new developments to its passengers and to the relevant transport users' consultative committees; and to invite their comments. It is also planning to undertake a major train planning exercise so that the new international services cause no disbenefit to existing passengers on Southern region.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what projections he has made, and based on what assumptions, of the number of rail passengers that would use the proposed Channel fixed link terminal at Waterloo at the commencement of the service, and in each of the 10 years thereafter;

(2) what is his estimate of the additional number of train journeys in and out of Waterloo which will be generated by Channel fixed link traffic, showing separately (a) late-night journeys, (b) early-morning journeys and (c) journeys to maintenance yards;

(3) what estimate he has of the expected number of Channel fixed link passengers who would use Waterloo east station by (a) time of day, (b) day of week and (c) month, in each of the first 10 years of operation of the new link.

Mr. David Mitchell: Traffic forecasts and service planning are matters for British Rail. Its proposals for through rail services are referred to in the consultation document it has sent to local authorities.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what new track British Rail proposes to lay at Waterloo station for the proposed terminal for the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: BR plans to lay new track on the north side of Waterloo station for the platforms serving international trains.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport who is to (a) own and (b) manage the proposed terminal at Waterloo for the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluation he has made of the costs and benefits of integrating the Channel link train passenger traffic with services to Gatwick and Heathrow via Victoria.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for British Rail to plan services and to develop investment proposals.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what information he as on the projected effects of a single central London terminal for Channel fixed link rail passengers over the following 10 years upon (a) the nature and costs of housing, (b) the level of hotel or hostel development, (c) shop rents and facilities and (d) the level of office development in the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road, and the River Thames;

(2) what estimate he has made of the effects of a single central London terminal for Channel fixed link rail passengers at Waterloo upon the population by household size and age, in the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames;

(3) what estimates he has made of the effects of the decision to locate a single central London terminal for the Channel fixed link rail passengers at Waterloo on the demand for housing, hotel and other use on the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames during the period of construction.

Mr. David Mitchell: These are matters for the local planning authority; BR is consulting them about its proposals. BR has met the authority and is providing them with appropriate information.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of staffing requirements for the transport police as a result of increased traffic flow generated by passengers arriving at Waterloo on trains using the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. British Transport police staffing requirements are a matter for the British Transport Police committee.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will request British Rail to revise its consultation document of 27 January so as to include specific costings.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is not British Rail's normal practice to provide this information in consultation douments and I see no reason to ask it to do so on this occasion.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will ask British Rail to publish its response to representations made by the London borough of Lambeth and local residents concerning the use of Waterloo station as the London terminal of the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a matter for BR.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to seek to remdve from the London boroûgh of Lambeth the power to control developments arising from the proposed use of Waterloo station as the London terminal for the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Government have no such plans except to the extent that development by British Rail or the operational use of its land will be included in the hybrid Bill.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to oblige British Rail to take to reduce the noise and environmental impact of the proposed Waterloo terminal of the Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: I know that British Rail will take all reasonable measures to reduce noise and environmental impacts but I do not intend to impose any special obligations on it on these matters. Individuals or bodies affected by any noise or environmental nuisance will be able to make representations to the local authority or to a magistrates' court under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 or the Public Health Act 1936 in the normal way.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received an application from British Rail for works to be carried out in Stewart's lane in the vicinity of Waterloo station.

Mr. David Mitchell: BR is considering the local planning authority about these works. Authority will be sought for them in the hybrid Bill.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has of the total cost of widening the viaduct at Carlisle lane.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail estimates the cost of widening the viaduct from the station to Carlisle lane would be around £13 million.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the form and scope of the intended consultations on British Rail's arrangements for a Channel fixed link terminal and on the identity of those who will conduct them.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail has prepared a consultation document which includes information about its proposal to develop facilities for international travellers at Waterloo station. British Rail is consulting and meeting the relevant local authorities, and it intends to meet local residents as well. British Rail's director, Channel tunnel, is acting on behalf of the board in these consultations.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has of the total cost of all alterations and additions that British Rail wish to make within the boundary of Waterloo station in connection with the proposed Channel fixed link terminal.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail at present envisages that it will need to spend up to around £45 million at Waterloo station on work to provide new international passenger services.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what studies he has made of possible terminals for (a) day passenger, (b) sleeper and (c) freight traffic generated by the Channel fixed link;

(2) what studies he has made of the effects of dispersing Channel fixed link traffic to several terminals in the London area;

(3) what role was played by commercial or economic costs in deciding upon the Waterloo terminal for the Channel fixed link;

(4) what account was taken, in considering which of the central London terminals might be suitable as a terminal for cross-Channel passengers, of the results of detailed studies of land use in the central London sections of the inner London boroughs potentially affected.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for British Rail to propose the location of its London terminus facilities for through services to the continent and to consult affected interests. The necessary approval will be given by the hybrid Bill. British Rail has examined 13 potential sites and has concluded that the most practical solution is to develop a single passenger terminus at Waterloo and to use its depot at Willesden for through freight operations. It is aware that all its capital expenditure on through rail services must be on a strictly commercial basis.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that the roads infrastructure in the north of England, especially that part servicing ports, is rapidly improved to ensure that the north is in no way disadvantaged by increased investment in roads in the south-east planned in connection with the projected Channel fixed link.

Mr. Ridley: Improved national road links to the Channel ports are necessary in order to meet increasing traffic needs irrespective of whether the fixed link is built. The needs of national roads throughout the country and our priorities for expenditure are regularly reviewed. Allocation of resources for new local authority roads are, similarly, based on the needs of traffic. I take great care to see that the north-west is not "disadvantaged".

Drink-Driving

Mr. Gordon Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the annual figure, in each year from 1970 to 1985, of traffic fatalities in England and Wales; and what proportions were caused by drunk-driving.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The figures are given in "Road Accidents Great Britain 1984" (table 3, page 51), a copy of which is in the Library. Causes of accidents are not recorded, but an article on pages 25-29 of the same publication concludes that in 1984 one in four deaths were in accidents where a driver or pedestrian had consumed excess alcohol.

Mr. Gordon Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the total cost in the United Kingdom of drunk-driving fatalities and injuries in each year since 1980.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Precise figures are not available. Background information on the cost of road casualties and on the availability of data on drinking and driving in Great Britain is included in "Road Accidents Great Britain 1984". A copy is in the Library. Information from Northern Ireland is collected in a slightly different form.

A broad assessment of the approximate costs of fatalities and injuries in accidents involving drunken drivers in the United Kingdom for the years 1980-1984 is as follows:

£ million 1985 prices

	fatalities	injuries
1980	235	55
1981	225	50
1982	245	55
1984	185	45

Casualty data for 1985 are not yet available.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department is sponsoring any research into drinking and driving.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The Department of Transport continues to support research into the problems of drink and driving. The work is undertaken by the Department's Transport and Road Research Laboratory. The relevant programme is being placed in the Library of the House.

Meteorological Services

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proportion of the cost of the meteorological services for the civil aviation industry are met by British civil aviation carriers and foreign carriers, respectively;

(2) what percentages of the charges for meteorological services for the civil aviation industry are borne by private aviation in the United Kingdom;

(3) if he will make a statement as to the cost per civil aircraft per annum for meteorological services in the United Kingdom; and what information he has as to how this compares with the costs borne by European carriers in France, Germany and Italy.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Coastguard (Humber)

Mr. John Townend asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the level of coastguard services on the east coast in the Humber area.

Mr. Ridley: Yes. However, early next year it is planned to re-locate Her Majesty's Coastguard's maritime rescue sub-centre Humber from Spurn Point to Bridlington. It is planned to take over as the regional headquarters from Her Majesty's Coastguard Great Yarmouth which will be retained as a sub-centre with no loss of operational responsibility. It is hoped to complete the move before Easter 1987, by which time some reorganisation of regional facilities will also have been completed. The overall effect will be a much improved and efficient search and rescue service on the east coast without any change in staff levels.

DEFENCE

Ammunition Contracts

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries which tender for his Department's ammunition contracts; and what information he has as to which countries invite tenders from United Kingdom ammunition producing companies.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In recent years, tenders for Ministry of Defence ammunition contracts have been invited from Austria, Belgium, Federal Republic of Germany, France, Greece, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Sweden and the United States of America. A substantial number of countries invite tenders from United Kingdom ammunition companies. However, it has been the consistent policy of successive Governments not to disclose particulars of defence sales business with other countries, as these are matters of commercial confidentiality.

Manpower

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn on 6 March, Official Report, column 264-65, if he will give the manpower shortage of (a) officers and (b) other ranks, both numerically and as a percentage of the whole in (i) the Royal Armoured Corps, (ii) the Royal Artillery, (iii) the seaman branch of the Royal Navy and (iv) the Royal Marines.

Mr. Lee: For security reasons I am not able to give numerical details of the level of any under or over-manning in particular areas of the services. However, the percentage shortfall-excess against the trained requirement for the crops and branches in question is as follows:

	Officers per cent.	Other ranks per cent.
Royal Armoured Corps	−2·8	+2·2
Royal Artillery	−4·2	+1·4
Royal Naval Seaman Officers	−2·2	—
Royal Naval Ratings—Operations Branch	—	−0·4
Royal Marines	−3·9	−2·7

Notes

1. The figures all relate to 31 December 1985, except for the Royal Marines, which relate to 1 December 1985.

2. There is no "Seaman Branch" for Royal Naval ratings. The figures shown are for the "Operations Branch", which is broadly equivalent to the seaman specialisation for officers.

Army Boots and Combat Smocks

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the replacement programme for DMS boots and DPM combat smocks for the Army and the Territorial Army; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The programme for the replacement of the Boot DMS by the Boot Combat High (BCH) was completed in January 1985. All male personnel in the Regular and Territorial Army are therefore in possession of the new boot, but the WRAC continue to wear the Boot DMS pending development of a suitable ankle-boot alternative.

As far as the issue of Smocks Combat DPM is concerned, all Regular servicemen are already in receipt of their full entitlement; issues to the TA should be completed within the next six months. Service women are currently issued with combat smocks only when deployed to field force units.

Military Sales

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the existing United Kingdom-United States memorandum of understanding on military sales expires; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The 1975 United States-United Kingdom defence procurement memorandum of understanding, which had, originally, a 10-year life, was extended for a further year until 1 January 1986.

A new co-operation MOU, with similar terms to the earlier one, was signed in December 1985 and will remain valid until 1 January 1995.

The new MOU is being printed and a copy will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence what rights have been granted by Her Majesty's Government to the United States Government, or their agencies, to investigate research work in the United Kingdom which might have a military application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: None.

Crown Proceedings Act

Mr. Churchill asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to publish the results of the review of the Crown Proceedings Act as it relates to service personnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The review of section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 has not yet been completed. As soon as it has and decisions have been taken an announcement will be made.

Meteorological Services

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out in the Official Report, in tabular form, the cost to the civil aviation industry of meteorological services for each of the last five years.

Mr. Lee: Charges raised by the Meteorological Office against airlines and other civil aviation companies for services supplied directly to them in the financial years shown:

1982-83	—
1983-84	2,280
1984-85	3,763
1985-86*	16,350

* To date.

Charges raised by the Meteorological Office against the Civil Aviation Authority for services requested for national and International Civil Aviation Organisation purposes in the financial years shown.

1981-82	12,663,268
1982-83	13,144,275
1983-84	14,263,668
1984-85	15,426,487
1985-86*	14,814,661

* To date.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what charges for meteorological services have been made in each of the last five years for the British shipping industry.

Mr. Lee: Charges raised against the United Kingdom off shore oil industry, which includes some services to shipping used by that industry came to:

Financial year	£
1981-82	998,000
1982-83	1,077,000
1983-84	1,314,000
1984-85	1,203,000
1985-86*	1,300,000

* To date.

The element included in the above for shipping is not separately identifiable. However, charges raised by the Meteorological Office for services to the British shipping industry came to:

Financial year	£
1981-82	36,600
1982-83	10,100
1983-84	18,000
1984-85	32,000
1985-86*	63,200

* To date.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost to the civil aviation industry for meteorological services in the year 1986-87.

Mr. Lee: Charges raised by the Meteorological Office for services supplied directly to airlines and other civil aviation companies is estimated to be in the region of £20,000. The estimated cost of services to be supplied to the Civil Aviation Authority to meet its national and international requirements is £15,000,000.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the international nuclear disarmament negotiations where the United Kingdom is (a) currently playing a full negotiating role and (b) not directly involved but is regularly in contact with the negotiating parties.

Mr. Renton: The only international nuclear disarmament negotiations in progress at present are the bilateral United States/Soviet nuclear and space talks at Geneva. We are in regular contact with both parties.

SCOTLAND

Surgical Operations

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the numbers awaiting surgical operations in each of the health board areas in Scotland and the number completed during the past year for which figures are available.

Mr. John MacKay: The numbers on waiting lists of surgical specialties as at 30 September 1984 and the number of cases operated on during the year 1984 were as follows:

	Numbers on waiting lists of surgical specialties	Number of cases operated on (including day cases)
Argyll and Clyde	7,534	19,004
Ayrshire and Arran	4,610	21,642
Borders	238	3,547

Western Isles	43	1,317
All Scotland	77,697	357,602

Forestry Commission

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures to show for the years 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 the number of (a) industrial workers and (b) non-industrial workers employed by the Forestry Commission in (i) Scotland, (ii) England and (iii)

Wales; and if he will also express the figures as a percentage of the total Forestry Commission industrial work force and non-industrial work force.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is as follows:

Industrial Workers

Year ended 31 March	Scotland	Percentage of work-force	England	Percentage of work-force	Wales	Percentage of work-force	Total
1981	2,580	44·5	2,153	37·3	1,052	18·2	5,785
1982	2,410	44·2	2,050	37·6	990	18·2	5,450
1983	2,266	43·7	1,993	38·5	920	17·8	5,179
1984	2,087	43·9	1,837	38·7	825	17·4	4,749
1985	1,780	43·4	1,597	39·0	723	17·6	4,100
			Non Industrial Workers
1981	1,019	47·0	839	38·7	309	14·3	2,167
1982	984	46·9	821	39·2	290	13·9	2,095
1983	988	47·7	797	38·5	285	13·8	2,070
1984	1,026	49·1	768	36·9	293	14·0	2,087
	(18)		(19)		(24)		(61)
1985	1,054	48·5	814	37·5	306	14·0	2,174
	(62)		(64)		(81)		(207)

Note: The net increase in the number of non-industrial staff in 1984 and 1985 was due to 61 clerks being transferred from the industrial grades in 1984 and 146 in 1985. This transfer accounts in part for the marked reduction in the number of industrial staff; other factors are the reorganisation of work, the employment of contractors in some areas and continuing improvements in productivity. The number of industrial clerks transferred to non-industrial grades is shown in the table in brackets.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total acreages of land owned by the Forestry Commission in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales on any convenient date in each of the past five years.

Mr. Rifkind: The areas of land managed by the Forestry Commission as at 31 March in each year were as follows:

Hectares

Year	Scotland	England	Wales	Total
1981	800,052	303,271	160,674	1,263,997
1982	797,511	302,193	158,979	1,258,683
1983	793,540	299,685	157,699	1,250,924
1984	759,758	295,004	154,410	1,209,172
1985	741,993	288,080	150,901	1,180,974

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total acreages of planted land owned by the Forestry Commission in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales on any convenient date in each of the past five years.

Mr. Rifkind: The areas of plantations managed by the Forestry Commission as at 31 March in each year were as follows:

Hectares

Year	Scotland	England	Wales	Total
1981	508,015	251,060	136,642	895,717
1982	517,032	251,624	136,847	905,503
1983	521,515	250,358	136,849	908,722
1984	518,839	246,845	135,998	901,682
1985	516,352	241,378	134,407	892,137

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish figures in the Official Report to show the percentage of Forestry Commission owned land in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales at any convenient date for each of the past five years.

Mr. Rifkind: The percentages, which have not altered significantly over the past five years, are as follows:

	Per cent.
Scotland	63
England	24
Wales	13

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what have been the total sums raised to date from the selling of Forestry Commission land in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales since the passing of the Forestry Act 1981; and if he will express for each country the average selling price per acre.

Mr. Rifkind: The information for the period up to 21 February 1986 is as follows:

	Receipts from sales of forest land £ million	Average sale price per hectare £
Scotland	19·79	727
England	21·97	1,516
Wales	6·24	1,360

In addition, the Forestry Commission has sold agricultural land and residential properties for a total sum of £31·17 million.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what acreages of (a) planted and (b) unplanted and have been sold by the Forestry Commission in (i) Scotland, (ii) England and (iii) Wales since the passing of the Forestry Act 1981.

Mr. Rifkind: The information for the period up to 21 February 1986 is as follows:

	Areas sold (hectares)
	Planted land	Unplanted forestry land	Total
Scotland	22,705	4,508	27,213
England	13,776	709	14,485
Wales	4,294	297	4,591

In addition, the Forestry Commission had sold 50,574 hectares of agricultural and other non-forestry land up to 31 March 1985, the latest date to which comprehensive area figures are readily available in respect of such land.

NHS (Road Traffic Accidents)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost, in each year since 1970, to the National Health Service in Scotland of road traffic accidents; and what proportion is attributable to drunk driving offences.

Mr. Ancram: Using estimates produced by the Department of Transport for the costs of injury road accidents in Great Britain, the estimated cost of injury road accidents in Scotland to the National Health Service at 1984 prices was as follows:

1970	16·7
1972	17·0
1973	17·1
1974	16·0
1975	14·8
1976	15·0
1977	15·2
1978	16·0
1979	16·2
1980	15·4
1981	15·4
1982	15·7
1984	14·0

No information is held centrally on the blood alcohol levels of drivers or riders killed in road accidents; it is not, therefore, possible to determine the proportion of costs attributable to drunk driving offences.

Drink Driving Offences

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what research his Department has undertaken into drink-related driving offences.

Mr. Ancram: Research on traffic and road safety matters is generally undertaken for the United Kingdom as a whole by the Transport and Road Research Laboratory, which is currently studying the background to drinking habits of motorists.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures, for each year from 1970 to 1985, of the numbers of drivers (a) charged and (b) convicted of drunk-driving in Scotland; and if he will give the number of breath tests conducted annually.

Mr. John Mackay: The available information is as follows. Central collection of annual data on breath tests was discontinued in 1984.

Drunk Driving+

Year	Persons proceeded against	Persons against whom a charge was proved	Initial breath tests conducted
1970	8,983	8,767	14,709
1971	10,291	10,109	16,137
1972	10,671	10,480	18,213
1973	12,208	11,989	19,980
1974	12,928	12,689	21,487
1975	12,419	12,168	20,172
1976	10,353	10,137	17,675
1977	9,387	9,170	17,135
1978	11,337	11,086	19,905
1979	11,636	11,435	20,823
1980	12,779	12,513	20,667
1981	11,460	11,244	18,225
1982	10,666	10,429	18,622
1983	11,767	11,556	17,594
1984	12,500	12,213	N/A
1985* (Jan-Sep)	9,072	8,892	N/A

* Provisional
N/A=Not available.
+Includes driving, or being in charge of, a motor vehicle—
(a) while unfit due to drink or drugs;
(b) while blood alcohol content above the prescribed limit; and failing to provide breath, blood or urine specimens.

Traffic Accidents (Statistics)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures to show the number of traffic fatalities in Scotland each year since 1970; and if he will indicate, for each year, the number related to drunk-driving offences.

Mr. Ancram: The number of road accident fatalities in Scotland was as follows:

Year	Number
1970	815
1971	866
1972	855
1973	855
1974	825
1975	769
1976	783
1977	811
1978	820
1979	810
1980	700
1981	677
1982	701
1983	624
1984	593

It is not possible to estimate the total number of such fatalities related to drunk driving offences, since no information is held centrally on the blood alcohol levels of drivers or riders killed in road accidents. However, the number of deaths resulting from accidents involving drivers or riders whose breath tests subsequently proved positive or who refused a test, was:

Year	Number
1979	38
1980	58
1981	35
1982	38
1983	39
1984	25

Figures prior to 1979 are not available.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland why there has been a delay in publishing the responses to his consultative document on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The closing date for replies to the document issued by my right hon. and learned Friend was 7 March, but a number of late replies were received. Copies of all the responses have now been sent to the hon. Member. The responses are available for public inspection in the Scottish Office Library, St. Andrew's House, Edinburgh.

Dornie Bridge (Replacement)

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on current progress towards the construction of a replacement bridge at Dornie in south-west Ross-shire; and when it is intended that work will commence on the site.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has received 13 objections to the draft road orders. A draft compulsory purchase order has been published and the objection period ends on 28 March. My right hon. and learned Friend will then consider whether to hold a public local inquiry into the objections to these orders. The start date for the works will depend on whether an inquiry is held and, if so, on its timing and outcome.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

India (Helicopters)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what purpose helicopters supplied to India through the use of aid moneys will serve.

Mr. Raison: The helicopters will be used primarily in the Indian oil and natural gas industry, and thus to help strengthen India's economy. To secure maximum efficient operation of the helicopters they may also be used in certain other transport operations of the Indian Helicopter Corporation.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agricultural Production

Mr. Cash asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking in the Council of Ministers of the European Economic Community and in the United Kingdom to evaluate the use of nitrogen fertiliser and other means of expanding production and its effects on levels of production on different types of land; what meetings have taken place; what official papers have been written on the subject; and if he will lay such papers in the Library.

Mrs. Fenner: Such evaluation involves technical assessments, the consideration of which can best be undertaken at national level. My own Department devotes considerable research and advisory effort to the efficient use of nitrogen fertiliser and issues publications on the subject from time to time. As an example, I am placing a copy of ADAS reference book 209 "Fertilizer recommendations 1985-86" in the Library of the House. There have been no discussions on the use of nitrogen fertilizers and other means of expanding agricultural production nor on its effects on levels of production on different types of land within the Council of Ministers.

Food Additives

Mr. Coombs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider implementing recommendations 33 and 47 of the second report on food labelling of the Food Standards Committee (1979).

Mrs. Fenner: Recommendation 33 of the second report on food labelling is implemented in regulation 14 of the Food Labelling Regulations 1984. This does not preclude the use of the heading recommended in the report but it cannot be required because the EC food labelling directive (79/112) requires only the use of the word "ingredients" at the head of the list.

Recommendation 46 of the report, which deals with the use of the word "flavour" is implemented in schedule 7 of the food labelling regulations. At the time the regulations were made it was not considered appropriate to incorporate in them the supplementary wording suggested in recommendation 47.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the amount currently stored in each intervention store within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 18 March.

Council of Fisheries Ministers

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Council of Fisheries Ministers meeting on 18 March.

Mr. Gummer: This meeting of the Council was cancelled.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Scientific and Technical Education

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps his Department is taking to seek to improve scientific and technical education.

Mr. Chris Patten: At the school level, the Government's policy statement "Science 5 to 16", published last year after consultation with the education partners, set as objectives that all pupils should be properly introduced to science in the primary school, and should continue to study a broad and balanced science programme until the age of 16. We have followed this up by supporting expenditure of over £6 million per year on the development of primary school science through education support grants.

The White Paper "Better Schools" included these policies and also stated the Government's view that: primary schools should provide opportunities throughout the curriculum for craft and practical work leading up to some experience of design and technology and of solving problems; every pupil should take part in practical and technological work in a number of subjects through the five years of compulsory secondary education; and all pupils should be introduced to new technology and how it is affecting people's life and work.

Both the microelectronics education programme and its successor body, the microelectronics support unit, seek to improve scientific and technical education through stimulating the use of new technology in schools. In all, the Govenment are now funding over £5 million a year of work in this field.

The Department is closely involved in the technical and vocational education initiative, administered for the Government through the Manpower Services Commission. This is stimulating greater relevance across the curriculum with an increased emphasis on technical and vocational elements in science and technology as well as other subjects. In addition, some £18 million is to be available for England and Wales during 1986-87 under a scheme administered by the MSC to support in-service training related to the objectives of the TVEI. Training for teachers of science and technology in maintained schools and further education institutions is included within the scope of that scheme.

Under the in-service teacher training grants scheme the Department is supporting expenditure of up to £2 million a year by local authorities on the in-service training of science co-ordinators in primary schools and heads of science departments in secondary schools, and a further £1 million on the in-service training of heads of craft, design and technology departments in secondary schools.

One factor affecting progress on scientific and technical education in schools is a shortage of secondary school teachers in mathematics, the physical sciences and technology-related subjects where there is keen competition from industry and commerce for the limited number of people with the relevant qualifications. The Government believe that the ACAS-assisted negotiations, which began on 7 March, should seek to introduce a teachers' pay structure sufficiently flexible to enable higher salaries to be paid where necessary to attract and retain teachers whose skills are in relatively higher demand elsewhere. Meanwhile, the Government are taking action to reduce the problem of shortage. We have recently announced a bursary scheme (£1,200 tax-free in addition to a maintenance award) to graduates and mature students entering one or two-year teacher training courses in mathematics, physics or craft, design and technology, and we are consulting our partners, the local authorities and others about complementary initiatives.

In further and higher education a range of measures is aimed at improving scientific and technical education through closer links with industry and commerce. These include: financial support for the teaching company and other schemes which link industry and higher education in collaborative research and postgraduate training projects; the college-employer links project, which investigates and strengthens links between further education colleges and industry; responding to requests from industry and others for additional higher education student places in skill shortage areas — most recently in the engineering and technology programme which will provide about 5,000 extra places by the end of the decade; and appointing more industrialists to national planning bodies for further and higher education and to the governing bodies and councils of individual institutions. Additionally, university equipment grants are being increased by a total of £34 million between 1985-86 and 1988-89 so as to support scientific research of particular excellence and industrial promise.

Under the education support grant scheme the Government have also allocated £13 million in 1985-86 and a further £9 million in 1986-87 to help equip further education colleges so that students in vocational subjects can be made more familiar with industrial and commercial applications of information technology.

In higher education the number of full-time equivalent home and EC students studying subjects in the engineering, technology and science fields increased by 30 per cent. between 1979 and 1984, including 57 per cent. in the public sector. The academic plans of the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education for the years 1984-85 to 1986-87, which my right hon. Friend has accepted as a basis for the distribution of the advanced further education pool, have had as one priority to sustain that expansion. Specifically, my right hon. Friend approved, on the advice of the NAB, the setting aside from the AFE pool in each of the years 1985-86 and 1986-87 of nearly £3 million to support the selective funding of research in biotechnology and other technological fields.

Teachers (Pay and Conditions)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will list the major differences between the working conditions, as laid down by either contract or practice, in so far as they are known to him, of first-year teachers in secondarty schools in England, France and West Germany;

(2) if he will list the starting salaries, in so far as they are known to him as expected on 1 April 1986, of first-year teachers in secondary schools in England, France and West Germany, expressed in pounds sterling;

(3) if he will list the maximum attainable salaries of seconday school teachers in the state sector, with no additional responsibility allowances, after five years' teaching in England, France and Germany, in so far as the information is available to him, and expressed in pound sterling.

Sir Keith Joseph: This information is not currently available but the European Commission is funding a study of teachers' pay and conditions of service in the 10 member countries the report from this study is expected later this year when I would propose to write to my hon. Friend.

Physics Graduates

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many physics graduates were admitted to postgraduate certificate of education courses in 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985; how many went into teaching in each of those years; and what these numbers represent as fractions of the total number of teachers in England and Wales.

Mr. Chris Patten: The number of graduates admitted to postgraduate certificate in education courses in physics in 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, amd 1985 were 443, 489, 428, 408 and 255 respectively. In recent years some 80 per cent. of students who entered PGCE courses of all kinds completed their training successfully and entered teaching in the maintained sector: there is some evidence that wastage from physics courses may be higher than average.

Information on the total number of physics teachers in secondary schools is available only from the staffing surveys carried out in 1984 in England and Wales when an estimated 13,300 full-time teachers taught physics as a separate subject. The graduate entrants to PGCE quoted above for 1981 to 1985 represented 3 per cent., 4 per cent., 3 per cent., 3 per cent., and 2 per cent. respectively of this total.

Inspectors of Schools (1985 Report)

Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will publish the 1985 report of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools.

Sir Keith Joseph: I hope to publish the next report by Her Majesty's Inspectors on the effects of local authority expenditure policies on education provision in England towards the end of May.

New Schools

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of new (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools opened in each year since 1955-56; and what is the number and proportion of these schools which are (a) voluntary aided and (b) voluntary controlled.

Mr. Dunn: The information is not available centrally.

Goods and Services (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Sir Keith Joseph: Detailed records are not kept, but payment is generally made within 28 days of delivery of goods or completion of services, or in accordance with the terms of a specific contract.

Mr. Nicholas Weever

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he may expect to secure a reply to his letters of 29 November 1985 and 6 February referring to Mr. Nicholas Weever of the School of Architecture.

Mr. Walden: I replied to the letter of 29 November on 24 February. The Department has no record of the receipt of my hon. Friend's letter of 6 February.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the latest position on teachers' pay.

Sir Keith Joseph: The Government want to see better opportunities for better teachers, and better schools giving pupils a better education. Last summer we offered to allow extra spending on teachers' pay in return for an agreement covering pay, pay structure and duties which would help achieve those objectives. Now all these inter-connected issues are on the agenda again, in the ACAS-assisted negotiations in England and Wales and the independent inquiry in Scotland. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have made no new commitment to allow for extra spending on teachers' pay. When each process is complete, its conclusions will be considered in full. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear on Thursday, the normal formula arrangements will continue to apply.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the potential savings in time of on-train Customs and Excise procedures for passengers using the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Brooke: There are no such potential savings for the bulk of rail passengers on through routes to London who have nothing to declare. They will simply have to walk through the green channel at the proposed Waterloo terminal. However Customs are holding discussions with British Rail about passenger controls on other routes and no decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether specialist staff will be deployed to prevent the import of narcotics in connection with the proposed Waterloo terminal of the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Brooke: Yes, Customs officers deployed at the proposed Waterloo terminal will have exactly the same duties as for similar traffic elsewhere.

Tax Relief

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list for 1978-79 and for the latest available date the revenue cost of granting tax relief for (i) life assurances, (ii) mortgage tax relief, (iii) approved pension schemes, (iv) employers' contributions to funded pension schemes, (v) retirement annuity premiums, (vi) age allowance and (vii) capital gains exemption for selling main residence; if he will express the growth in each of these totals in terms of a percentage increase in (a) money terms and (b) real terms; and if each set of data for both points in time could be expressed as a percentage of total Government revenue;

(2) if he will estimate for the coming year the revenue cost of granting tax relief on mortgage interest payments.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out for 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984, respectively, and estimate for 1985, the budget for 1986 and estimated outturn for 1986 both in cash and real terms (a) total community expenditure, (b) community expenditure excluding rebates and administrative and institutional costs, (c) agricultural expenditure and (d) c as a percentage of b.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 14 March 1986, c. 607-8]: The table sets out the principal figures, subject to the following limitations. The European Commission has not yet made available details of total expenditure in 1985, so that the figures in the table are taken from the 1985 adopted budget. In addition, the Commission has not yet made firm proposals for changes in 1986 expenditure, and it is therefore impossible at this stage to provide an estimate of outturn for 1986 which may differ from planned expenditure in the 1986 adopted budget. The figures for 1986 are not strictly comparable with those for earlier years since they relate to an expanded Community of 12 member states. Because of this difference in the basis of the figures, a comparison between 1986 and the earlier years cannot be provided in real terms.

EC Budget

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the Budget for 1986 which was approved by the Council of Ministers was prepared using an assumption of an exchange rate of one dollar=1·20 European currency units; who was responsible for making the assumption; if the assumption was discussed at the meeting of the Council; and what view Her Majesty's Government took of this assumption.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986]: The 1986 budget was drawn up by the Commission on the basis of assumptions about various factors affecting expenditure, including exchange rates. These were considered in the usual way by the Budget Council and taken into account in decisions on levels of expenditure.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Board and Lodging

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the Chief Adjudication Officer to inform him of the date of a tribunal of commissioners to hear all the outstanding appeals involving the elderly and disabled in receipt of board and lodging assistance.

Mr. Major: I understand that an oral hearing of a tribunal of commissioners has been arranged for Friday 11 April 1986 to consider a case relating to this issue.

Health Authorities

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to announce the appointment of chairmen of district health authorities.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) on 17 March.

Health Service Staff (Accommodation)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about residential accommodation for hospital staff.

Mr. Hayhoe: About 200 comments, mainly from health authorities, were received when the scrutiny report on staff accommodation was issued in 1984. Since the new national policy was announced last July, about 100 letters have been received, mainly on behalf of individuals or groups of staff who might be affected.

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if Coventry district health authority has given notice to any of its employees to quit accommodation owned by them.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to approach the chairman of the Coventry health authority.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what survey is taken by his Department of the availability of local medical practitioners before a hospital in their area is closed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Doctors and their representative organisations are always consulted when district health authorities propose closing a hospital. If the appropriate community health council does not oppose the closure, such cases are not referred to Ministers for a decision. Where the CHC does oppose the proposal and the case has to be referred to Ministers for a decision one of the items I would expect the consultation document to cover would be the level of medical cover available in the district in question.

Charitable Organisations

Sir Gerard Vaughan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money National Health Service authorities in England provided for charitable organisations providing health care in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the domestic ratepayers in Coventry receive housing benefit.

Mr. Major: We estimate that the number of rate rebate recipients, based on the local authority's subsidy claims as a proportion of the number of domestic ratepayers in Coventry is about 40 per cent.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list (a) the number of claimants eligible for housing benefit and (b) the number and percentage claiming benefit for each year since the scheme's initiation; and if he will also present data on the number of dependants covered by these payments;

(2) if he will detail changes in the housing benefit scheme since its inception, together with planned future changes giving the numbers of claimants subject to changes to all or part of their entitlement, the average value of each of the changes and the net savings to public expenditure; and if he will express each of these changes to public expenditure as a percentage of the total cost of the scheme.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Elderly People (Residential Accommodation)

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the average weekly running costs per capita by region of local authority residential homes for the elderly, including all administrative overheads and loan charges.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not available in the form requested. The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy publishes annual volumes "Personal Social Services Statistics"; the information given is derived from its latest (1984-85) information but will exclude administration and management costs.

Gross Expenditure per resident—week: Standard Regions 1984-85

Yorkshire and Humberside	110·88
East Midlands	111·84
East Anglia	101·53
South East	125·28
South West	104·15
West Midlands	110·13
North West	110·95

Not all authorities provided information. Further details can be found in the CIPFA volume (columns 173-4 and 176), a copy of which is in the Library.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each of the last five years for which figures are available the number of persons in receipt of attendance allowance who were invited to make a fresh claim at age 16 years; if he will list in each case the number who consequently (a) retained the higher rate allowance, (b) were reduced from the higher to lower rate, (c) had the allowance at the higher rate withdrawn entirely, (d) retained the lower rate, (e) had the lower rate increased to the higher rate and (f) had the allowance at the lower rate withdrawn; and in respect of paragraphs (b), (c), (d) and (f), if he will give the proportion of those concerned who requested a review of the decision and the proportion of reviews which were successful.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available except at disproportionate cost. A research survey by York university of 293 16-year-olds, however, found that 230 had their allowance maintained at age 16 (78 per cent.). Of the remainder, six were increased from lower rate to higher rate, and the rest reduced either from higher to lower, or from higher or lower to no award. 26 claimants sought a review. Of these 12 lower rate became higher rate and three no awards became lower rate.

Asthma

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each year including 1986 since the introduction of the occupational asthma scheme (a) how many occupational asthma claims were made and (b) how many were successful.

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows. Figures for 1986 are not yet available.

Year	Claims made	Claims successful
1982	439	95
1983	439	183
1984	604	137

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, out of all the successful claims since the beginning of the occupational asthma scheme, to date, how many were in (a) the isocyanates group, (b) the platinum salts group, (c) the acid anhydride and amine hardening agents group, (d) the group involving fumes arising from the use of resin as a soldering flux, (e) the proteolytic enzyme group, (f) the animals or insects group and (g) the group associated with dusts arising from barley, oats, rye, wheat or maize or meal or flour made from such grain.

Mr. Newton: The following table shows the numbers of successful claims from occupational asthma in respect of each of the seven listed agents between 29 March 1982, when occupational asthma was prescribed, and 31 December 1985, the latest date for which information is available:

		Claims
(a)	Isocyanates	210
(b)	Platinum salts	25
(c)	Hardening agents	50
(d)	Soldering flux	97
(e)	Proteolytic enzymes	14
(f)	Animals Insects	26
(g)	Flour Grain	159
	Total	581

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, out of the total number of successful claims for occupational asthma since the introduction of the occupational asthma scheme, how many cases were awarded 15 per cent. disablement or below.

Mr. Newton: Of the 581 successful claims since the introduction of the occupational asthma scheme, 439 were assessed at 15 per cent. or below.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many countries within the EEC officially recognise occupational asthma as an industrial disease; which countries they are; and in what years they introduced their respective schemes.

Mr. Newton: Information derived from the International Labour Office and European Community reports indicates that the following countries provide benefits for occupational asthma. (In some cases the disease is not cited explicitly in the national legislation but the risk is covered).

Belgium
Denmark
France
Germany
Greece
Luxembourg
Netherlands
Portugal
Spain

In 1982 the United Kingdom recognised occupational asthma as an industrial disease.

We have no information on the dates when cover was introduced by other member States nor do we have any information on whether or not Ireland or Italy recognise occupational asthma as an industrial disease.

Road Traffic Fatalities

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the annual cost (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in England and Wales of road traffic fatalities; and if he will estimate what proportion of the cost is related to drunken driving.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that the hon. Member is referring to the cost to the National Health Service of treating road traffic fatalities. In 1983, the last year for which the relevant hospital statistics are available, the cost of treating road accident fatalities (defined as patients dying within 30 days of admission to hospital or those dead on arrival) is estimated at £1·3 million for England. A comparable figure for the rest of the United Kingdom is not available. It is not possible to estimate the proportion of the cost to the National Health Service attributable to drunken driving.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will detail for the latest available date the number of (a) claimants and (b) dependants on supplementary benefit; and if this total could be broken down into the main claimant groups.

Mr. Major: The latest date for which this information is available is December 1983, and I refer the hon. Member to table 3.1 of the "Annual Statistical Enquiry, 1983", a copy of which is in the Library.

Unemployment-related Benefits

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list (a) the number of claimants of social security benefits and (b) the number of dependants in 1979 and at the latest available date; and if he will calculate the extent to which the increase in unemployment since 1979 correlates with the increase in the number of claimants and dependants.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each year since 1978-79 changes in the contribution rates for both employee and employer of class one national insurance contributions; and if he will state for each year the additional revenue raised by these charges from (i) employees and (ii) employers for each of these years.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Unemployed Persons (Benefits)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the cost of paying benefits to the unemployed and their dependants, including national insurance, supplementary benefit and housing benefit for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Reform

7. Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the levy to be raised by the London Residuary Body from London boroughs; and what assessment he has made of the effect on the size of the levy of the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mrs. Rumbold: On 25 February the London Residuary Body announced a levy of £48 million for 1986-87.

The residuary body's overall budget takes account of the balances that will be left by the GLC when it is abolished.

22. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from voluntary organisations in response to the announcement of transitional grants under the Local Government Act 1985.

Sir George Young: Four representations have been received from organisations which have not been accepted for funding under transitional grant, and two from organisations concerned about the allocations to particular local authorities.

56. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the number of redundancies arising from abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 13 January at columns 468-69. I note that the chairman of the Staff Commission has recently expressed the view that "it is impossible to give an accurate assessment of the likely level of redundancies until authorities have finished recruiting to fulfil their new responsibilities".

I agree with him.

58. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received since 1 March from voluntary organisations concerning their continued funding in the Greater London and metropolitan areas after 1 April.

Sir George Young: Since 1 March I have received 14 representations from voluntary groups expressing concern about their future funding after 1 April.

Local Authority Housing

8. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy towards housing in the public sector in the light of the Audit Commission's recent report entitled "Managing the Crisis in Council Housing", and, in particular, its reference to the relative amount spent by local authorities on their administrative costs, on the one hand, and on their housing management, on the other.

Mr. John Patten: I very much support the Audit Commission's call for improved housing management by local authorities, for example, by streamlining reletting procedures to reduce the time houses stand empty, more effective rent collection and arrears control, better services for the elderly, and, by partnership with the private sector. Less bureaucracy and a better service for tenants must be the goal—almost 100 authorities devote negligible effort to estate management. The benefits could be substantial. The commission estimates that rent arrears could be reduced by £100 million, administrative costs cut by £80 million to £100 million and over 20,000 empty dwellings made available for letting.

64. Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy towards the reduction in the number of empty dwellings in the light of the Audit Commission's conclusion, in its recent report on council housing management, about the potential scope available to local authorities for streamlining their reletting procedures.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has urged local authorities as a matter of the highest priority to reduce the number of empty dwellings by improving their property management. My Department's circular 12/85 sets out how to do this. The Audit Commission's conclusion that streamlined letting procedures could make over 20,000 extra dwellings available for letting underlines the need for urgent action.

47. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy towards the promotion of partnership between housing authorities and the private sector in the light of the Audit Commission's recent estimate of the amount of money which may be available from the private sector for this purpose.

Sir George Young: The Government agree with the Audit Commission on the need to attract private finance into public sector housing. Our urban housing renewal unit has been discussing with many local authorities the scope for joint ventures with private developers to tackle the problems of their run-down housing estates. A number of successful schemes have already taken place. The unit is also keen to attract institutional finance into run-down estates through private trust, such as the one which will shortly take over Thamesmead. The new powers in the Building Societies Bill will make it easier for societies to support such ventures.

Sporting Facilities

23. Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the encouragement of the wider use of sporting facilities.

Mr. Tracey: My policy is to give every encouragement — with the Sports Council and other bodies like the Football Trust — to schemes designed to expand the community use of existing sport and recreation facilities. Such schemes represent obvious value-for-money to meet the continually growing demand for opportunities for sport. I believe that wider community use can be obtained of sporting facilities (for example in football) and of those in schools and colleges. I have active discussions of these possibilities with my colleagues in the Department of Education and Science, with the Sports Council, with the local authority associations and also as part of my continuing dialogue with the football authorities.

Housing Defects Act

24. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses have been purchased by local authorities under the Housing Defects Act since the legislation was passed.

Mr. John Patten: Local authorities in England have reported that some 1,300 dwellings were repurchased under the Act, up to 31 December 1985.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors are inhibiting the designation of Boswell houses in Birmingham under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Building Research Establishment is currently investigating the condition of Boswell houses. I expect to reach a decision on the question of designation under the Act as soon as I am able to consider BRE's findings, and the other evidence available.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the extent to which reinstatement of the Boot houses in Birmingham is possible within the financial limits under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: PRC Homes Ltd. has not yet approved any repair methods for Boot houses and we have no information on the likely cost of repair. When this information becomes available, we will consider whether the expenditure limit for this property type is satisfactory.

Local Authority Services (Privatisation)

25. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of local authorities in privatising services.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The fact that so few local authorities have voluntarily subjected their services to competition is a matter of continuing disappointment to the Government. Ratepayers are being denied savings for no good reason whatever.

Housing Repairs

26. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses in the public sector he expects to be repaired in the current year.

Mr. John Patten: Though we do not make forecasts of this kind I expect local authorities to give increasing priority this year to the renovation of their own stock.

Rates

27. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest estimate of the average increase in domestic rates for 1986-87.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) and for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short).

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the average rate increase at ratepayer level, for authorities, county and districts, in each non-metropolitan county, metropolitan county and in the Greater London area in each year from 1975-76 to 1985-86, showing also the overall percentage change over this period.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The figures have been published annually by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy in "Finance and General Statistics" (previously "Finance, General and Rating Statistics") since 1977-78.

Figures for 1975-76 and 1976-77 were published by DOE in "Rates and Rateable Values".

Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Housing Investment Programmes

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the response from local authorities to the urban housing renewal units invitation to them to bid for additional housing investment programme resources for 1986-87, in order to implement schemes for the improvement of conditions on their run-down estates.

Sir George Young: I am delighted with the response to the urban housing renewal unit's invitation to targeted local authorities to bid for additional resources to support schemes which will revitalise their rundown estates. So far 35 authorities have made bids for schemes on 94 estates involving proposals for localised management, community refurbishment schemes and the attraction of private sector skills and resources. We have already given approval in principle to schemes in Calderdale, Coventry and Gateshead. Further approvals will follow shortly.

67. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further representations he has received about 1986-87 housing investment programme allocations.

Sir George Young: Various representations about the 1986-87 housing investment programme allocations have been made during visits, at meetings, or in correspondence.

Drinking Water

29. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the quality of drinking water will not be affected by the privatisation of water authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The legal basis of drinking water standards will be clarified and departures from those standards will as now be allowed in exceptional circumstances only with specific Government authorisation.

Water Authorities

30. Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he is making with his preparations for privatising the regional water authorities.

Mr. John Patten: My Department is continuing its preparations for legislation, which will be introduced at the earliest opportunity. Bids have been received from merchant banks for the work of advising the Government on flotation and an appointment will be announced shortly. I expect soon to issue consultation papers on protecting the water environment and a review of water and sewerage law.

Small Businesses

31. Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will issue guidance on small firms and planning matters as promised in "Lifting the Burden".

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales will tomorrow publish a booklet, "Planning Permission for Small Businesses — A Step by Step Guide". The booklet provides a down-to-earth guide to the planning process, and will be distributed free of charge to those running—or proposing to set up—a small firm.

Land Banks

32. Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review his policy on the amount of land local authorities should hold in their land banks and the number of years for which land should be held.

Mr. Tracey: It is for local authorities to decide how much land to hold in their land banks and the number of years for which land should be held. Where land owned by local authorities is on the land register my right hon. Friend may direct the authority to dispose of its interest in the land where appropriate.

Basildon

3. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Basildon by the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Mr. Patten).

Mr. John Patten: I was glad to be able to see housing conditions at first hand with my hon. Friend, who has been briefing me over housing problems in Basildon. The council is doing some positive things and the standard of housing generally is higher than in many other places. I accept that there are problems and I hope that the council will co-operate with the private sector to the maximum possible extent in resolving them. I am considering the council's proposals to purchase land for more housing and will issue a decision as soon as possible.

Football Clubs (Family Involvement)

34. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what support, by way of grants or other means, the Government are giving to encourage family and community involvement with football clubs.

Mr. Tracey: In our continuing discussions with the football authorities, we are giving very active encouragement to strengthening family and community involvement with football clubs. This will help to encourage participation in sport, it represents effective marketing for football, and in the longer term it will help to remove the threat of violence. Many clubs now have family enclosures and links with the community. Grants are available for community schemes from local authorities, the Sports Council and the Football Trust.

The Sports Council has committed nearly £3 million to the football and the community scheme since 1978, in partnership first with the Football Grounds Improvement Trust and then with the Football Trust (whose contribution has exceeded £1 million). Some clubs also receive support under the Department of Employment's community programme, administered by the Manpower Services Commission; new projects are under consideration.

Football Matches (Hooliganism)

35. Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government are taking to seek to prevent hooligans travelling from the United Kingdom and causing trouble at football matches abroad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: For matches in Europe we have the European convention, agreed last year following this Government's initiative. Specifically for the Mexico World Cup we are preparing appropriate action with the football authorities; I expect to make an announcement about this soon.

53. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the effectiveness of Government measures to combat football hooliganism.

Mr. Tracey: It appears that the package of measures developed by the Government with the football authorities has brought good results. All reports indicate a better atmosphere at Football League matches so far this season. There have been no major incidents inside grounds. The latest police figures show that arrests inside grounds, and ejections from grounds, are down by 30·5 per cent. in Division 1 and by 22 per cent. in Division 2 compared with the same period last season. No one can be complacent. But I pay tribute to the efforts by the clubs and police forces so far; and to the Football Trust which has provided funds for the important installation of closed circuit television at grounds. I understand that the alcohol restrictions imposed by the Sporting Events (Control of Alcohol etc.) Act 1985 have also helped the police considerably. The football hooliganism problems are long-standing and require continued vigilance. We will continue to review progress and measures with the football authorities.

Nature Conservancy Council

36. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial resources have been available to the Nature Conservancy Council in each year since 1981; and what is their budget for 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: The grant-in-aid to the Nature Conservancy Council was as follows:

	£ million
1981-82	10·2
1982-83	11·5
1983-84	12·8
1984-85	18·1
1985-86	22·7

The provision for 1986-87 is £32·1 million subject to the approval of Parliament.

Sheltered Housing

37. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to make any form of sheltered housing available for purchase by tenants; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Sheltered accommodation for the elderly and the disabled is excluded from the right to buy, but it is open to local authorities and other public sector landlords to sell such accommodation on a voluntary basis. Whether to do so, and if so whether to offer a discount, are matters for the landlord to decide in the light of local circumstances.

Construction Industry

38. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals for increasing the amount of work available to the construction industry.

Sir George Young: Yes, through the continuation of our economic policies. By controlling inflation and public spending we are succeeding in creating the right climate for investment and growth. In 1985, construction output was over £22 billion (at constant 1980 prices)—11 per cent. up in real terms on the 1981 level. Output for the private sector has increased by over 20 per cent. in real terms during that period.

Greater London Council (Grants)

39. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total of grants made by the Greater London council in 1985-86 to date which have required his prior approval.

Mr. Tracey: To date we have received 314 applications from the GLC for consent to grants to various bodies. Of these, 293 required consent under section 7 of the Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act 1984 as involving section 137 expenditure; 207, totalling £19,759,391, have received section 7 consent; 36, totalling £9,198,041, have been refused.

Of the total of 314 applications, 21 required consent under section 92 of the Local Government Act 1985 as imposing a liability on successor authorities. All of these, totalling £968,246, have been refused.

In addition, 88 applications, totalling £19,213,099, have been made in respect of proposals for financial assistance to various London boroughs. Consent has been given to 59 of these, totalling £10,549,470; 5, totalling £77,345, have been refused. My right hon. Friend has also decided that he would not wish to direct the London Residuary Body to recover 106 payments, totalling £52,971,836, which were made by the GLC to the London boroughs in 1985-86 without consent; the GLC has been asked to supply more information about a further 10 payments, totalling £178,691, made in 1985-86 without consent.

Grant Recycling

40. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received from the local authority associations to his letter of 4 March regarding grant recycling in 1986-87.

41. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received from the local authority associations to his letter of 4 March regarding grant recycling in 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have received letters from the Association of County Councils welcoming my announcement, and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities seeking clarification of the guarantee. Representations were also made at the meeting of the Consultative Council for Local Government Finance on 12 March.

48. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the amount of rate support grant that will be recycled to the shire counties in the financial year 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have received a range of representations both from the local authority associations and individual authorities.

59. Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the effect upon individual councils of his decision to recycle grant money to local authorities in receipt of grant at budgeted expenditure.

Mr. Waldegrave: This is a matter for individual local authorities but I hope they will have taken advantage of my announcement to reduce the burden on their ratepayers.

District Auditors

42. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation to strengthen the powers of district auditors in relation to the responsibilities and duties of local councillors in connection with the management of local government finance; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have no such plans.

Local Government Finance

43. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local government current spending will be met by central Government grants in 1985-86.

Mrs. Rumbold: On the basis of etimates in the Rate support Grant Supplementary Report (England) No. 2 1985-86, the percentage of local authority relevant expenditure supported by aggregate Exchequer grant is 46·6 per cent.

63. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has so far received from members of the public about the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government".

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Mr. Watts).

Water Supplies (Nitrate Pollution)

44. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in curbing nitrate pollution of public water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave my hon. Friend on 14 January at column 545.

Council House Sales

45. Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the use local authorities are making of partnerships with the private sector to provide their tenants with the opportunity to buy low-cost homes.

Sir George Young: Local authorities have reported the construction of more than 15,000 homes for sale by private builders under licence on local authority land since 1981. In addition, over the same period local authorities sold more than 2,000 hectares of housing land to private developers, sufficient for some 48,000 homes. More than half of local authorities in England and Wales have carried out at least one of these forms of partnership scheme with the private sector to provide new homes for sale, as part of our low-cost home ownership initiatives. A sample survey in 1984 suggested that more than half the purchasers of new partnership scheme homes were actual or potential local authority tenants.

Some local authorities have also co-operated with private developers to secure the improvement and sale of existing public dwellings. The provisions of the Housing and Planning Bill will make such sales easier.

Local Authorities (Services)

46. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the impact on services provided by the local authorities in question in the rate limitation orders for 1986-87.

Mr. Waldegrave: A number of authorities drew my attention in their representations to the impact which they claimed rate capping would have on their services. Similar claims made about rate capping in 1985-86 did not in the event prove justified.

School Sports Facilities

49. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress towards dual use of school sports facilities.

Mr. Tracey: Community or dual use of school sports facilities is one aspect of my overall policy to encourage the wider use of existing facilities in order to help meet the increasing demand for sport and recreation opportunities. Such developments represent obvious value for money. There is already considerable dual use. It is supported by many local education authorities but not universally and I am discussing with my colleagues at the Department of Education and Science how we might achieve further progress of benefit both to schools and to the community. Special funds are available to assist schemes from the Sports Council and the Football Trust.

Sport and Recreation

50. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's policy towards the provision of sport and recreation opportunities for communities in inner cities and deprived areas.

Mr. Tracey: The Government believe that sport and recreation can play an important part in alleviating social deprivation in the inner cities and other areas of need. We have encouraged, and fully support, the Sports Council's policies to provide a wide range of opportunities for communities in these areas. In 1985-86 the council's expenditure on schemes in inner cities and areas of special need accounted for 20 per cent. of its total budget. This expenditure will rise next year as a result of the substantial increase in the council's grant in aid from £30·6 million to £37 million.

The Government's urban programme and derelict land grant schemes are further important sources of support for a wide range of sport and recreation projects in inner cities and other urban areas. The annual value of this support is currently about £35 million.

60. Mr. Dickens asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the provision of sport and recreation facilities for the community.

Mr. Tracey: Communities' demand for sport and recreation opportunities continues to grow and I am concerned that, within public expenditure constraints, this should be met. Participating in sport has obvious benefits, in health and well-being and in community spirit (especially in deprived areas). Sport plays an important part in the lives of people of all ages. To meet the need there is a great deal of annual public investment in new facilities and opportunities — currently about £700 million by local authorities, £35 million under the urban programme and large sums under the programmes of various Government Departments. In particular, this Government have increased substantially the grant to the Sports Council, from £14 million in 1979 to £37 million next year. Through public and private investment, and much voluntary effort, the country's stock of facilities has improved substantially in recent years. This growth will continue. At the same time, I look for an expansion in the use of existing facilities, in schools, colleges, industry and in sports like football.

Assured Tenancies Scheme

51. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take steps to extend the assured tenancies scheme to cover newly-improved dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: In order to provide greater scope for responsible landlords to invest in rented accommodation, my hon. Friend yesterday tabled amendments to the Housing and Planning Bill to extend the assured tenancy scheme.

House Building

52. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many housing starts have been made in England and Wales so far in 1985-86.

Sir George Young: In the first 10 months of 1985-86, it is provisionally estimated that there were 151,000 starts in England and Wales.

Housing Authorities (Expenditure)

54. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the number of housing authorities which are not making full use of their spending powers in the current year.

Sir George Young: Outturn figures for the current year are not yet available. In 1984-85, 16 local authorities reported prescribed expenditure on housing which was less than the amount of their housing investment programme allocation; and 128 reported prescribed expenditure which was less than the combined spending power available to them from their housing investment programme allocation and the prescribed proportion of the capital receipts generated from housing during that year. It is not known how many other authorities had prescribed expenditure which was less than the combined spending power available to them from these sources and from the unspent portion of receipts in earlier years.

Civil Parishes

55. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is his policy to reduce the numbers of civil parishes in rural areas.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. But I believe civil parishes which perform no function and do not have meetings cannot be justified as units of local government.

Green Belt

57. Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has given any fresh guidance to local authorities on development within the green belt.

Mr. Tracey: Advice to local authorities on development within the green belt is set out in Department of the Environment circular 14/84. That circular confirms guidance on development within the green belt which was first issued in 1955. We have made it abundantly clear that we stand by this policy.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Environment wht representations he has received concerning building on green belt land.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I receive many representations. Most of them are against development in the green belt.

Rate Support Grant (Sunderland)

61. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of rate support grant was paid to the borough of Sunderland for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is as follows:

1981-82	63·787
1982-83	64·724
1983-84	65·252
1984-85	65·556
1985-86	59·499

The amounts for 1981-82 and 1982-83 are final entitlements. Figures for later years are latest estimates of entitlements.

Voluntary Organisations

62. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will meet representatives of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities to discuss the future funding of voluntary organisations after 1 April.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend has received no request from the AMA for a meeting.

Housing Stock

65. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the state of the housing stock in northern England.

Sir George Young: The 1981 English house condition survey showed that for northern England (the north-west, northern and Yorkshire and Humberside regions) 7·8 per cent. of dwellings were unfit, 4·9 per cent. lacked at least one basic amenity and 5·7 per cent. were in serious disrepair*. More up-to-date information will be available from the 1986 survey to be started this autumn.

* Costing over £7,000.

Water Industry (Privatisation)

66. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received concerning the environmental consequences of privatising the water industry.

Mr. John Patten: Three responses from environmental bodies were received to the discussion paper which was issued last year about water privatisation. A number of responses to the White Paper "Privatisation of the Water Authorities in England and Wales" (Cmnd. 9734) have raised environmental subjects. A consultation paper on environmental protection following privatisation will be issued shortly.

Rented Accommodation

68. Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received on the supply of homes to rent.

Sir George Young: We continue to receive various representations on this subject. We want to encourage the supply of homes to rent in the private sector, though no proposals for any major reform of the Rent Act are likely to be brought forward during the lifetime of this Parliament. A number of representations have stressed how more homes might be provided under the assured tenancy scheme. In response to these representations my hon. Friend has tabled amendments to the Housing and Planning Bill to extend the assured tenancy scheme to improved property.

Royal Parks

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment in what circumstances private motor vehicles are permitted to pass through Kensington gardens and other royal parks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Private motor vehicles are permitted to pass through the royal parks on those parks roads which are open to the public. There are such parks roads in Hyde park, St. James's, Green, Regent's, Greenwich, Richmond and Bushy park. There are no parks roads in Kensington gardens.

Apart from official journeys made by parks personnel, private vehicles are not allowed to pass through, unless they have specific and necessary business in the park. These could include building and maintenance contractors, delivery and service vehicles, catering and other parks concessionaries employees. The disabled are also permitted vehicle access in certain circumstances.

Woodlands

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, having regard to the failure of the Nature Conservancy Council to recommend for exemption from capital transfer tax ancient or semi-natural broadleaved woodlands of less than two hectares, what proposals his Department has to ensure the protection of such of those small woodlands that are important to the conservation of wildlife on the wider countryside.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the Government statement made on 24 July 1985 setting out the new policy for broadleaved woodlands, and the guidelines for management of these woodlands issued by the Forestry Commission last September after consultation with the Countryside Commission, Nature Conservancy Council and other bodies.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the extent and purpose of the Nature Conservancy Council's survey of private woodlands; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The NCC's woodlands survey is being carried out in order to compile a register of ancient woodlands to include all probable ancient semi-natural woodlands, other woodlands, such as plantations, on ancient woodland sites, and some recent semi-natural woods which are known or believed to be important sites for nature conservation. Woodlands less than 2 hectares in size are excluded. The purpose of the register is to identify those areas where nature conservation values are high and appropriate management is required to maintain those values.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will inquire of the Nature conservancy council on what basis it decided that ancient or semi-natural broadleaved woodlands of less than two hectares should not be recommended for exemption from capital transfer tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The nature of advice given by the Nature Conservancy Council to the Inland Revenue in respect of claims for exemption from capital transfer tax or relief from capital gains tax is a matter for the council itself. Woodlands within sites of special scientific interest or national nature reserves would normally qualify regardless of their size, but it would be impracticable to survey all ancient or semi-natural broadleaved woodland of less than 2 hectares throughout Greater Britain for this purpose.

General Council for Voluntary Service

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received from the general secretary of the Greater Council for Voluntary Service; what reply he is sending; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The general secretary of the Greater Manchester Council for Voluntary Service has written an open letter to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State about funding of voluntary bodies after abolition. My noble Friend the Minister of State will be replying shortly, and I will place a copy of the correspondence in the Library.

Hotel Development (Waterloo)

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications for hotel development in the Waterloo area bounded by Lambeth road, Blackfriars road and the River Thames he has called in for decision in each of the past six years.

Mr. Tracey: None.

Sir John Wells asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what provision he proposes to make in the legislation implementing the proposals contained in the White Paper on privatisation of the water authorities,

Cmnd. 9734, to ensure the preservation of the existing rights of leisure and navigation interests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Privatisation is not expected to affect the rights and duties of water authorities relating to navigation or recreation. These rights and duties will pass to water services public limited companies. The companies' operating licences will provide for the existing range and level of facilities to be maintained, and they will be able to develop and expand in these areas if they wish. The licences will also provide for the Director General of Water Services to determine the size of the environmental services charge which helps to pay for recreation and navigation functions.

Inner Cities

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the extra funding available to the inner cities he estimates will be spent on the housing stock.

Sir George Young: It is for local authorities to determine the proportion of their resources spent on the housing stock, and the extent to which they take advantage of additional resources available through my Department's urban housing renewal unit and other programmes, including urban development grant and derelict land grant. The Government have increased the weightings for inner city authorities within the generalised needs index which is used to distribute housing capital resources.

Urban Development Grant

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will give a breakdown by category of projects approved for urban development grant and the benefits these projects will yield.

Mr. John Patten: 179 offers of urban development grant have been accepted or are on the table. Details of the estimated expenditure and benefits of these projects are in the following table.

Type of scheme	Number of projects	Grant	Private investment	Gearing ratio	Number of jobs created or retained	Number of houses and flats	Land reused (Acres)
		£ million	£ million
Industrial
Factories/workshops/ warehouses	49	19·4	73·6	1:3·8	7,328	15	188
Business expansion projects	20	6·9	26·5	1:3·8	2,835	0	43
Commercial
Retail	25	19·4	109·6	1:5·6	4,242	12	61
Office	19	4·8	22·3	1:4·6	1,968	5	12
Tourism and recreation	16	15·2	58·5	1:3·8	2,888	0	38
Housing
New build	31	11·4	42·5	1:3·7	97	2,462	218
Refurbishment/conversion	19	8·3	21·1	1:2·5	139	1,205	54
All UDG schemes	179	85·4	354·1	1:4·1	19,497	3,699	614

Notes:
(a) Tourism and recreation includes also hotels and trade centres.
(b) The grant figures include £2·5 million of public expenditure other than UDG.
(c) Mixed-use schemes are included in the predominant type.

Airport, Royal Docks

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to call in the detailed planning application for the terminal buildings and runway of the proposed short take off and landing airport in the royal docks; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No. The details of the proposal, the outline of which has already been approved, are for the local planning authority, in this case the LDDC.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that the report of the noise consultants appointed by the London Dockland Development Corporation in respect of the planning application for terminal buildings and runway for the proposed short take off and landing airport in the royal docks demonstrates that the application conforms to the terms of the relevant agreement under section 52 of the Town and Country Planning Act; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I understand that the application conforms with the section 52 agreement. The agreement is entirely a matter between the LDDC, the Port of London Authority, the London borough of Newham and the developers. The report of the noise consultant was commissioned by the LDDC to identify appropriate noise insulation measures and the scale of installation of sound barriers.

Reservoirs

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in implementing the Reservoirs Act 1975.

Mr. John Patten: The Reservoirs Act is being implemented in stages.

Last April in all areas in England, Scotland and Wales (Except Greater London and the metropolitan areas) responsibility for enforcement of the Act was placed on county and regional and islands councils which primarily involved them in setting up registers of reservoirs and taking action in the event of an emergency. Non-compliance with the Act's safety provisions became a criminal offence.

This April, the same responsibilities are being placed on the London borough and metropolitan district councils. Elsewhere the remaining provisions of the Act will come into effect. These largely replicate the requirements of the existing Reservoirs (Safety Provisions) Act 1930 dealing with the regular inspection of reservoirs and the supervision of their design and construction by qualified engineers appointed by the Secretary of State on the advice of the institution of Civil Engineers. There are two important new provisions: owners must appoint a named supervising engineer to keep the reservoir under continual supervision between inspections; and precautions must be taken if a reservoir is abandoned. These remaining provisions will come into force in Greater London and the metropolitan areas in April 1987.

"Paying for Local Government"

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the consultation period in respect of the Green Paper, "Paying for Local Government."

Mr. Waldegrave: Further to my answer of 19 February at column 210, to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) my right hon. Friend has now told the local authority associations, in response to representations they had made, that we will be prepared to consider responses received by 31 October. It would nevertheless still be helpful if interested parties were to send us their views by the previously announced date of 1 October.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 20 March 1986

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Sexual Offences (Children)

Mr. Dickens asked the Attorney-General if he will initiate a prosecution for sexual offences involving children against a person whose name has been supplied to his office.

The Attorney-General: Certain papers were received yesterday by the Director of Public Prosecutions, who is considering them.

SCOTLAND

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if there are any plans to seek to increase the level of international traffic at Glasgow airport;

(2) if there are any plans to seek to increase air traffic at Glasgow airport.

Mr. Ancram: It is up to the airlines to operate services where they find it commercially attractive to do so, subject to the granting of route licences.

Family Law (Scotland) Act

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to bring into operation the provisions of the Family Law (Scotland) Act.

Mr. Rifkind: I intend to bring the Family Law (Scotland) Act 1985 into operation as soon as possible. Since, however, a number of the provisions of the Act relate to court procedures, no specific commencement date can be defined until new or amended procedural rules have been made by the Court of Session on the recommendation of the Rules Councils for the Court of Session and the sheriff court.

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his reply of 12 March, Official Report, column 487, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill, he will list those projects in the Glasgow area which the Scottish Development Agency is likely to defer to future years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I understand that, of those physical works projects which the agency had proposed to carry out in Glasgow in 1986-87, the following are likely to be deferred to future years:

Glasgow University landscaping
Newton Park
Birnhouse Road
Cumberland Street
Barrowfield
Clyde Walkway (Victoria to Albert Bridges)
Blackhill Phase 6
Garscube
Newton Halfway Bing
Balmore Railway Cutting
Leverndale
Central Hotel
Parkhead Railway
Hogarth Park
Foresthall Hospital
Carntyne Railway Bridge

Youth Training

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is considering the representations made by the chairman of Glasgow area manpower board on the problems facing the voluntary sector in funding the two-year youth training schemes; and if he will consider meeting the board on this matter.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have already written in considerable detail in response to the several particular and general representations which have been made to us on this matter. Also, the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission sent a full reply to the chairman of the Glasgow area manpower board on 10 March in response to his letter of 18 February. There is nothing which I can usefully add to what has already been said. I am assured that, despite the regrettable loss of some YTS places in the voluntary sector, in Scotland the great majority of managing agents will continue to participate, thus ensuring the necessary total number of places and an adequate balance of provision. In the circumstances no useful purpose would be served by a meeting with the board.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Age Identification System

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans there are to change the vehicle age identification system.

Mr. Ridley: The current vehicle age identification system has created difficulties for some parts of the motor industry because of the peak in sales produced when the age letter changes in August. I have considered the views of the main motor trade organisations and I am aware that there are different opinions about what can be done to improve the situation. However, changing the month to October would help some large vehicle manufacturers and would also enable the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre to make some savings and improvements in service. The change could not be made in 1986 because manufacturers' production plans have already been settled, but I propose to move the change month to October in 1987.

Litter Bins (Mountford Bridge)

Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of experience, following the trial removal of litter bins from the lay-by at Mountford bridge, Shrewsbury, he will now implement the request of Mountford parish council to his Department to re-instate these bins.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am not aware of any evidence which would warrant this, but we will continue to monitor the situation.

Air Services (London-Singapore)

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he makes of the scope for further increases in capacity on the London-Singapore route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am satisfied that the capacity already provided by British Airways and Singapore Airlines between the United Kingdom and Singapore is fully adequate to meet the demand for travel between the two countries.

Departmental Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Ridley: The average time taken within the Department's accounts branch from receipt of an authorised instruction to payment is five working days. Times taken from receipt of invoice vary with the type of purchase and circumstances but in the case of civil engineering and related requirements the conditons of contract require payment within one month of receipt and certification of the contractor's statement.

M25 (Defects)

Mr. George Gardiner asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has yet received the report from W. S. Atkins and Partners, consulting engineers on the Reigate-Leatherhead section of the M25, determining where responsibility for defects in the construction of the section lies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The contractual position was explained in the reply given on 11 November, at column 79. I have not yet received the consulting engineer's decision on where responsibility lies.

Okehampton Bypass

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport what account he took, in preparing his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 365, regarding the reimbursement by Her Majesty's Government of the costs incurred by petitioners against the Okehampton bypass special procedure order of the circumstances in which, and the extent to which, the joint committee had power to award costs at that time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport was aware of the powers of the Joint Committee to award costs when he gave his answer of 10 March. I can add nothing to that answer.

East London Road Assessment Study

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the consultant's report on the east London road assessment study will be published.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I expect to publish the report later this year.

Severn Crossing

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to publish any interim reports on the study for a second Severn crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: An interim report was published in April 1985. The various threads of the study are at different stages of advancement, and no interim report could contain final proposals. A number of route options that have been identified are expected to be discarded in the light of further work. In order to avoid causing any unnecessary concern and uncertainty to parties who might not in the end be affected, I have decided, in consultation with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, not to publish any further interim reports. I can assure my hon. Friend that the final report, which is still expected for the summer of this year, will be published.

Meteorological Services

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the cost of the meteorological services for the civil aviation industry are met by British civil aviation carriers and foreign carriers, respectively.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986]: On the basis of statistics produced by Eurocontrol and a sample of traffic in the Shanwick oceanic control area, about 42 per cent. of the costs of meteorological services supplied to civil aviation are recovered from operators of British registered aircraft and about 58 per cent. from foreign operators.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentages of the charges for meteorological services for the civil aviation industry are borne by private aviation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986]: A figure for the proportion of meteorological charges borne by private aviation in the United Kingdom is not readily available and cannot be calculated except at disproportionate cost.

The Civil Aviation Authority, however, considers it to be negligible.

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement as to the cost per civil aircraft per annum for meteorological services in the United Kingdom; and what information he has as to how this compares with the costs borne by European carriers in France, Germany and Italy.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986]: No information is available which would allow a comparison between the annual cost per civil aircraft of meteorological services in the United Kingdom and other major European countries. The charge for meteorological services is, however, about 12 per cent. of the total costs for air navigation services recovered from users in the United Kingdom, France and West Germany. No comparative figure is available for Italy.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Additives

Mr. Coombs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider removing bleach from the list of permitted additives in white bread.

Mrs. Fenner: We have no plans to remove bleaching agents from the list of permitted additives in white bread.

None of the reports produced by the independent expert committees in recent years have recommended that flour bleaching agents should be removed from the list of permitted additives in white bread. The Bread and Flour Regulations 1984 which come into force on 1 July 1986 therefore continue the approval for the two flour bleaching agents permitted in white bread; the maximum quantity for benzoyl peroxide is also maintained, but a maximum quantity for chlorine dioxide is now to be introduced.

Agricultural Improvement Scheme

Sir Richard Body asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money by way of grant has been paid out in the last convenient 12-month period for any of the 12 purposes of improving the environment or using alternative sources of energy under the agricultural improvement scheme; and how much money by way of grant in the same 12-month period has been paid out for any other purpose under the agriculture and horticulture grants scheme and other grant-aided schemes.

Mrs. Fenner: The agricultural improvement scheme has only been in operation since 1 October 1985. A detailed breakdown of expenditure under it is not yet available.

Departmental Suppliers

Mr. Ottaway asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Jopling: The Ministry has about 150 centres which can authorise payments to suppliers of goods and services, and it would be a major exercise to calculate the average time taken to make payments. It is a standing instruction, that invoices should be processed promptly, and cheques are normally dispatched one or two working days after authorisation.

Potatoes

Mr. Roger King asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has determined the market support prices for potatoes to apply in Great Britain and in Northern Ireland for the 1986-87 crop year beginning on 1 July.

Mr. Gummer: Following consultations with the farmers unions we have decided to authorise the Potato Marketing Board to enter into pre-season contracts with producers to purchase up to 365,000 tonnes of potatoes over the months November 1986 to May 1987 at a scale of prices not to exceed an average of £53 per tonne. We have also agreed that the board can intervene directly on the market throughout the season where this will ensure support more cheaply than purchases under contract, provided that the total intervention does not exceed 500,000 tonnes. The target area for potato plantings in Great Britain, another important factor in market stability, was fixed last July at 158,000 hectares.

The maximum target price for Northern Ireland for the 1986-87 season will be £46 per tonne. The target area for Northern Ireland plantings is 12,750 hectares and the ceiling for any support operations is 60,000 tonnes.

I believe that these arrangements are sufficient to provide a reasonable level of fall-back support in the event of surplus production arising in 1986-87. We have, however, approved increases in PMB direct intervention trigger prices for the period April to June inclusive to bring them into a more realistic relationship with the board's contract prices. Producers themselves can, of course, make a positive contribution to market equilibrium by avoiding over-planting and I hope that they will do so.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authority Finance

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environement if he will publish the total of local authority expenditure (a) gross and (b) net on (i) education, (ii) housing, (iii) environmental services, (iv) law, order and protective services, (v) roads and transport, (vi) social services and (vii) other in each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86 or the most recent available year, showing total expenditure, current expenditure and capital expenditure separately.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information is published in "Local Government Financial Statistics England and Wales" for the years 1979-80 to 1982-83 inclusive. (Copies of which are available in the Library.) 1983-84 information will be published shortly and information for 1984-85 is expected to be published in summer 1986. Information for 1985-86 is available on a net expenditure basis only from local authorities's budgets.

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to vary local authorities' spending capacity under section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has had a number of representations from local authority associations, individual authorities and other concerned bodies for an increase in section 137 limits. The Government consider, however, that it would not be appropriate to increase the 2p limit currently applying before the Widdicombe inquiry reports. The inquiry has been asked specifically to clarify the limits and conditions governing discretionary spending by local authorities, including section 137 spending.

The Government do, however, accept that some local authorities would, unless action was taken, face a reduction in their section 137 spending capacity for 1986-87 as an indirect consequence of the rate support grant settlement for that year. For this reason my right hon. Friend will shortly be consulting local government about proposals to ensure that section 137 limits for 1986-87 are maintained at the level applying in 1985-86. This will help many of the hardest pressed authorities, including many in metropolitan areas.

Water Authorities (Effluent Sampling)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what controls he currently exercises over the effluent sampling procedures of the water authorities; and whether he will give details of the sampling frequencies adopted by each authority for (a) their own discharges and (b) other discharges for each year since 1980-81.

Mr. John Patten: Since the implementation of section 34, part II of the Control of Pollution Act in January 1985, it has been a condition of consents granted to water authorities by my right hon. Friend in respect of discharges from sewage treatment works that effluents are sampled in accordance with approved programmes. Sampling frequencies are specified within each authority's programme and they vary considerably according to the size of the works and the nature of the receiving waters. Details of samples actually taken are recorded on registers maintained by each authority and which are open for public inspection. Arrangements for sampling discharges made by bodies other than water authorities are matters for the individual authorities to decide.

Building Regulations

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to amend the building regulations to improve energy efficiency.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) on 16 December 1985 to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller), at column 13.

Local Authorities (Tenders)

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to prevent local authorities from inserting irrelevant provisions in tender invitations or contracts.

Mrs. Rumbold: An authority which abuses the contractual process in this way risks successful challenge in the courts. Consideration will be given to strengthening the existing law if it can be demonstrated that fresh legislation would indeed have that effect.

North Southwark Plan

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why, as indicated in the letter accompanying the call-in letter, the London borough of Southwark was not notified of the conflict between the north Southwark plan and circulars 22/80, 15/84 and 22/84 during the statutory preparation stages of the north Southwark plan.

Mr. Tracey: The London borough of Southwark should be well aware of policies contained in Government circulars. The general issues of conflict were raised in objections to the plan and aired at the public inquiry without the need for intervention by the Department.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why his Department did not give evidence indicating its concern about the conflict between the north Southwark plan and circulars 22/80, 15/84 and 22/84 at the north Southwark plan public inquiry.

Mr. Tracey: For the reasons given in answer to the earlier question the Secretary of State decided not to make formal objection and give evidence at a public inquiry.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he exercised his powers to call in the north Southwark plan under section 14(3) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 specifically on 28 January.

Mr. Tracey: It was believed that Southwark was to hold a meeting on 29 January when the position of the plan might be considered. To remove any uncertainty my right hon. Friend called in the plan prior to that meeting.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will allow the London borough of Southwark to adopt its statutory land use plan for north Southwark.

Mr. Tracey: No. My right hon. Friend is currently considering the plan following call-in on 29 January. It is hoped to issue a decision shortly.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review his Department's policy relating to financial aid to local authorities and other objectors at public inquiries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: It remains my view that, except in the very special circumstances of an error by the Department which results in unnecessary expenditure by a party, all parties at public inquiries should meet their own costs.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration was given by the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive to seismic factors in choosing Bradwell as one of the four potential sites for the disposal of radioactive nuclear waste which he announced in his statement of 25 February.

Mr. Waldegrave: In selecting Bradwell, NIREX was aware of the area's seismic history. The proposed site investigations will establish whether Bradwell would be geologically suitable for development as a disposal facility.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether the criteria used by the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive in identifying the four potential sites for the disposal of radioactive nuclear waste were approved by him; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will publish the criteria used by the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive to select the four potential sites for the disposal of radioactive nuclear waste which he announced in his statement of 25 February.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government have the responsibility to determine the policy for the management of radioactive waste management and the national strategy for its implementation. Against that background we have indicated to NIREX the broad criteria we would want a site to satisfy. These are set out in a booklet published by my Department and others entitled "Disposal Facilities on Land for Low and Intermediate-Level Radioactive Wastes: Principles for the Protection of the Human Environment". Copies are available in the Library.

Responsibility for the selection of individual sites rests with NIREX. I understand that it has recently sent the hon. Member a copy of its brochure explaining the procedures it followed in making its choice.

Palace of Westminster

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what recent representations he has received about the incidence of build-up of static electricity in the Palace of Westminster; and what action he has taken in consequence;

(2) what has been the cost of (a) gas, (b) electricity, (c) oil and (d) other fuels for the Palace of Westminster in each of the last five years.

Sir George Young: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Waste Disposal, Warrington

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what grounds he took into account when reaching his decision to allow an application by Manchester Ship Canal Company to tip waste on land at Moore, Warrington, to be decided by Cheshire county council; what consideration was given to any potential conflict of interest in respect of Cheshire county council; what weight was given to the views of Warrington borough council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend took full account of all the grounds raised in representations made to him, including those of Warrington borough council, which encompassed the argument that there was a potential conflict of interest in respect of Cheshire county council.

Grant-related Expenditure

Mrs. Currie asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make available his Department's publication "Grant Related Expenditure 1986-87".

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend has today placed copies of this document in the Library of the House. Copies have also been sent to every local authority in England and to the local authority associations.

ENERGY

Radioactive Material (Illegal Removal)

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he is satisfied with the monitoring equipment available to detect illegal removal of radioactive material from nuclear industrial and processing plants and from nuclear material storage depots.

Mr. Goodlad: I am aware of no problems with the equipment.

Sellafield (Radiation)

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) at what time the escape of radiation at Sellafield on 5 February commenced; at what time the escape was discovered; at what time actions were taken to halt the escape; and at what time the escape was stopped;

(2) if he will present a detailed list of the precise chemical and radiochemical composition of the matter which escaped from Sellafield on 5 February;

(3) if he can provide an estimate of the temperature and pressure of the liquid within the pipe, pump or other equipment, which resulted in the escape of the gases, mists and matter during the release which occurred at Sellafield on 5 February;

(4) if he will provide full information on the extent and severity of contamination of the building at Sellafield where a radiation escape occurred on 5 February;

(5) with reference to the radiation leak at Sellafield on 5 February, at what time evacuation was commenced; at what time evacuation was completed; how many workers were in the building at the time of the incident; how many workers remained in the building; what the function and location of the remaining workers was; how many workers were exposed to contamination; to what degree; and if he will make a statement;

(6) if he will provide further and detailed information on the maximum individual effective dose equivalent commitment, in terms of total body dose from sources giving external exposure and estimated internal exposure from any ingested or inhaled sources of radioactivity, in milli Sieverts, of any worker as a result of the incident on 5 February, and the collective effective dose equivalent commitment to the workers, in man milli Sieverts; and if he will make a statement;

(7) if he will detail the methods to be employed in the clean up of the contaminated area of Sellafield affected by the leak of 5 February; if he will estimate the length of time required to carry out the decontamination processes; if he will estimate the cost of clean up operations; and if he will make a statement;

(8) at what time the reprocessing line at Sellafield was closed down; what is the estimated cost that will be incurred due to cessation of operations following the radioactive leak at Sellafield on 5 February; and if he will make a statement;

(9) what was the source material from which the plutonium nitrate which escaped at Sellafield on 5 February was extracted.

Mr. Goodlad: Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate is carrying out an audit of safety at the Sellafield plant and this will take account of the incident of 5 February 1986. The findings of the audit will be made public in due course. In the meantime I have asked the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc to write to the hon. Member with the detailed information which he requests.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will estimate the savings to the United Kingdom's energy bill of bringing the building regulations up to the same standard as the best of European Economic Community countries;

(2) if he will estimate the savings to the United Kingdom's energy bill of bringing the building regulations up to the same standard as the average of European Economic Community countries;

(3) if his target of a 20 per cent. saving on the United Kingdom's total energy bill during Energy Efficiency Year is based on any assumption of changes in the building regulations.

Mr. David Hunt: The £7 billion estimate of the savings the nation could make through energy efficiency is not based on any specific assumption on future building regulations which apply to new construction.

Because of the different forms of regulations within the European Economic Community, only a broad estimate of the possible impact of different countries' regulations can be made; if all new homes in the United Kingdom were built to the energy efficiency standards currently applied to Danish housing, the effect after 10 years would be a reduction in energy consumption nationally of less than 1 per cent. The application of average energy efficiency standards within the Community would result in a reduction of less than half that figure.

Geological Survey

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he expects his Department to give oral evidence to Sir Clifford Butler's inquiry into the Geological Survey.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Officials from my Department have already given oral evidence to the inquiry on 17 February.

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department has made a written submission to Sir Clifford Butler's inquiry into the Geological Survey.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Yes. I have today placed copies of the evidence in the Library of the House.

Computers

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to how many computers of United States origin, or supplied by United States subsidiary companies, are in use in the United Kingdom nuclear industry.

Mr. Goodlad: This information is not readily available.

Trawsfynydd Power Station

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) why, on the occasion of an escape of radioactive gas from a pressure relief safety valve at Trawsfynydd power station on 21 February, an emergency alert was not established as soon as radioactive particles were found in the public land near the station; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether inspections are to be completed on the other pressure relief valve filters, besides the one involved in the discharge of gas on 21 February, of the R1 Trawsfynydd power station reactor, and on any similar filters fitted to other Magnox and advanced gas cooled reactor power stations; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether safety checks are to be completed on the pressure relief valves of the R1 Trawsfynydd reactor, on the identical valves of the R2 Trawsfynydd reactor, and on any other similar valves fitted to other Magnox and advanced gas cooled reactor power stations; and if he will make a statement;

(4) why the particular pressure relief valve involved in the gas discharge on 21 February at Trawsfynydd power station lifted on that occasion;

(5) why, when radioactive gas began to escape from a pressure relief safety valve at Trawsfynydd power station on 21 February at 07.50 hours and the first radioactive particles were found at 09.30 hours, a site incident, as specified by the station emergency plan, was not declared until 12.03.

Mr. Goodlad: I have asked the chairman of the CEGB to provide this information. The CEGB, as operator, is responsible for the safety of its operations, and carried out its own technical inquiry immediately after the incident.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Schools (Politics)

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received since 1 March about his draft circular on politics in schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Four letters have been received since 1 March 1986 and a further six were received in February. It is too early to draw conclusions from the consultations, because the period set aside for them is not yet complete and more replies are expected.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the current position of the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: There has now been a settlement of the 1985 pay claim giving teachers a 6·9 per cent. increase backdated to April last year and a further 1·6 per cent., or 8·5 per cent. in all, from the end of this month. Talks on 1986 and beyond (and covering pay levels, pay structure, appraisal and training, and teachers' duties and responsibilities) have begun under the independent panel appointed by ACAS. It is distressing that even so there has not been a full resumption of normal working in the schools.

University Teachers

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the trend shown by the pay of university staff since 1979; how this compares with movements in the retail prices index in the same period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Between April 1979 and April 1985 (the date of the last pay increase) the salaries of university non-clinical academic and related staff have increased by 82·2 per cent. as compared with a rise in the retail prices index of 74·6 per cent. during the same period.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university teachers in the United Kingdom have taken university teaching posts abroad in the past five years; and in what specialities.

Mr. Walden [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1986, c. 473.]: The available information is shown in the following table. The intended subject department outside the United Kingdom is not known.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Philip Hartlebury

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the most recent representations which Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Zimbabwe with regard to Philip Hartlebury, a British subject.

Mrs. Chalker: The most recent ministerial representation to the Government of Zimbabwe was made in January 1985 by my right hon. and learned Friend when he raised the case with the Minister of State in the Prime Minister's office during his visit to Zimbabwe.

Since then, our high commission in Harare has continued to ensure that the Zimbabwean authorities are aware of our hope that the man can be released soon. Its most recent inquiries were made in mid-February of this year.

British Exports (France)

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make respresentations to the French Government regarding the level of fines on British lorry drivers in respect of deliveries, including lamb, from Britain to France.

Mr. Eggar: We are ready to intervene, as we have on several occasions in the past, on behalf of British nationals in cases where there is clear evidence of unfair penalties being levied by overseas authorities. I would be happy to look at any individual cases which the hon. Member may wish to draw to my attention.

Sahara Arab Republic

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have been held with representatives of the Polisario Front about recognition of the Sahara Arab Republic.

Mr. Renton: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave the hon. Member on 17 December, at columns 133-34.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received from the Organisation of African Unity seeking recognition by the United Kingdom of the Sahara Arab Republic.

Mr. Renton: None.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what human rights organisations in El Salvador have had meetings with Her Majesty's diplomatic representatives in the period since January 1984.

Mr. Eggar: Our representatives in El Salvador have had meetings with the four main human rights organisations: Tutela Legal, Socorro Juridico, the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on Human Rights in El Salvador, and others with an interest in the subject.

GCHQ, Cheltenham

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest position of those employees at Government Communications Headquarters who have rejoined or remained in a trade union.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend gave the right hon. Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Healey) on 19 March, at column 293.

Iran-Iraq War

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence has been provided to Her Majesty's Government about the use of chemical warfare in the conflict between Iraq and Iran, what examination Her Majesty's Government have made of such evidence; what action Her Majesty's Government have taken to condemn the use of these chemical weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: On 14 March 1986 the Secretary General released the report of a team of specialists on allegations of the use of chemical weapons in the conflict between Iran and Iraq. In his covering note the Secretary General stated that the specialists had confirmed the use of chemical weapons by Iraqi forces against Iranian forces in the course of the present Iranian offensive into Iraqi territory. The report is being considered by the United Nations Security Council and the United Kingdom is closely involved in these discussions. Our policy on chemical weapons is well known: we condemn the use of chemical weapons wherever and whenever it occurs, including the clear breach of the Geneva protocol detailed in the Secretary General's report.

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have condemned the shooting down of a civilian aircraft by an Iraqi fighter plane over Iranian airspace; what advice he has given to British passengers travelling in Iran; and what representations he has made to the Government of Iraq over this matter.

Mr. Renton: We condemn the destruction of any aircraft in commercial use and consider that the use of armed force against civil aviation is incompatible with the norms governing international behaviour. We fully supported Security Council resolution 582, which was unanimously adopted on 24 February, and which deplored attacks on civilian aircraft. At present no British aircraft fly into Iran. British passengers on other airlines who make inquiries are advised of the current threat to Iranian airspace.

WALES

Nurses

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of mental handicap community nurses employed in Wales for each year since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is given in the following table:

Mental handicap community nurses employed

*Year	Number	Whole-time equivalent
1980	8	8·0
1981	19	17·5
1982	23	21·1
1983	40	39·6
1984	48	48·0
1985	60	60·0

* As at 30 September.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each year since 1979 the number of registered sick children's nurses in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information available centrally is not sufficiently detailed to allow registered sick children's nurses to be separately identified.

Social Services Departments

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to increase funding to local authority social services departments in proportion to the increased number of elderly people living in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The impact of the increasing numbers of elderly people on the work of the local authority social services departments is reflected in the annual rate support grant settlements. In addition we have set aside further provision of £1 million in 1986-87, rising to £5 million over three years, to finance schemes arising out of our "A Good Old Age" initiative about which, following recent consultation, we expect to make a further anouncement.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many manufacturing jobs have been created in Wales so far in the current year; and how many have been created in Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: It is not possible to say how many new manufacturing jobs have been created since 1979. However, projects for which offers of regional selective assistance or, where applicable, regional development grants were accepted, or which were allocated Government financed factories have promised to provide over 90,000 jobs in Wales since May 1979.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many manufacturing jobs have been lost in Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Information is not available in the form requested, but data on net changes in the total of manufacturing employees in employment is provided in the Department of Employment's quarterly series. Following are the figures up to the latest available date:

Employees in Employment in Manufacturing Industries

	Number
September 1980	277,000
September 1981	238,000
September 1982	222,000
September 1983	213,000
September 1984	209,000
September 1985	207,000

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs in the agricultural sector have been lost in Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Figures for jobs in the agricultural sector as a whole are not available. However, the agricultural census shows the following number of persons engaged in work on agricultural holdings at June in each of the last six years:

	Number
1980	66,400
1981	66,700
1982	66,500
1983	65,300
1984	66,800
1985	68,400

Public Transport

Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he proposes to make for the operation in Wales of the grants provided for by section 108 of the Transport Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: £100,000 is to be made available for these grants in 1986-87. This will be used to assist in the establishment, continuance or improvement of any public passenger transport project for the benefit of persons residing in rural areas in Wales. The particular conditions of the grant scheme—which were established in consultations with local authorities in Wales—are set out in the grant memorandum a copy of which I have placed in the Library of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Social Security Bill

Q108. Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister what representations she has received about the impact of the Social Security Bill on disabled people and those who care for them; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him and to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security on 25 February at columns 527-28.

"Official Report"

Q129. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what is her general practice in deciding whether to seek to correct the Official Report in respect of speeches or statements by her in the House in cases where it is subesequently drawn to her attention that an error may have been made; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: If an error is drawn to my attention I would normally seek to correct it in an appropriate way.

Engagements

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Hunter asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Beith asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Dormand asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 20 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. I attended the memorial service for Mr. Palme in Westminster abbey. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

"Fire Safety in the Home"

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to draw urgently to the attention of all Government Departments, and to local and other public authorities, the conclusions and recommendations of the report entitled "Fire Safety in the Home", published by the fire services committee of the Greater Manchester council; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government Departments principally concerned have already received a copy of the report and are considering the conclusions and recommendations.

Intergovernmental Undertaking

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister who signed the intergovernmental undertaking published in Comnd. 9395 on behalf of the United Kingdom Government.

The Prime Minister: The 1984 Intergovernmental Agreement was concluded at the Foreign Affairs Council on 2 and 3 October 1984. The United Kingdom was represented by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. In accordance with practice at such meetings the assent of the member states was not given by formal signature but by their acceptance of the undertaking during the meeting.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Guinness-Distillers Merger

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he proposes to take of the implications for the export trade in deciding on a possible reference of the proposed revised Guinness-Distillers merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Howard: The Minister of State for Industry and Information Technology will make his decision in the light of advice from the Director General of Fair Trading. The implications for the export trade, together with all other relevant factors, will be taken into account.

Manufactured Goods (Exports and Imports)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the real terms index for United Kingdom exports and imports of manufactured goods, taking 1979 as 100 in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom Trade in Manufactures Volume Indices—1979=100

	Exports	Imports
1979	100·0	100·0
1980	101·0	99·2
1981	95·0	97·2
1982	96·7	106·4
1983	96·4	120·5
1984	105·4	133·0
1985	111·9	139·5

Foam-filled Furniture

Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to modify the regulations regarding foam-filled furniture in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) on 14 March at column 600.

Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has about research into the safety aspects of foam-filled furniture in the United States; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have received a number of reports and papers on this topic, from which it is clear that research in the United States has not produced definite answers to the problem of flammability of foam-filled furniture. In California fire-resistant foams are required by law, but these products containing well-known fire retardant additives do not provide a reliable and positive answer to the problem of ignition of typical combinations of fabric and filling. In one well-publicised test at the National Bureau of Standards the burning of a chair made of "California foam" produced more heat more quickly than chairs made of a standard foam. Alternative types of foam such as those with high resilience, melamine foams and foams containing hydrated alumina are considerably more expensive than standard foams. All this information is available as background to my current discussions with the British furniture industry on ways of improving the fire resistance and performance in fire of upholstered furniture in Britain.

Cigarettes (Upholstery Fires)

Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether a survey on the ability of cigarettes to continue smouldering when placed in a situation comparable to that under which upholstery ignitability is tested has been instituted; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Department undertook a survey to identify any self-extinguishing properties in cigarettes on the United Kingdom market last year, using a procedure published by the National Bureau of Standards of the United States. No significant difference was discovered in the smouldering properties of various brands.

The United States Congress has commissioned a technical study group under the Cigarette Safety Act to examine the feasibility of producing self-extinguishing cigarettes and to report by mid-1987. The results of this work will be closely studied in the United Kingdom by those concerned with fire prevention and also by those concerned with the health aspects of smoking.

Polyurethane Foam

Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether a report has been yet submitted by Queen Mary college, university of London, concerning its research into flexible polyurethane foam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The research aspects of the project at Queen Mary college, sponsored by the British Rubber Manufacturers Association, into "combustion-modified" polyurethane foam are complete: a report should be in the hands of the sponsors by the end of this month. Development work is proceeding.

It is likely, because of higher cost and different specification procedures, that products developed from this research will find application in contract seating before they are used in domestic furniture.

ABTA (Stabiliser Agreement)

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement regarding the effects of the material changes proposed to be made by the Association of British Travel Agents to the stabiliser agreement as upheld by the Restrictive Practices Court in December 1983 Case: 1978 No. 13 (E & W).

Mr. Howard: Under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, it is the responsibility of the Director General of Fair Trading to refer certain agreements to the Restrictive Practices Court for a judgment as to whether the restrictions on those agreements are contrary to the public interest. If, subsequently, the Director-General of Fair Trading obtains prima facie evidence of a material change in the circumstances on which the court's decision was based, he has powers to seek leave to apply for to the court for a variation of its decision.

"Fire Safety in the Home"

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration he has given to the report entitled "Fire Safety in the Home", published by the fire services committee of the Greater Manchester council; if there is any action he will be taking arising from the report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I shall take account of the report in my current review of legislation on the fire resistance of domestic upholstered furniture. I hope to announce the results of this review shortly.

General Motors-BL Merger

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assurances are being sought in respect of continuity of employment for Bedford employees in the event of the merger of General Motors and British Leyland trucks and vans.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No decisions have been made but the Government's aim is a solution which offers the best prospects of securing long-term jobs in the United Kingdom commercial vehicles industry as a whole. International competitiveness is the only guarantee of the long-term viability of the industry and the protection of jobs.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on future levels of British truck production at different plants of the proposed merger between General Motors and British Leyland's truck division;

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on future levels of British van production at different plants of the proposed merger between General Motors and British Leyland's van division.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No decisions have been made about the future of the businesses. However, the Government would like to see increased United Kingdom van and truck output as a result of improving competitiveness.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications for the proposed merger between General Motors and British Leyland's van and truck divisions of General Motors' worldwide trucks and van sales strategy.

Mr. Peter Morrison: GM has told me that should its proposals to acquire the Land Rover-Leyland businesses be accepted, the United Kingdom would be the European centre for its truck and van operations, and that the new entity would have access to GM's worldwide sales network, including that of Opel for vans in Europe.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on General Motors' investment programme for Dunstable and Luton plants in the context of discussions on the proposed merger with British Leyland trucks and vans.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No decisions have been made. Should GM's proposals be accepted, it has said that it would be willing to give undertakings that an appropriate level of investment would be made in the business to achieve competitive future models and facilities.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the future of British Leyland's test centre at Leyland in the light of the proposed merger with General Motors and of its test centres at Luton and Millbrook.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No decisions have been made. The utilisation of particular facilities will be a matter for the future management of the businesses.

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the proposed merger between General Motors and British Leyland on the constituent parts of the British motor parts central stocking and distribution sector;

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications for British stampings factory units of the proposed merger between British Leyland and General Motors.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No decisions have been made. The Government are seeking a solution which offers the best prospects for the United Kingdom commercial vehicle industry as a whole, and full consideration will be given to all relevant factors including the effect on the components and distribution sectors.

Military Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications for the British commercial vehicles industry of the agreement between General Motors and M.A.N. on military vehicles.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I understand that this agreement is very recent. However GM has told me that it attaches a high priority to serving the needs of the United Kingdom armed forces from United Kingdom sources as it has done since the 1930s.

Commercial Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of future levels of British production and demand for vans and trucks.

Mr. Peter Morrison: We do not make any independent forecast of future levels of British production and demand for vans and trucks, but we do carefully consider the forecasts made available to us by firms and other organisations.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the main provisions of the negotiating mandate, in relation to the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement, agreed by the EEC Council of Ministers meeting on 10 and 11 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the outcome of his discussions with European partners concerning a new multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The mandate contains much detail on the negotiating limits given to the Commission in relation to particular features of the negotiating line both on the proposed protocol on the proposed agreements with individual countries. For reasons the hon. Member will understand these have to remain confidential. I gave the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) some information by written answer on 12 March and at this stage I cannot usefully add to this. I shall remain in close touch with the negotiations and maintain contact with the industries and other interested parties; I shall also inform the House of significant developments.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young People (Offences)

9. Mr. Woodall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage increase in the number of young people under 21 years cautioned for, or found guilty of, burglary between 1979 and 1984.

22. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people aged under 21 years were cautioned for, and found guilty of, burglary in 1979 and 1984, respectively.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people under 21 years were cautioned for, or found guilty of, indictable offences in 1979 and 1984, respectively.

Mr. Hurd: In 1979 just under 275,000 offenders under 21 were cautioned for or found guilty of indictable offences; the figure for 1984 was nearly 305,000. Of these, 169,000 in 1979 and just under 178,000 in 1984 were offences of theft or handling stolen goods. For burglary, the figures were 49,400 in 1979 and 59,900 in 1984, an increase of 21 per cent.

32. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage increase in the number of young people under 21 years cautioned for, and found guilty of, indictable offences between 1979 and 1984.

Mr. Mellor: 11 per cent.

37. Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage increase in the number of young people aged under 21 years cautioned for, or found guilty of, theft between 1979 and 1984.

Mr. Mellor: Five per cent.

Crime Prevention

11. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial assistance is available from his Department for crime prevention measures by (a) local authorities and (b) private citizens.

Mr. Hurd: The main ways in which the Government provide funds for crime prevention projects are through the Department of the Environment's urban programme, under which £6·3 million was allocated in 1985; and the expanded community programme, which is currently allocating about £18 million for places devoted to crime prevention projects.

21. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance his Department provides for crime prevention for low-income families.

23. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any proposals to give greater assistance to low-income families and pensioner households in crime prevention.

27. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce grants for crime prevention for pensioners and low-income families.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Financial support through the urban and community programmes continues to be available for schemes designed to prevent crime or alleviate its effects.

Many such schemes are specifically intended to help those most at risk, including low-income families and the elderly. We increasingly provide advice to local authorities, the police and the community generally in promoting crime prevention initiatives. The Home Office Standing Conference on Crime Prevention, through its working group on residential burglary, is seeking to devise a low-cost security package to protect residential dwellings which might be purchased by those living in particularly vulnerable areas such as the inner city.

35. Mr. Welsh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce legislation to provide that expenditure by local authorities on designated measures of crime prevention should be eligible for the same support from central funds as expenditure on the police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government make funds available to local authorities for crime prevention projects through the urban and community programmes, but we do not consider legislation of the kind called for by the hon. Member justified. Much crime prevention activity does not require new money, but rather the better use of existing resources.

41. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new publicity initiatives his Department is launching to promote awareness of crime prevention initiatives.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have recently launched a major publicity campaign in the north of England, at a cost of £1·7 million, primarily aimed at the prevention of burglary and autocrime. We are also involved in producing a wide range of publicity material on a variety of topics including, local publicity for five local crime prevention demonstration projects, crime prevention material for ethnic minorities, and a new booklet on shop theft. Arrangements have also been made for the distribution of leaflets on the prevention of autocrime with all vehicle licence reminders.

42. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to sustain the progress made in developing crime prevention.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are making progress on a number of fronts:

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister chaired a successful seminar on 8 January which will be followed up in the summer.

Five working groups have been set up to look at: car security, residential burglary, shop theft, commercial robbery, violence associated with licensed premises.

Five local demonstration projects with Home Office funded co-ordinators have been established.

A national crime prevention initiative funded through the expanded community programme is being developed.

The successful "Magpies" publicity campaign has been extended to the north of the country.

Burglary

18. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences of burglary were recorded in the most recent quarter for which figures are available and in the equivalent quarter of 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The police recorded 228,000 burglaries in the fourth quarter of 1985 compared with 165,000 in the fourth quarter of 1980. Because of changes in the counting rules from the beginning of 1980, comparisons with 1979 would be misleading. The number of recorded burglaries last year was 3 per cent. less than in 1984.

Constabulary (North-East)

19. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received any recent request to increase the establishment of any constabulary in the north-east.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have received an application for an increase in police establishment from the Northumbria interim police authority.

Immigration

20. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from representatives of immigration officers or their unions about the draft guidelines on the handling of representations by hon. Members in immigration cases since 11 February.

Mr. Waddington: None.

Civil Defence

24. Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government have any plans to seek to require local authorities to increase their emergency staff establishments to enable them to meet their civil defence responsibilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Government intend that the new fire and civil defence authorities will be adequately staffed to meet their civil defence resposibilities. We have no plans to extend the temporary controls available for these authorities to others, but consideration will be given to what guidance on manpower levels would be right when the assessment of progress on implementation of the 1983 regulations is complete.

47. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government have a target for the number of civil defence volunteers to be recruited by the end of 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Not at present, but we will consider this when the assessment of progress on implementation of the 1983 regulations is complete.

49. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has contingency plans for calling on civil defence volunteers to assist the emergency services in the event of terrorist use of chemical weapons or materials.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No, civil defence volunteers are community-based and their help in any emergency would be a matter for local decision.

61. Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to set a date by which local authorities will be required to undertake the responsibilities laid down in the 1983 civil defence regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is intended that target dates will form part of the planned programme of implementation of the 1983 regulations which will be issued to local authorities later this year.

Prison Officers (Training)

25. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to increase the basic training of prison officers.

Mr. Mellor: No. The initial training course for prison officers was thoroughly reviewed and extended, last year, by one week.

Police Officers (Training)

26. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce proposals for a minimum six months' basic training for police officers.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The training of police recruits is already based on the concept of a two-year apprenticeship, including a lengthy period of initial training centrally as well as further periods of training in force during the two years.

Miss Hilda Murrell

28. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Northumberland about the progress of police inquiries into the death of Miss Hilda Murrell; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Responsibility for the investigation into the death of Miss Murrell rests with the chief constable of West Mercia. The position remains unchanged from the reply given to the hon. Member on 13 February, at column 518.

Offences Against the Person (Penalties)

29. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the level of penalties available to the courts for offences against the person involving or including robbery.

Mr. Mellor: We receive few representations about robbery as distinct from other crimes of violence. Since 1 January the Department has received 45 letters about penalties for offences including robbery, 20 of which were forwarded by right hon. and hon. Members. The maximum penalty upon conviction for robbery is life imprisonment.

Prison Officers (House Purchase)

30. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in negotiations about the arrangements whereby officers of the prison service, who are occupying prison property, can buy their homes.

Mr. Mellor: A third and final offer, combining the opportunity to buy quarters at discount and changes in associated conditions of service, was decisively rejected by a ballot of members of the Prison Officer's Association last December. In the light of this outcome we are considering whether there are alternative ways, consistent with their existing conditions of service, in which prison officers may be helped to own their own homes.

Police Complaints Procedure

31. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will introduce proposals for a police complaints procedure wholly independent of the police force.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. The Police Complaints Authority was established only on 29 April 1985 but is already demonstrating its value as a wholly independent body supervising the investigation of serious complaints against the police.

52. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he proposes to seek to make any changes regarding the availability of information to complainants arising from cases investigated under the new police complaints procedures and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No.

Crime Statistics

33. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the crime statistics for the calendar year 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics of notifiable offences recorded by the police in 1985 were published on 13 March in Home Office Statistical Bulletin issue number 4/86.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the clear-up rate for all crimes in Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the following table.

Clear-up rate for notifiable offences recorded by the police in Wales

	Percentage
1980	50
1981	49
1982	50
1983	50
1984	47
1985	47

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes of violence have taken place in Wales in each of the last six years.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of notifiable offences recorded by the police in Wales in 1985 were published, by type of offence, in Home Office Statistical Bulletin, issue No. 4/86 (table 6); corresponding figures for earlier years are given in the annual publication "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (table 2.5 of the issue for 1984, Cmnd. 9621).

Prison Population

34. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population on 31 December 1985 and on the most recent available date.

Mr. Mellor: On 31 December 1985 the prison population in England and Wales was 44,419. On 14 March 1986 it was 47,009.

56. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current prison population of England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: On 14 March 1986 the prison population in England and Wales was 47,009.

Police Stations

36. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of police stations in west Yorkshire in each of the years 1975, 1983 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable that there were 93 police stations in west Yorkshire in 1975, 73 in 1983 and 71 in December 1985.

55. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations there were in England and Wales in each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not recorded centrally for all police areas in England and Wales.

54. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations there were in Wales in each of the years 1976, 1983 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable concerned that there were 481 police stations in Wales in 1976, 430 in 1983 and 409 in December 1985.

Tottenham (Public Disorder)

38. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached on the lessons to be learnt from the report entitled "Public Disorder in Tottenham, 6th October 1985" submitted to him by Deputy Assistant Commissioner Richards.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Mr. Richards' report was addressed to the Haringey Police Community Consultative Group, which met to consider it on 13 March. The Commisioner is considering the lessons to be learnt from the riots last autumn at Brixton and Tottenham in his review of tactics and equipment.

Complaints Against the Police

39. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of complaints against the police have resulted in prosecution in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The available information gives the number of prosecutions brought each year against police officers as a result of complaints from members of the public, but does not indicate the year in which each complaint was made. The following table shows that number as a proportion of all complaints cases completed in the corresponding year. Withdrawn complaints have been excluded. Comparable information is not available for the years prior to 1978.

Year	Per cent.
1979	0·7
1980	0·5
1981	0·4
1982	0·3
1983	0·3
1984	0·2

* In 1978 there was an abnormally high number of traffic prosecutions brought against Metropolitan officers as a result of complaints.

Detention Centres

40. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the future of detention centres.

Mr. Mellor: Several aspects of the detention centre system are being considered.

Licensing Hours

43. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received in respect of flexible licensing hours.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier today to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox).

Shops Bill [Lords]

44. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Scotland regarding the Shops Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that a separate record is not kept of representations from Scotland and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. But the number of letters received has not been large and some of those which have been brought to my attention were clearly written by people who think Sunday trading in Scotland is restricted.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

45. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the latest number and progress of neighbourhood watch schemes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There are over 9,200 neighbourhood watch schemes in existence in England and Wales, the number having almost trebled in the past year. Steps are being taken to monitor the progress of a number of schemes and preliminary indications suggest that, where they are carefully designed and introduced, crime is reduced. The results of this work will provide useful lessons in developing further schemes.

Schools (Police Liaison)

46. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are being taken to increase and improve police liaison with schools.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A joint working party of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Society of Education Officers has been examining the nature and extent of police involvement with schools and a guidance document designed to encourage co-operation and understanding at local level is to be published shortly.

Citizens Advice Bureaux

48. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had regarding the future ability of citizens advice bureaux to provide advice on matters related to his responsibilities; and what replies he has given.

Mr. Waddington: None.

Crossbows

50. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is yet in a position to announce whether he plans to introduce legislation to restrict the sale of crossbows; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend is considering whether any steps could usefully be taken to try to prevent crossbows falling into the wrong hands. He is expected to reach conclusions shortly.

Police-Community Forums

51. Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will next be meeting Her Majesty's inspectors of constabularies to discuss police-community forums.

Mr. Giles Shaw: As I explained in reply to a question from my hon. Friend on 20 February, at column 302, Her Majesty's inspectors keep us informed on a regular basis by means of their inspection reports of the progress that is being made in the establishment of consultative arrangements. This topic is not the subject of specific meetings with Her Majesty's inspectors.

Search Warrants

55. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an investigation into the way in which the search warrant system is currently working; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 made significant changes to the procedure for police applications for search warrants, designed to ensure that those issuing warrants are fully aware of the circumstances of the application before they reach a decision. The code of practice on the searching of premises, which accompanies the Act, lays down detailed requirements on the conduct of police searches. The principal purpose of the code of practice is to see that search powers are exercised responsibly, and with minimum distress to those whose premises are the subject of a search.

These provisions have been in operation only since 1 January 1986. I understand that as part of its programme of research to monitor the operation of the 1984 Act the Economic and Social Research Council has decided to support research into the operation of the search and seizure provisions under part II of this Act. This will include arrangements for obtaining and executing search warrants.

Hospital and Transport Staff (Attacks)

57. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, when he next meets the chairman of the Association of Chief Police Officers, he will discuss steps taken by the police to prevent attacks on hospital staff and transport staff.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Violence to staff was discussed at the recent seminar on crime prevention chaired by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister which was attended by the president of the Association of Chief Police Officers. As a result of the seminar, a working party has been established to conduct a study of crime, including violence to passengers and staff, on the London Underground. Studies on violence to staff, including particularly road transport staff and NHS staff, are also being undertaken.

Unsolicited Mail

58. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given in the formulation of policy on crime prevention, and particularly the prevention of burglary, to the problems of quantities of unsolicited mail indicating the absence of the occupier of a house.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Home Office has been in touch with the distributors of free newspapers and other material about how best to tackle the crime hazards which can be caused by unsolicited literature. A code of practice for publishers produced by the Association of Free Newspapers now includes a crime prevention element. In addition, police forces advise householders to seek the help of a neighbour to ensure unsolicited mail is not left visible while they are away.

Special Constables

59. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the role of special constables.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We see an important role for the special constabulary as a trained body of reserves to assist the regular police at times of unusual pressure and as a practical link between the police and the public. We shall continue to encourage chief officers to recruit as many special constables as they can usefully train and deploy for various tasks, including crime prevention. Last year there was a further modest increase in the number of special constables in England and Wales bringing the total to 16,186 at 31 December 1985.

Freemasonry

60. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from all chief constables about their policy on the membership of freemasons' lodges by members of their forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No. The police regulations require police officers to abstain from any activity which is likely to interfere with the impartial discharge of their duties. It is for chief officers of police to determine whether guidance should be issued to their forces on the extent to which membership of a masonic lodge might be regarded as conflicting with this statutory requirement. All chief officers of police have received copies of the guidance which was issued by the Metropolitan police.

Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act

62. Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has decided to seek to alter the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act to allow information about a wanted offender to be released to the public.

Mr. Mellor: The requirement of anonymity for a person accused of rape provided by section 6 of the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1976 applies only after an information has been laid or the defendant has appeared before a court; it needs not hinder inquiries, including the release of information about a person the police wish to interview, up to that point. As my hon. Friend is aware, we are giving sympathetic consideration to the proposal of the Criminal Law Revision Committee that section 6 should be repealed.

BBC (Output Balance)

63. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he takes to monitor the British Broadcasting Corporation's output in respect of acting in conformity with its charter and producing a politically balanced output of programmes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question by the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 20 February, at column 302.

Protection of Animals Act 1911

64. Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to amend the Protection of Animals Act 1911; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have no present plans to amend the Protection of Animals Act 1911. We share the public abhorrence of acts of cruelty against domestic and captive animals, but believe that the existing law deals adequately with these offences.

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many behaviour-modifying drugs, by type, have been issued to inmates of Her Majesty's prisons during the last seven years; and what proportion of such drugs issued was valium;

(2) how many behaviour-modifying drugs have been issued to inmates in Her Majesty's prisons Holloway and Styal during the last seven years; what proportion of such drugs issued was valium; and how many inmates admitted to either of these prisons during the same period had been prescribed drugs to be taken on a regular basis by their general practitioner prior to admission.

Mr. Mellor: Statistical records of medicines administered to inmate patients to not enable identification of specific proprietary brands (such as valium) or their generic equivalents. Statistical records of medicines prescribed for patients before their reception into prison custody are not kept by the Department.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report of the interdepartmental working party reviewing the operation of the criminal injuries compensation scheme.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that the report is currently being completed and will be submitted shortly.

Fires (Statistics)

Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give figures for fatal and non-fatal casualties from accidental fires in dwellings, by source of ignition, in 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Provisional figures of casualties from accidental fires in dwellings in the United Kingdom in 1984 analysed by source of ignition, are published in table 11 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin, issue No. 3/86, "Summary Fire Statistics United Kingdom 1984". A more detailed analysis, of final figures, by source of ignition will be given in "Fire Statistics United Kingdom 1984" which it is planned to publish in May. Information for 1985 is not yet available.

Community Radio

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to complete his consideration of the recommendations of the advisory panel on community radio.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are not yet in a position to say when our consideration will be completed.

"Fire Safety in the Home"

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the report entitled "Fire Safety in the Home", published by the fire services committee of the Greater Manchester council; if there is any other action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Home Office officials are considering the report, which was recently sent to the Department and will consult as necessary with the other Government Departments concerned. The matters raised in the report which are primarily for this Department relate to the arrangements for fire safety education and publicity and the effectiveness of automatic fire detectors in the home. Both these subjects are kept under regular review.

Entry Refusals

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Islington North of 16 January, Official Report, columns 623-25 concerning arrivals from Bangladesh, how many of them refused entry were (a) subsequently given temporary admission, (b) returned to Bangladesh and (c) returned to a third country;

(2) pursuant to his reply of 16 January, Official Report, columns 623-24, concerning persons denied entry, how many of those refused entry were (a) subsequently given temporary admission, (b) returned to their country of origin and (c) returned to a third country.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 17 March, c. 9-10]: The precise information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The following table gives the readily available information. Information on the destination of those removed and on the nationality of those granted temporary admission is not available.

	Numbers of passengers removed from the United Kingdom during December 1985 after being refused entry		Numbers of passengers granted temporary admission during December 1985 following an initial refusal

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for each year since 1979, the numbers and ranks of Metropolitan police officers disciplined, demoted, suspended, dismissed from the force or required to resign following a successful civil action against the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for a wrongful act by an officer.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 24 February 1986, c. 416]: I understand that, in the years 1980 to 1985, only one case occurred in which Metropolitan police officers were subjected to disciplinary proceedings following a successful civil action against the Commissioner. In that case, which was in 1982, four officers were charged with disciplinary offences. One officer admitted the offence and was punished by a reduction in his rate of pay; the three others were found not guilty.

In most cases where a complainant pursues a civil action, he refuses to make a statement for the purpose of an investigation, which cannot then be completed. Where the civil action is successful, the case is reviewed to determine whether further investigation should be undertaken. Regard is had to the time that has elapsed since the incident on which the civil action was based, to the effect of the passage of time on the witnesses' ability to recall events and on the officer's ability to defend himself and to the difference in the standards of proof in civil proceedings and disciplinary proceedings.

DEFENCE

Undergraduates (Army Sponsorship)

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of undergraduate students who are at present being sponsored at (a) universities, (b) polytechnics and (c) colleges of higher education by Her Majesty's forces; and what income they are receiving per annum under (i) the cadetship scheme and (ii) the bursary scheme.

Mr. Lee: The numbers requested are as follows:

Royal Navy
(including Women's Royal Naval Service and Royal Marines)

	No.
Cadetships	79
Bursaries	119
Medical/Dental Cadets	*44
Nominations†	29

* includes nine bursars—only the RN offers medical bursaries.
† young serving officers who decide to read for a degree after entering the Service.

Numbers of students subdivided into universities, polytechnics and colleges of higher education are not held centrally for the Royal Navy.

Army

	Universities	Polytechnics	Further Education Colleges
Cadets	120	6	—
Bursars	345	60	12
Medical/Dental Cadets	115	—	—
In-Service Students	24	—	—
	RAF
Cadets	229	20	1
Bursars	40	7	1
Medical/Dental Cadets	*20	—	—

* This figure relates to numbers of awards made in 1985-86 and not numbers in residence.

Figures exclude those sponsored and reading for degrees at the Royal Military College of Science.

Under the university cadetship scheme, students are commissioned to the appropriate service before beginning their further education and receive full service pay for the three-four years of their course. For the Army and Royal Air Force the following scale applies:

	£ per annum
On appointment	5,060
After 1 year	5,670
After 2 years	6,280

In the Royal Navy cadets serve for up to one year in the service before entering further education and they are therefore paid as serving officers as follows:

	£ per annum
Before entry to further education	5,172
During first student year	5,796
During second student year	6,420
During third student year	7,490

Medical and dental cadets for each service are paid as follows:

	£ per annum
On appointment	5,810
After 1 year	6,505
After 2 years	7,195

Bursars receive £900 per annum in each service.

Northern Ireland (Army Units)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make an official visit to Army units stationed in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Younger: I hope to do so shortly.

Computers

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many computers supplied by DEC are in use by his Department and in the armed forces.

Mr. Norman Lamont: DEC computers are in widespread use in the Department and in the armed services. They range from large mainframe computers through to microcomputers. Some are supplied by contractors other than DEC as part of a larger project. The precise number in use would require disproportionate effort to determine.

North American Air Defence (Command and Control Systems)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 11 March to the hon. Member for Islington, North, Official Report, column 795, he will state the nature of the training exercise concerned.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 22 November 1985, at column 354.

EMPLOYMENT

Visual Display Units

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General, in the light of the latest Swedish study showing that mice exposed to low-level radiation from visual display units produce a higher than average incidence of stillborn or deformed offspring, what steps he proposes to take to strengthen the National Radiological Protection Board's powers to regulate and control hazards arising from low level radiation.

Mr. Trippier: Early reports of the Swedish study suggested a higher than average incidence of birth defects but in fact no significant increase was found. The National Radiological Protection Board does not consider that emissions from visual display units present a risk during pregnancy.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General if, in the light of the industrial tribunal's decision in the cases of Mrs. Hazel Johnson from Inverness, he proposes to issue any further guidelines to employers in case of pregnant women working with visual display units.

Mr. Trippier: The Health and Safety Executive has recently published a free guidance leaflet on working with visual display units. The leaflet advises that there is no reason for pregnant women to stop working with visual display units but they should consult a doctor if they have any doubts.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what steps he proposes to take in conjunction with the Health and Safety Executive to seek to control static electricity and heat build-up in offices from visual display units.

Mr. Trippier: Existing Health and Safety Executive guidance deals with the control of static electricity and other relevant environmental factors. The executive continues to keep possible health risks from visual display units under review. Guidance will be revised as necessary.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Patchett asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the latest unemployment figures for the Barnsley, East Constituency, categorised by sex, age and the duration of unemployment for the last month for which statistics are available.

Mr. Lang: Following is the requested information, which is available in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of people who would be taken out of tax, and the cost to the Exchequer, if personal allowances were increased by (a) indexation of 5·7 per cent. and (b) 5 per cent., 10 per cent., 15 per cent., and 20 per cent. above indexation in 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: The information is as follows:

Option	Full year cost (£ million)	Reduction in number of taxpayers *('000s)
Indexation	1,280	500
Indexation and a further 5 per cent. on allowances	2,330	1,050
Indexation and a further 10 per cent. on allowances	3,380	1,550
Indexation and a further 15 per cent. on allowances	4,380	2,000
Indexation and a further 20 per cent. on allowances	5,380	2,450

* Compared with 1985-86 allowance levels.

Raw Materials Importers (VAT)

Mr. Conway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on manufacturing competitiveness of the delay in refunding value added tax to raw material importers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Since the general withdrawal of the postponed accounting system for VAT on imports on 1 November 1984, my officials have kept me informed of the effect of the change on importers generally including those who import raw materials.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Higgins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Worthing of 12 March, he will give figures for each of the nine years before 1984-85 for discretionary increases in public expenditure above departmental plans made from the contingency reserve to individual Departments and any unused balances.

Mr. Lawson: The discretionary increases in public expenditure above departmental plans met from the contingency reserve for years before 1984-85 are shown in the table. It should be noted that because the contingency reserve was available only for discretionary increases, any unused balances were a poor guide to the under or overshoot of the planning total as a whole (which is shown in table 1.9 of the public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702)).

Tax Threshold

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, expressing the tax threshold as 100 in 1955-56, he will measure the increase in the threshold at the latest available date for a single person, married couple and a married couple with two and four children.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 10 March 1986, c. 390]: Information based on the Budget proposals for 1986-87 is in the table. Since child tax allowances were replaced by child benefit between 1977 and 1979, a comparison of tax thresholds may give an incomplete picture for families with children. The table therefore also shows "break even" points—that is the level of income at which net liability to tax would arise, treating child benefit (and family allowance) as an offset to income tax.

Savings Schemes (Advertising)

Mr. Freud asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount of money spent on advertising each of the different Government savings schemes together with a table of the interest paid on capital for each scheme.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 13 March 1986, c. 591]: Estimated figures for the year ending 31 March 1986 for the savings schemes administered by the Department for National Savings are shown in the table:

	Advertising expenditure £ million	Interest, index-linking or bonuses accrued; dividends or prizes paid £ million

Tax Allowances

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will express the value of personal tax allowances to a single person, married couple and two wage earners tax unit at each of the marginal rates of tax.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 7 March 1986, c. 283]: Under the Budget proposals, the information for 1986-87 is as follows:

Value of personal allowances in 1986-87
(£ per annum)

Marginal tax rate (per cent.)	Single person	Married couple (wife not working)	Married couple (wife working)
29	677·15	1,059·95	1,737·10

Medical Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications were made to chairmen of medical appeal tribunals for leave to appeal on a point of law to the Social Security Commissioners in each year from 1980 to 1985 (a) nationally, (b) in London south region and (c) in London north region; and, for the same years and areas, what numbers of applications were granted.

Mr. Major: The information is as follows:

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Applications received
London south region	19	23	20	34	46	43
London north region	n/a	20	25	5	29	35
Great Britain	150	270	289	284	*286	*305

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 12 February, Official Report, columns 489-90, he will break down the total of social security claimants for 1985 into the categories (a) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (b) pensioners aged 60 to 79 years, (c) sick and disabled, (d) one-parent families, (e) low paid families, (f) unemployed families, (g) single people, (h) childless couples and (i) widows and others.

Mr. Major: More detailed information on the categories of supplementary benefit claimants in Leyton and Leytonstone is not available.

Details of the number of persons in receipt of supplementary benefit in December 1983 (the latest available information) in the categories requested, except low income families, is available nationally but not locally as follows:

*December 1983

	000's
Pensioners aged 80 years and over	444
Pensioners aged 60 to 79 years	1,206
Sick and disabled	241
One parent families	475
Unemployed families	461
Single people	3,329
Childless couples	536
Widows	15
Others	167

The number of low income families in receipt of family income supplement in December 1983† was 204,000.

* Annual Statistic Inquiry 1983.

† 10 per cent annual sample.

Single Payments

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the value and numbers of single payments of supplementary benefit from the Department of Health and Social Security offices in Coventry for the last five years.

Mr. Major: The following table sets out the total number of single payments made by local offices serving Coventry, and their value, since 1980 for years ending early in April.

	Coventry (East)		Coventry (West)
	Number	Amount (£)	Number	Amount (£)
1980-81	4,181	194,182	2,210	109,566
1981-82	6,687	311,030	4,857	193,062
1982-83	7,785	416,523	5,392	294,716
1983-84	12,820	832,560	7,932	562,911
1984-85	18,041	1,211,256	11,511	666,175

Students (Benefit)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 27 February, Official Report, column 682, about students and social security benefits, what he intends should be understood by the expression "privately rented accommodation".

Mr. Newton: In the context of the response to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 27 February at columns 682-83, "privately rented accommodation" refers to accommodation other than university or college accommodation.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how the figures of 140,000 and 275,000 students, given in the answer of 27 February, Official Report, columns 682-83, by the Minister of State for Social Security for the numbers who will, respectively, benefit or be adversely affected by the proposed changes to students' entitlement to welfare, were arrived at.

Mr. Newton: Estimates of the numbers of students likely to gain or lose from the Government's proposals to change certain aspects of their entitlement to supplementary benefit, unemployment benefit and housing benefit were based on the numbers signing on as unemployed, and the estimated numbers claiming housing benefit.

Employees (Accommodation)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many health authorities have submitted their action plans outlining their policy for accommodating employees in accordance with health circular (85)19.

Mr. Hayhoe: All but one.

Health Authorities (Computers)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the companies with which regional and district health authorities have had contracts for the supply of computer equipment valued at £50,000 or more in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985, giving the numbers of contracts in each case and the total value in respect of each company.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not available centrally.

Mobility Allowance

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what theoretical or practical tests of mobility must be undergone by a person with only one lower limb, or with part of the lower limb missing, in order to establish his or her eligibility for mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Entitlement to mobility allowance is related to walking ability and not to specific disabilities. The way in which walking ability is tested is entirely a matter for the examining doctor who, in making his assessment, takes account of any prostheses or aids used or which the person examined would be physically and mentally capable of using. If the hon. Member is aware of particular difficulties arising in connection with people who have a lower limb or part of a lower limb missing, I shall be pleased to look into them if he will let me have details.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people with only one lower limb, or with part of one lower limb missing, have been refused mobility allowance in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde, (c) Scotland and (d) the United Kingdom as a whole for each of the last five years; and if the will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I regret that this information is not available.

Abortions

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the nominees of the proprietors of those private hospitals which are licensed to perform abortions after 20 weeks, gestation who met the Minister on 2 August 1985 to discuss late abortion.

Mr. Hayhoe: I suggest that my hon. Friend approach the proprietors direct. The meeting in question was not with Ministers but with the officials of my Department.

Mental Handicap (Manpower)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department is currently undertaking a manpower study in the field of mental handicap.

Mr. Whitney: In our examination of regional health authorities' strategic plans we look for evidence that they include estimates of manpower requirements and means of meeting those requirements in their planning and that they are planning community mental handicap services in collaboration with local authorities. A small sample of mental handicap wards were included in a departmental review of nursing skill-mix which is to be presented to the National Health Service Management Board. We are also considering the report of the community nursing review which was asked to study how resources could be used more effectively to improve the services available to client groups, including mentally handicapped people.

Local Office Staff

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 322, he will published in the Official Report the number of additional social security local office staff to be allocated to (i) Greenock, (ii) Port Glasgow, (iii) Strathclyde and (iv) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Major: The method of distributing the extra local office staff has still to be decided, so it is not possible at this stage to say how many extra staff Scotland and individual local offices will receive.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the amount of housing benefit owed by his Department on 31 December 1985 to the local authorities of Islington, Camden, Hackney, Sheffield and Bristol; and if he will give comparable figures for the same dates in 1983 and 1984.

Mr. Major: The Department pays subsidy to local authorities on their benefit and administration costs under the housing benefits scheme on the basis of final audited claims for each financial year. Payments on account of subsidy are made each month during the year on the basis of authorities' estimates of expenditure. No payments of subsidy were owed by the Department to any of the authorities mentioned on 31 December 1983, 1984 or 1985. Payments on account had also been made in the normal way.

Health Authorities (Cost Improvement)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why in the light of his policy on retention by district health authorities of benefits of cost improvement programmes, the Brent district health authority is not being permitted by the North-West Thames regional health authority to retain the full proceeds of its programme.

Mr. Whitney: Our policy on the local retention of cost improvement programmes was set out in my reply to the right hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Freeson) on 3 March, at column 61. The application of this policy in the case of Brent district health authority is a matter for the North-West Thames regional health authority and that district.

Huddersfield DHA (Chairman)

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the chairman of Huddersfield district health authority was informed by ministerial letter that he was not being re-appointed and later informed that he has been re-appointed.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret my mistake in sending the Huddersfield chairman a valedictory letter on 18 February. It was withdrawn the following day and I have apologised. I am glad that he has accepted my apology and my invitation to serve for a further term of four years. There is no truth in the suggestion that I understand has been made locally that the hon. Member's intervention influenced this matter in any way.

"New Earnings Survey"

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the data for the "New Earnings Survey" for 1983 on the numbers of poor persons and households.

Mr. Major: I understand that the hon. Member is referring to this Department's publication "Low Income Families". I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security to my hon. Friend the Member for Kensington (Sir B. Rhys Williams) on 4 March at column 122.

Child Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the level at which child benefit would be set if, compared with the 1978-79 level, it were to maintain the increase in tax-free income of taxpayers with children at the same level as that of taxpayers without children.

Mr. Newton: For a married couple with children under age 11, the current level of child benefit would need to be £6·91 a child a week to match the November 1978 level of child benefit (revalued at November 1985 prices) plus child tax allowance at the 1978-79 level increased by a percentage equal to the increase in the tax allowance for married couples without children over the same period.

Hospital Services

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are his objectives on the provision of hospital services; how he is monitoring their effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Our policies for the hospital services remain as set out in "Care in Action" as amplified and extended by the annual planning guidelines issued to health authorities, including specific targets for priority service developments. We are also concerned to secure equality of access to services and to improve the efficiency with which resources are used, through better management. We monitor the effectiveness of services in a range of ways, including regular reports on aspects of performance, statistical returns of activity levels and annual reviews with regional health authorities.

Eye Specialists (Waiting Times)

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the national average waiting period for an appointment with eye specialists following referrals by general practitioners; what is the average waiting period for the South-West health region and in the Plymouth health district; and what were the corresponding figures in June 1979.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend the information. Information on waiting time for out-patient appointments is not collected centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairmen of the South-Western regional health authority and the Plymouth district health authority who may be able to provide the local information requested.

Mr. Michael Martin

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has taken any steps to monitor the use of emergency medication in the special hospital system; and if he intends to accept the guidelines for prescribing medication set out in the Ritchie report.

Mr. Whitney: For reasons which were explained fully when my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke) published Miss Ritchie's report, her recommendation regarding advance prescribing was not accepted. Fresh guidelines to medical and nursing staff in Broadmoor hospital about prescribing practice had already been issued, however, before Miss Ritchie's report was received. Each of the special hospitals now has up-to-date guidance consistent with good modern practice for dealing with difficult situations.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in the light of the conclusions and recommendations of the Ritchie report, he has any plans to improve the quality of care within the special hospital system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I am concerned constantly to maintain and to improve the quality of care provided for patients in special hospitals. We have regular exchanges with the local managers of the special hospitals and have invested substantial resources in those hospitals aimed at ensuring improvements both in standards of care and in the quality of life of patients and of the staff who work in the hospitals. The particular matters raised in Miss Ritchie's report were dealt with when the report was received and in advance of its receipt. I look to the local boards which are now to be introduced to continue and develop this work, as the Rampton hospital review board has done.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in the light of the Ritchie report on the death of Michael Martin, he has any plans to lay down guidelines to ensure that relatives are fully informed about the condition and treatment of patients in secure mental hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: The need to provide advice and information to relatives about the condition and treatment of patients is a normal and fully accepted responsibility of staff in special hospitals, as in all other hospitals. Staff recognise that relatives may find it very hard to come to terms with the seriousness of a patient's mental condition. In addition to contacts between relatives and medical and nursing staff, each special hospital has its own social work department, which has a particular concern with maintaining, and sometimes restoring, contact with families where this is appropriate. The difficulties which arose in the case of Mr. Martin have been fully discussed between officers of the Department and the managers of Broadmoor hospital with a view to ensuring that similar problems will not recur.

Special Hospital System

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the aims and the purpose of the special hospital system.

Mr. Whitney: The aims and purpose of the special hospitals are to provide care and treatment for patients detained under the Mental Health Act who require to be treated in conditions of special security on account of their dangerous, violent or criminal propensities, as required by section 4 of the National Health Service Act 1977.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that information is made available in appropriate languages to patients in mental hospitals and their relatives whose first language is not English.

Mr. Whitney: I have nothing to add to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Irving) on 11 February at column 430.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the relative levels of misdiagnosis in secure and other mental hospitals, respectively, as between (a) black people and (b) white people; and what steps he is taking to seek to reduce the level of misdiagnosis in both absolute and relative terms.

Mr. Whitney: I have no reason to believe that there are significant problems of wrong diagnosis by doctors working in mental hospitals in this country, either generally or in relation to people of different racial origins. If the hon. Member has evidence of such problems, no doubt he will bring it to notice. The condition of patients being treated in special hospitals will usually have been diagnosed before their admission by doctors not employed at those hospitals, often by several such doctors. The consultant staff working in the special hospitals undertake their own diagnosis in the knowledge of the patient's medical history, including previous diagnosis.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received as to the relative quality of medical treatment given in secure and other mental hospitals, respectively, to (a) black people and (b) white people; and what action he has taken in consequence.

Mr. Whitney: I have no reason to believe that doctors working in mental hospitals in this country are either insensitive to ethnic considerations where these are clearly relevant, or make any distinction in the quality of their treatment of patients on account of the patient's racial origins.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many single payments were made from the Huyton office of his Department during each of the last five years and in 1986 to date.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 13 March 1986, c. 570]: The number f single payments made from the Huyton local office in the years since April 1982 are:

	Number
1982-83	7,882
1984-85	16,910

* up to 11 February 1986

Information is not available for a complete year prior to 1982-83.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Standing and Select Committees

Mr. Craigen asked the Lord Privy Seal how many members in the present parliament have not served on any Standing Committee or Select Committee of the House.

Mr. Biffen: As on 20 March, 27 Members have not served on any Standing Committee or Select Committee of the House in the present Parliament. The total includes Mr. Speaker, the Chairman and Deputy Chairmen of Ways and Means, as well as three members of the Chairmen's Panel.

Mail (Postmarking)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal if, pursuant to his answer of 17 March to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, he will state the reasons why it is not practicable for mail posted in the parliamentary outbuildings to be brought into the House for postmarking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I am advised that the House of Commons Post Office can deal efficiently with the amount of mail posted within the Palace of Westminster; but the level of Post Office accommodation within the House is such that additional mail from the outbuildings could not be handled. The passage of mail from the outbuildings direct to the south-west mechanised letter office has proved a satisfactory service over a number of years. However I am aware that this mail does not receive the House of Commons postmark.

Food Preferences

Mr. Corbyn asked the Lord Privy Seal what information he has of the food preferences of Members of Parliament, staff and visitors to the Palace of Westminster and as to how many are (a) vegetarians, (b) vegans, (c) in need of a special diet for health reasons or (d) in need of a special diet for religious reasons.

Mr. Biffen: Comprehensive information of this nature is not available; but Members may express their views on existing arrangements to the General Manager of the Refreshment Department or to the Catering Sub-Committee.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will take steps to ensure the presence of (a) vegetarian, (b) vegan, (c) Asian, (d) West Indian and (e) kosher food in the dining areas of the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Biffen: A daily vegetarian menu is available. Vegan, Asian, West Indian and kosher food can be made available by prior arrangement with the General Manager of the Refreshment Department.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Lord Privy Seal how often vegetarian dishes are provided in the dining facilities within the Palace of Westminster.

Mr. Biffen: Vegetarian dishes are provided every day and a special menu is displayed on each table accordingly.

Facilities (Public Visitors)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will take steps to ensure that the public visiting the Palace of Westminster (a) are able to queue under cover in Westminster Hall, (b) have full access for all types of disability and (c) can use refreshment facilities that do not require the presence of a Member.

Mr. Biffen: (a) The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee of the Services Committee recently reviewed access arrangements to the Palace of Westminster for visitors. In the course of this review the Sub-Committee considered the proposal that Westminster Hall should be used for queuing, but decided against any change in current arrangements; (b) disabled persons are able to visit the Palace of Westminster, and any special arrangements that may be necessary are made by the Serjeant at Arms' Office; (c) the pressure on refreshment facilities within the Palace of Westminster is such that I can foresee no relaxation of the present regulations whereby a Member may accompany two persons to the Strangers' Cafeteria and may take three persons to the Members' Cafeteria.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Duties

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northen Ireland how many nights each of the Ministers in his Department spent in Northern Ireland during each of the months of December 1985 and January and February 1986.

Mr. Tom King: The information is as follows:

	December 1985	January 1986	February 1986
Secretary of State	8	7	7
Dr. Rhodes Boyson	7	8	3
Mr. Nicholas Scott	9	5	9
Lord Lyell	6	8	7
Mr. Richard Needham	15	10	10
Dr. Brian Mawhinney	—	—	2

Sewage Works, Newtownbreda

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenders for the new sewage works at Newtownbreda in Castlereagh borough have been received from firms in Northern Ireland, Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland, respectively; what was the price of each tender; which tender has been accepted; what precautions are being taken to ensure the safety of employees during the period of contract; and whether the successful tenderer has signed the Fair Employment Agency register for employers.

Mr. Needham: For the civil engineering works contract for the Newtownbreda sewage treatment works extension, nine tenders were received from companies with registered offices in Northern Ireland, none from companies with registered offices in Great Britain and one from a company with a registered office in the Republic of Ireland. Tenders ranged in value from £2,947,000 to £3,694,000. The lowest tender was accepted and this was submitted by a company with a registered office in Northern Ireland. The safety of employees during a contract is primarily the responsibility of the contractor. The successful tenderer is registered by the Fair Employment Agency. Tenders have been invited for the supply and installation of mechanical and electrical plant at the sewage treatment works extension. Tenders are currently under consideration and it would be in breach of commercial confidence to disclose details of tenders received until the contract has been awarded.

Assembly

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the daily cost of operating the Northern Ireland Assembly, including the salaries of both members and staff.

Mr. Tom King: The average daily cost of operating the Northern Ireland Assembly, based on the total forecast expenditure for the financial year 1985-86, is approximately £7,900.

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has had from education and library boards concerning budget proposals for 1986-87.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have received deputations from three of the Education and Library Boards and discussed with them the implications of their 1986-87 financial allocations.

Elections

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps were taken by Her Majesty's Government to monitor the numbers of electors unable to vote due to lack of identification in the 1985 local government elections and in the 1986 by-elections; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Ministers received reports and representations from a wide range of Northern Ireland politicians, the chief Electoral Officer and others involved in the electoral process. There is no evidence that turn-out was significantly affected by the introduction of the specified document requirement.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken since 1985 to inform the public about new requirements for voting in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: In the weeks preceding the Northern Ireland district council elections in May 1985, the Government mounted an extensive public information campaign to advise electors of the need to produce a specified document before receiving a ballot paper. The campaign included distribution of an explanatory leaflet to all Northern Ireland households; the provision of a further 100,000 leaflets and posters in public buildings and offices; frequent broadcasts on local radio and television; and advertisments in all Northern Ireland newspapers. A further campaign was mounted before the Parliamentary by-elections on 23 January 1986. On both occasions, explanations of the new voting requirements were also included in the Chief Electoral Officer's pre-election publicity campaign.

Family Credit Scheme

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much families in Northern Ireland will lose through the ending of school meals for those receiving family credit under the social security proposals.

Mr. Needham: Under the proposals for social security reform, the cash equivalent of free school meals will be consolidated into the child credits in family credit. The overall effect on expenditure will therefore be neutral. The effect on individual families will depend on whether or not they are claiming free school meals and on the rates of benefit applicable when family credit is introduced in April 1988.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much families in Northern Ireland will benefit by reason of the proposed family credit scheme in the social security proposals.

Mr. Needham: As it is the Government's intention that the principle of parity with Great Britain should remain the basis for provision of social security in Northern Ireland, it follows that the impact of the proposed reform on low income families will be generally the same in Northern Ireland as in Great Britain. I regret that detailed figures on the effect on families are not available.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of health spending in Northern Ireland on an annual basis since 1979 is attributable to (a) demographic changes and (b) technological changes.

Mr. Needham: It is estimated that the pressure on resources arising from demographic change in the health and personal social services from 1979-80 to 1984-85 was 0·8 per cent. per annum on average or 4·4 per cent. over the period. It is not possible to make an accurate estimate in respect of technological change in Northern Ireland, but on the basis of work done elsewhere in the United Kingdom it is likely to be between 0·5 per cent. and 1·0 per cent. The real increase in resources from 1979-80 along with efficiency savings in recent years has been more than enough to cope with both demographic and technological pressures.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the percentage and real spending increases of expenditure in the health service in Northern Ireland for (a) hospitals and (b) community health services, excluding central management, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: The following table contains the information requested.

(a) Expenditure on hospital services (gross)—£ million

	Cash	Percentage increase over previous year	Cash adjusted by GDP deflator	Percentage increase over previous year
1979-80	200·6	—	305·6	—
1980-81	256·5	27·9	329·0	7·7
1981-82	286·4	11·7	334·0	1·5
1982-83	309·4	8·0	337·2	1·0
1983-84	331·8	7·2	346·0	2·6
1984-85	351·2	5·8	351·2	1·5

(b) Expenditure on community health services (gross)—£ million

1979-80	19·5	—	29·7	—
1980-81	26·3	34·9	33·7	13·5
1981-82	28·9	9·9	33·7	Nil
1982-83	31·9	10·4	34·8	3·3
1983-84	35·1	10·0	36·6	5·2
1984-85	38·2	8·8	38·2	4·4

Home Helps

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in the light of the policy of moving patients out of hospital and into the community in Northern Ireland, what additional expenses and funding are envisaged for home helps.

Mr. Needham: The Department of Health and Social Services, in its strategic planning guidelines, has recently asked health and social services boards to include in their area strategic plans an assessment of the implications for community services, including the home help service, of a shift in the balance of care away from hospitals. In advance of the receipt of boards' plans it is not possible to specify what additional resources will be required in any part of the services.

Payment for Debt Act

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many public employees are currently having deductions made from their pay under the Payment for Debt Act; what was the total of deductions in February for public employees; and what percentage this represented of their total net earnings.

Dr. Boyson: The available information is in respect of the quarter ended 31 December 1985, when 1,991 public sector employees had deductions of £439,000 made from their pay; information on earnings is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Social Security Bill

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be the total potential loss to those in receipt of state earnings related pension scheme benefits in Northern Ireland in the year 2000 if the provisions of the Social Security Bill are extended to Northern Ireland, assuming present demographic trends continue.

Mr. Needham: I shall reply to the right hon. and learned Member as soon as possible.

Community Care

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, in the light of the policy of moving patients out of hospital and into the community in Northern Ireland, what facilities will be provided in the community in advance of the closure of hospital facilities; and what steps will be taken to ensure that the families of those concerned will be consulted and to discover if they are satisfied with arrangements for the care of the former hospital patients.

Mr. Needham: I shall reply to the right hon. and learned Member as soon as possible.

WALES

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps have been taken by his Department to monitor the response of health authorities to the report by the all-Wales health management efficiency group on cervical cancer in Wales, in regard to its recommendations for joint committees, for screening managers and specialist follow-up staff to be appointed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The report of the management efficiency group was published at the end of February and its recommendations are complementary to those of the joint NHS-Welsh Office working party report of July 1985. A circular is to be issued shortly on the administration of the cervical cytology screening service and this will advise those health authorities which have not already taken steps to implement the recommendations of the joint report that they should now do so. It will also advise authorities to have regard to the management efficiency group's recommendations in drawing up their schemes.

The NHS directorate will be monitoring the authorities' progress in developing its cervical cytology screening services as part of the annual review process.

Student Grants

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state the number of discretionary grants approved for (a) those students enrolled in Welsh universities and (b) those students enrolled in Welsh polytechnics in each of the last five years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Discretionary awards are the responsibility of individual local education authorities. Neither the Welsh Office nor the Department of Education and Science collects this information.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Land Rover

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the implications of a possible sale of Land Rover to General Motors for the prospects for an order worth approximately £50 million from the Australian Government for Land Rover vehicles.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986, c. 191]: I have not received any representations about the implications of the possible sale of Land Rover for this prospective order. However one informal request for clarification on certain points was received from the Australian High Commission.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Local Government Services

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) under what conditions commissioners will be appointed to provide essential local government services in certain district councils in Northern Ireland;

(2) what special security provisions commissioners appointed to provide essential local government services in certain district councils in Northern Ireland will receive to protect them from possible terrorist acts;

(3) how commissioners to provide essential local government services in certain district councils in Northern Ireland will be chosen.

Mr. Needham: Commissioners will only be appointed as a measure of last resort where there is a threat to the district council statutory services and jobs caused by the action of councillors. In such circumstances persons with relevant skills and experience in public administration would be considered and appropriate security arrangements would be made in the light of police advice. It would not be in the interests of security to disclose details.

Medical Cards

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many medical cards have been issued by the Northern Ireland Central Services Agency since 1973; how many of these were of the format produced by the former issuing authority prior to 1973; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: Since 1 October 1973 an estimated 1,750,000 medical cards have been issued by the Northern Ireland Central Services Agency. It is not known how many of these were of the format produced by the Northern Ireland General Health Services Board, the issuing authority prior to 1 October 1973.

Mr. Proctor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were issued with new medical cards in (a) each of the five weeks preceding the 1985 local government elections, (b) each of the five weeks preceding the 1986 by-elections and (c) an average week in 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The approximate numbers of medical cards issued during these periods are as follows: (a) 65,000; (b) 30,000; (c) 2,400.
These totals include first time registrations, amendments to previous cards and replacements.

Social Security Bill

Mr. Archer (Warley West): asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what will be the total potential loss to those in respect of state earnings related pension scheme benefits in Northern Ireland in the year 2000 if the provisions of the Social Security Bill are extended to Northern Ireland, assuming present demographic trends continue.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 20 March 1986]: As the right hon. and learned Member is aware the proposed changes in the state earnings related pension scheme will not start to take effect until the year 2000.. There will therefore be no loss to those already receiving SERPS. The 10 year phasing in of the change from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent. of earnings will begin to have effect from 6 April 2000 and the rate will reduce by half a per cent. a year from that date. The loss to anybody retiring in the year 2000 would be insignificant.

Community Care

Mr. Archer (Warley West): asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, in the light of the policy of moving patients out of hospital and into the community in Northern Ireland, what facilities will be provided in the community in advance of the closure of hospital facilities; and what steps will be taken to ensure that the families of those concerned will be consulted and to discover if they are satisfied with arrangements for the care of the former hospital patients.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 20 March 1986]: In recent years, funding of community services in Northern Ireland has shown a greater percentage increase than that of the hospital services. It will be for Health and Social Services Boards to decide, in drawing up their area strategic and operational plans what further developments are required in furtherance of the policy of providing a greater proportion of overall health care in the community.

No change is envisaged in existing procedures for the transfer of patients from hospital, under which arrangements are made in consultation with the patient's family and GP for appropriate continuing care to be provided in the community.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Welsh Business

Mr. Best asked the Lord Privy Seal if, pursuant to his answer of 4 March, Official Report, column 96, he will list the dates and the topics of each of the Welsh debates in 1979-80 and in 1984-85, respectively, indicating which of them were initiated (a) in Government time, (b) in time made available to the Opposition and (c) by private Members.

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

Debate	Date
For session 1979-80:
Welsh Affairs (G)	23 May 1979
Wales Act 1979 Repeal (G)	26 June 1979

Welsh Language and Social Services (Consolidated Fund) (P)	24-25 July 1985
Closure of Blackmill Hospital (P)	26 July 1985

(G)=in Government time.
(O)=in Opposition time.
(P)=in Private Members' time (including daily Adjournment debates).
Note:
The above list does not include debates on various stages of legislation, ten minute rule bills, money resolutions, SO 10 applications, and PNQs, but does include inter alia daily adjournment debates, debates on Statutory Instruments, and Consolidated Fund Bill debates.

Mr. Best asked the Lord Privy Seal what criteria he applies in deciding whether to allocate Government time for debates on matters specifically relating to Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: It is traditional for there to be a sessional debate on Welsh affairs. The Standing Orders of the House also provide that the Welsh Grand Committee may also consider matters relating specifically to Wales, which are referred to it. Arrangements for such debates are made following discussion through the usual channels.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Soviet Citizens (Residence Permits)

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Soviet citizens have been granted temporary British residence permits (a) during 1985 and (b) so far in 1986; and for what periods of time.

Mr. Waddington: The readily available information relates to the numbers of citizens of the USSR admitted to the United Kingdom analysed by the purpose of their journey. Figures for 1984 are given in table 1 of "Control of Immigration Statistics United Kingdom 1984" (Cmnd. 9844). It is planned to publish the corresponding figures for 1985 in the summer.

Homosexuality

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men are currently imprisoned in the United Kingdom for consenting homosexual acts with males between the ages of 16 and 21 years; and what are the minimum and maximum sentences being served by such men.

Mr. Mellor: Information available centrally, which may be incomplete, is for England and Wales only and relates to offenders over the age of 21 given a custodial sentence for a consenting homosexual offence with males between the ages of 16 and 21. In 1984 33 offenders were so sentenced; the shortest sentence imposed was three weeks and the longest four and a half years; the average sentence was almost 20 months. Corresponding information on those serving custodial sentences is not recorded centrally.

Prisoners

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were (a) two to a cell and (b) three to a cell on the most recent convenient date.

Mr. Mellor: On 9 February there were 12,854 males and 292 females held two to a cell and 4,002 males and no females held three to a cell in prison custody in England and Wales.

Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Hurd: The Home Office payment procedure comprises two stages under which invoices are (a) initially received from suppliers by the headquarters section of the outstation which ordered the goods or services, and where, after being checked for accuracy and conformity with the orders, the invoices are authorised for payment and forwarded to the Office's accounts branch for (b) the preparation of payable orders under computerised central payment arrangements. The accounts branch daily receives more than 1,000 invoices for payment. The time taken by the accounts branch for examination and payment is normally about 6-10 working days, but following recent relocation of the branch is at present approximately 10-15 working days. An average time taken for the whole two-stage procedure could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Shops Bill

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of those letters received to date by his Department concerning the Shops Bill [Lords] have supported the status quo;

(2) how many of those letters received to date by his Department opposed to the complete deregulation of Sunday trading have suggested alternative reforms;

(3) how many of those letters received by his Department opposed to complete deregulation of Sunday trading that have put forward alternative reforms have suggested that (a) local authorities take the decisions as to which shops may open on Sunday, (b) that shops may only open to sell goods that are needed, (c) that opening be limited to shops of a certain size, (d) that opening be limited to shops of a certain type or (e) that the hours that shops may open on a Sunday be limited.

Mr. Waddington: The letters received by the Department opposed to the Shops Bill have not been analysed in the detailed ways requested by my hon. Friend and I regret that such a precise analysis could be attempted only at disproportionate cost. In general, however, relatively few of the letters opposing the Bill have suggested alternative reforms, and among those that have, there has been no consensus, nor any markedly greater degree of support for one alternative as opposed to another.

Juries

Mr. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the terms of the Juries Act 1984 dealing with the ineligibility for jury service of certain persons convicted of criminal offences are implemented; and what checks are made to seek to ensure that ineligible people do not sit on juries.

Mr. Mellor: The provisions disqualifying persons with previous convictions from jury service are explained to potential jurors in the jury summons and they are required to declare any disqualification. In addition, an oral explanation is normally given by a court official to those summoned and a person who thinks he may be disqualified is given the opportunity of consulting the official. Thereafter, enforcement of the criminal law is a matter for the chief officer of police concerned. The annex to Home Office Circular 81/1980, a copy of which is in the Library, contains recommendations by the Association of Chief Police Officers on when a check of names of potential jurors should be made against criminal records. One of the criteria is that there is reason to believe that attempts are being made to circumvent the statutory provisions excluding disqualified persons from service on a jury, including any case when there is reason to believe that a particular juror may be disqualified.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the registration process under the Data Protection Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The Data Protection registrar had received approximately 14,500 applications for registration by Wednesday, 19 March. The registrar is monitoring the effect of his current advertising campaign, and expects the majority of applications to be received towards the end of the initial registration period, which expires on 10 May.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Stamp Duty

Mr. Cash asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will clarify the scope of his Budget proposals relating to stamp duty.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Following announcement of the stamp duty proposals on Budget day, consultation with financial institutions and others concerned has indicated that certain technical changes should be made to ensure that the proposals operate in accordance with the intentions as announced. In response to representations, the Government therefore proposes to make the following changes.

My right hon. Friend announced that stamp duty would in future be payable on transfers of certain loan stocks. As the Inland Revenue press release issued on 18 March explained, this charge is not intended to apply to loans raised by various international organisations in respect of which the United Kingdom is under a treaty obligation to provide an exemption. The Resolution (no.36) giving temporary statutory effect to this proposal does not exempt certain loans raised by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the Inter-American Development Bank, the Asian Developmemt Bank and the African Development Bank. A revised version of the Resolution has accordingly been tabled today which ensures that such loans continue to be exempt.

My right hon. Friend also announced that there would be a charge of 5 per cent. on the conversion of United Kingdom shares into depositary receipts with immediate effect from 19 March. The Resolution covering this proposal is intended to apply to nominee companies which hold shares in connection with a bank's depositary receipt business. Representations have, however, been received suggesting that the Resolutions (nos.31 & 32) could also apply to certain nominee companies which hold securities for other purposes, and this also affects the Resolution (no.33) covering the related proposal to impose the same rate of duty on transfers of shares to certain clearing houses.

The Government are, therefore, withdrawing the appropriate Resolutions dealing with stamp duty on depositary receipts and transfers to clearing houses. Consultations are continuing, and amended provisions will accordingly be brought forward in due course. Meanwhile, however, the stamp duty reserve tax Resolution (no.40) remains in place. These changes do not therefore affect the Budget proposal for a charge at 5 per cent. from 19 March on the conversion of United Kingdom shares into depositary receipts. This charge also applies where shares are transferred into settlement systems which enable United Kingdom shares to be bought and sold without payment of stamp duty.

Taxation

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the costs of re-introducing a reduced rate band of income tax at 25 per cent. on *(a)*the first £750 of taxable income and (b) an amount of taxable income equivalent to £750 in 1979-80 uprated in line with personal allowances to 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: The costs would be (a) about £850 million and (b) about £1,620 million, in a full year at 1986-87 income levels.

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the comparison between the yield in real terms in 1978-79 and what he is now proposing for 1986-87 in (a) direct taxes including national insurance and (b) indirect taxes;

(2) what is the estimated yield from all sources of taxation including excise and other duties for 1986-87; what was the comparable yield for 1978-79 revalued at 1986-87 prices; and if he will publish a breakdown by categories of the real increase in taxes between 1978-79 and 1986-87 similar to that in his answer of 29 March 1985, Official Report, column 370;

(3) if he will construct an index with 1978-79 equalling 100, of the changes in the level of income tax and national insurance contributions for each subsequent year for a taxpayer on (a) half, (b) two thirds, (c) average, (d) five times and (e) 10 times average earnings for households where the taxpayer is (i) single, (ii) married, no children, (iii) married with two children and (iv) married with four children, in all cases assuming the wife does not work.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

District Valuers Office, Port Talbot

Mr. John Morris asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will reconsider the proposal to close the district valuers office at Port Talbot.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Mr. Bob Edwards asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consult the European Economic Community Council about additional measures to put pressure on South Africa to end apartheid.

Mrs. Chalker: Foreign Ministers of the Twelve regularly discuss developments in South Africa and have agreed to keep the situation there under close review.

South Africa (Conference)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names of those delegates attending the conference on South Africa to be held at Wilton park, Sussex, commencing on Sunday 23 March, together with those whom they are representing.

Mrs. Chalker: Wilton park is largely financed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. However the institution is free to choose its own subjects for discussion and to invite the speakers and participants it wishes. Academic independence and integrity are guaranteed by an International Advisory Council of OECD Ambassadors and an Academic Council of distinguished Britons. All discussion is off the record. It follows that a decision whether or not to disclose the names of participants attending their conferences rests with Wilton park.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he or any member of Her Majesty's Government intends to address the conference on South Africa at Wilton park, Sussex, commencing on Sunday 23 March.

Mrs. Chalker: No member of the Government has been invited to address the conference at Wilton park. Foreign and Commonwealth officials will be present at the conference.

African National Congress

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors he took into account in deciding to differentiate between Ministers of the Crown and officials of his Department in Her Majesty's Government's policy towards contacts with members of the African National Congress; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The decision to establish contact with the African National Congress reflected a concern to promote a suspension of violence in South Africa and a genuine dialogue between all the parties concerned. In the circumstances it was decided that contact at official level was appropriate.

DEFENCE

Departmental Land

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence which land in Lincolnshire is owned, or leased, by his Department; what is the total acreage of this land; what sites it includes; and what proposals are being considered for disposal of any of it.

Mr. Lee: The Ministry of Defence owns or leases approximately 26,500 acres of land in Lincolnshire and South Humberside. The principal sites are:

Beckingham Army Training Area
Fulbeck Army Training Area
Kirton-in-Lindsey Barracks
Prince William of Gloucester Barracks, Grantham
RAF Barkston Heath
RAF Binbrook
RAF Coningsby
RAF Cranwell
RAF Digby
RAF Doona Nook
RAF Holbeach
RAF Nocton Hall
RAF North Coates
RAF Scampton
RAF Swinderby
RAF Theddlethorpe
RAF Waddington
RAF Wainfleet

plus 25 minor sites of small or negligible acreage.

There are 681 acres at Cranwell, 140 acres at Theddlethorpe, 64 married quarters at Binbrook, 79 married quarters at Nocton hall and 76 married quarters at Waddington with the Property Services Agency for disposal. No further major disposals are planned in Lincolnshire, but Fulbeck is one of four sites under consideration by NIREX for the disposal of low level nuclear waste. At this stage they ony have a licence for exploratory drilling.

Nimrod Project

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many amendments there have been to the original requirements laid down for the British Nimrod advanced early warning project.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There has been one amendment to the Royal Air Force's current airborne early warning requirement since it was endorsed in 1975: the need for an air-to-air refuelling capability was introduced in 1983.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

National Advisory Body

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to meet the directors of the polytechnics in England and Wales to discuss the recommendations of the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State would carefully consider a request for such a meeting were one to be made. However, recommendations arising from the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise will not be adopted by the NAB committee nor submitted to my right hon. Friend until December 1986.

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the National Advisory Body's 1987-88 planning exercise.

Mr. Walden: Preliminary plans for the disposition of academic provision in the public sector of higher education in 1987-88 are being drawn up by the NAB secretariat and will be sent to institutions for consultation on 4 April 1986. In the light of the comments received from institutions, and of the resources available for public sector higher education in 1987-88, which will not be announced until the autumn, the National Advisory Body will make final recommendations to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State about student numbers in the public sector, and the associated distribution of the advanced further education capped pool and voluntary sector quantum, in December 1986.

Polytechnics (Speeches)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any intention of removing from the governing bodies of polytechnics the power to exercise control over invitations to speak on polytechnic property.

Mr. Walden: This must be seen as an aspect of the day-to-day management of an institution, and as such the responsibility of the director of a polytechnic for which he is accountable to the governors. They in turn carry responsibility for the general conduct of the institution. My right hon. Friend has no present plan to alter this situation.

Education (Amendment) Act 1986

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to meet the Association of County Councils to discuss the implementation of the Education (Amendment) Act 1986.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend plans to meet the Association of County Councils and the Association of Metropolitan Authorities after Easter to discuss various matters of common concern.

Parental Choice

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received about Her Majesty's Government's policy towards parental choice in education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I received many interesting suggestions from my hon. Friends during the debate on 13 March at columns 1159-1202 and set out the present position when I replied to it.

The Government aim to maximise parental choice and, at the same time, to secure cost-effective provision. The Education Act 1980 embodied new and generally welcome arrangements, which continue in force, towards these ends.

Parental choice is enhanced by improvements in the quality of school provision. The Government's broad-ranging policies to secure this were set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) published last March. In particular, parental influence on schools is to be increased by the reconstitution of governing bodies and other measures, as in the Bill currently before Parliament.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how the additional funds that he is making available to improve teachers' pay over the next four years will be made up; how much will be made available each year; what steps he has taken to seek to ensure that the teaching unions understand what is being offered; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: I announced last August that additional provision would be made for teachers' pay in England and Wales if a satisfactory agreement could be reached on the salary structure and the definition of teachers' duties. The additional provision would be for up to £200 million in 1986-87, rising in broadly equal steps to a maximum of £450 million in 1989-90. £40 million a year out of this sum is now being devoted to new arrangements for midday supervision. I have no doubt that the leaders of the teaching unions understand the Government's conditional offer. As for their members, I do not employ them but my colleagues and I have on numerous occasions sought to publicise the Government's position.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were teachers' salaries in real terms in (a) 1981 and (b) 1986; and if he will give current comparable figures.

Sir Keith Joseph: Figures for the average salary of teachers are available only up to 1984. To provide an illustrative comparison for the years in question, I set out below the movement in the salary paid to primary and secondary teachers in England and Wales at the top of scale 1 (excluding those entitled to be paid on an extended scale as good honours graduates). In April 1981 such teachers were paid £7,317 a year which, increased by the rise in the retail price index up to April 1985, equates to some £9,361. Upon full implementation of the 1985 pay settlement at 31 March 1986 such teachers will receive £9,285 a year. There has as yet been no pay settlement for 1986.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what money has been committed to date by his Department on the general certificate of secondary education; and how much he expects local authorities to contribute thereto.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department is already making a substantial contribution to the programme of in-service training for the GCSE of £9·5 million. In answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr. Thompson) on 13 March at column 542, my right hon. Friend said that he will be making available a further £200,000 to the GCSE examining groups to enable the provision of further training seminars. For books and equipment for the GCSE, my right hon. Friend also announced on 13 March that he proposed supporting £20 million of expenditure by education support grant over the years 1986-87 and 1987-88 to help secondary schools purchase necessary additional books and equipment. This will allow local education authorities to increase expenditure in these areas but precise demands will vary between schools and local education authorities.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the timetable for the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education was decided; and what representations were received from teachers' unions at that time.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend annnounced the timetable for the introduction of the GCSE in a statement to the House on 20 June 1984 at columns 303-4. No representations were received from teachers' associations at that time.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average teacher-pupil ratio (a) at present, (b) five years ago and (c) 10 years ago in (i) secondary schools in England, (ii) secondary schools in Oxfordshire, (iii) primary schools in England and (iv) primary schools in Oxfordshire.

Mr. Dunn: The pupil-teacher ratios in maintained schools in Oxfordshire and England in January 1976, 1981 and 1985 are given below:

	Oxfordshire		England
	Primary schools	Secondary schools	Primary schools	Secondary schools
1976	24·0	17·1	24·0	17·0
1981	24·7	17·7	22·6	16·6
1985	23·9	17·2	22·2	16·1

University of Wales

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many academic staff posts have been lost in the University of Wales over the last four years.

Mr. Walden: The number of full-time academic staff in the constituent institutions of the University of Wales fell by 112 between 1980-81 and 1984-85.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the overall formal effects on the constituent colleges of the University of Wales of the projected cut in University Grants Committee funding over the next five years.

Mr. Walden: The suggested reduction in funding of 2 per cent. a year is a planning hypothesis adopted by the University Grants Committee to give it some flexibility in allocating resources between institutions and some room for manoeuvre in relation to future levels of inflation. The Government's expenditure plans for 1986-87 to 1988-89 provide for a reduction of about one per cent. a year compared with expected inflation over the same period. The future levels of funding for individual institutions, including the constituent colleges of the University of Wales will be decided by the UGC in the light of its current planning exercise and of the resources available. No decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the number of student places lost in the University of Wales over the last four years.

Mr. Walden: The number of full-time students at the constituent institutions of the University of Wales fell by 1,481 between the academic years 1980-81 and 1984-85.

Universities (Facilities for the Disabled)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many universities in Wales, as of January 1986, are fully equipped with facilities for the handicapped.

Mr. Walden: The information is not available, but my right hon. Friend is assured that the constituent colleges of the University of Wales welcome applications from handicapped students and do all they can to accommodate suitably qualified students.

University Lecturers (Wales)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the number of lecturers employed in Welsh universities over the last five years.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Full-time Lecturers in Welsh Universities

Students (Wales)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will state the number of overseas students enrolled in Welsh universities over the last five years.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Total overseas students enrolled in Welsh universities

	Academic year beginning in 1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
Undergraduate	1,515	1,480	1,412	1,201	1,087
Postgraduate	1,063	1,041	957	1,036	1,121
Total	2,578	2,521	2,369	2,237	2,208

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list, by socio-economic class, the number of students enrolled in Welsh university courses or polytechnic courses in each of the last five years.

Mr. Walden: Information on the social class of entrants to Welsh universities could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Polytechnic statistics for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. However, I understand that such statistics are not collected.

Secondary Examinations Council (Syllabuses)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the number of syllabuses approved by the Secondary Examination Council; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Teachers are understably concerned to receive approved GCSE syllabuses as soon as possible. I share their concern. The Secondary Examinations Council has made good progress in its demanding task of scrutinising and approving some 250 syllabuses in a few months: well over 100 syllabuses have so far been approved. The Secondary Examinations Council expects to have approved by Easter about two thirds of all syllabuses submitted and is on course to approve the remainder on schedule, that is by the end of April.

The first approved GCSE syllabuses are now in schools, and others are following.

Natural Environment Research Council (Exhibition)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will arrange for an exhibition relating to the Natural Environment Research Council to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Walden: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 28 July to Friday 1 August 1986.

EMPLOYMENT

News International Plant, Wapping (Work Permits)

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many people from overseas having work permits work for any company at the Wapping newspaper plant.

Mr. Lang: One work permit has been issued in the last 12 months for employment by a company at the Wapping newspaper plant.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Baldry asked the Paymaster General what money has been committed to date by his Department on the technical and vocational education initiative; and how much he expects local authorities to contribute to the initiative.

Mr. Trippier: £170 million at current prices has so far been committed to the initiative up to 1991 by the Manpower Services Commission, acting for the Government. In addition a further £58 million is expected to be committed in respect of TVEI projects to start this year and next.

Of these sums £50.2 million has been spent to date. Education authorities are not required under the terms of the initiative to contribute additional funds beyond those which would normally be committed to the education of the students.

Scottish "Daily Record" and "Sunday Mail"

Mr. Craigen asked the Paymaster General if any assistance has been provided by officials of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service with efforts to obtain a settlement of the current dispute affecting the Scottish Daily Record and Sunday Mail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I understand that ACAS has been in touch with both sides and remains available to assist where it can. I hope that the dispute will soon be resolved.

YTS

Mr. Freeman asked the Paymaster General if he now has final figures for the number of entrants to YTS in 1984-85; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission has released figures today which show that there were 397,351 entrants to YTS in 1984-85.

Cumulative figures at the end of each month were:

	Numbers
April	10,942
May	24,160
June	72,466
July	140,255
August	197,718
September	296,907
October	333,537
November	352,031
December	360,197
1985
January	379,380
February	390,404
March	397,351

The figures given above represent the actual number of scheme starts including second and subsequent starts where trainees have transferred between schemes. We estimate that the number of individuals entering YTS is some 10 per cent. lower than the figures for starts in the table.

These figures differ from those published during 1984-85 because they include notifications of starts which had not been received by the time that the monthly statistics were announced.

The Commission's computerised management informaqution system, from which YTS statistics are obtained, is currently being re-programmed and improved to meet the needs of two year YTS. As a result of this work on the computer system, we will not be able to provide a full range of information on one-year or two-year YTS, including details below area level, until towards the end of summer 1986. However, the most important national, regional and area YTS statistics will continue to be available and more detailed information will be available retrospectively when the re-programming work has been completed.

SCOTLAND

Forestry Planting

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the grades of land that can be released for forestry planting.

Mr. Rifkind: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

North Korea

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Prime Minister if any recent consideration has been given to developing diplomatic relations with the Democratic People's Republic of North Korea; if she will seek to arrange a meeting with that country's president, to discuss the matter; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: There are no plans to develop diplomatic relations with North Korea which we do not recognise as a state. Nor do I intend to seek a meeting of the kind proposed by the hon. Member.

TRANSPORT

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from (a) Strathclyde regional council and (b) Renfrew district council on the future development of Glasgow airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: None. Strathclyde regional council and Renfrew district council submitted their views to the review of Scottish lowland airports policy in 1984 and these were taken into account in the published Report of the working group.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to lift or vary restrictions on traffic movements at, and size of aircraft using, Glasgow airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. The role of Glasgow airport and the nature of its operations were considered carefully during the review of Scottish lowlands airports policy undertaken in 1984. As a result, the Government reaffirmed the existing policy for the Scottish lowland airports in the White Paper on "Airports Policy" published in June 1985 (Cmnd. 9542).

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the technical objections to jumbo jets landing at Glasgow airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The length of the runway at Glasgow would impose some limitations on payloads which could be carried on larger aircraft on longer range services. The review of Scottish lowland airports policy concluded that any increase in the length of the runway could not be justified in economic terms and that the topography would restrict the usefulness of any extension.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport what advice he has sought on the implications of the length of the runway at Glasgow airport for the frequency and size of aircraft that can use the airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This was examined as part of the review of Scottish lowlands airports policy, published in April 1985. The runway at Glasgow is adequate for traffic using the airport, and for the expected growth in traffic.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to expand the customs facilities at Glasgow airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Glasgow airport is the responsibility of the British Airports Authority. The BAA is currently undertaking a programme of improvements to international facilities at Glasgow airport, expected to cost £2 million. The project will provide enlarged accommodation in the baggage reclaim area and new office accommodation for Customs and Immigration authorities as well as improvements to the departure lounge and shopping areas.

Maryport Harbour Commissioners

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of British Rail, he will raise with him the board's failure to appoint two persons to the Maryport harbour commissioners, as required under section 15 of the Maryport Harbour Act 1894.

Mr. Ridley: This is a matter entirely between the Maryport harbour commissioners and the British Railways Board.

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Waller: asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about his Department's investigations into the loss of the MV Derbyshire in 1980.

Mr. Ridley: The Derbyshire was a large bulk carrier which disappeared in the Pacific Ocean in September 1980 with the loss of 44 lives. There were no survivors, no distress messages were received, and no wreckage was recovered which gave any indication of the cause of the loss. The then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Trade announced at the time that in the absence of any material evidence about the cause of the loss of the vessel for formal investigation would serve no useful purpose, although he made clear that this decision could be reconsidered should any new and material evidence come to light.

During the following five years my Department, (and, prior to June 1983, the Department of Trade) commissioned extensive research into the structural design of the Derbyshire. It has also investigated reports of defects found in some of the sister ships to the Derbyshire and has interviewed representatives of the builders and the classification society. The results of all this work are summarised in a report, of which I have placed a copy in the Library. Copies are also being made available to the interested parties.

The report concludes that, while there is some circumstantial evidence which tends to suggest that massive structural failure may have been the cause of the loss of the vessel, this evidence is not in itself conclusive and the way in which the Derbyshire was lost is, and will almost certainly remain, a matter of speculation.

I have given careful consideration to requests from seafarers' representatives and from relatives of those lost on the Derbyshire that a formal investigation should now be held, even at this late stage. While I have every sympathy with those whose relatives were lost with the Derbyshire I have concluded that a formal investigation, conducted some five-and-a-half years after the loss of the vessel, is not likely to produce any significant additional evidence about the cause of her loss, beyond what is contained in the Department's report. I do not therefore propose to order one.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry Assets (Privatisation)

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what communication he has had with the Forestry Commission about privatisation of forestry assets in England.

Mr. Jopling: The Forestry Commission is directly responsible to me for its activities in England. It reports regularly to me on these activities, including the sale of commission assets.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Hospital Ancillary Services

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the privatisation of hospital ancillary services.

Mr. Fowler: The Government are seeking to achieve the best value for money in the National Health Service and the maximum amount of resources devoted to patient care. Part of this policy is to improve the cost effectiveness of the domestic and cleaning services, the catering services and the laundry services. So far, health authorities have put one-third of these services out to competitive tender. Our latest estimate is that as a result of this policy annual savings of £42 million are now being achieved. This compares with a savings figure of only £9 million 12 months previously. These savings come in part from the use of outside contractors and in part from improvements in the efficiency of the in-house organisation. Savings are now mounting steadily as more services are put to tender and further substantial progress can be expected. These savings are being retained by health authorities for use in running and developing services to patients. The resources released are now making a substantial contribution to patient care.

Northern	2,528
Yorkshire	3,378
Trent	2,565
East Anglian	2,855
North West Thames	4,725
North East Thames	3,145
South East Thames	2,986
South West Thames	5,906
Wessex	911
Oxford	1,788
South Western	2,078
West Midlands	2,970
Mersey	3,933
North Western	1,120
SHA's	1,086

AIDS

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what medical experts he has consulted in the course of his consideration of giving syringes to drug addicts for the purpose of limiting the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Hayhoe: Apart from departmental experts' views, I have received advice from practising clinicians in the field of drug abuse. The issue is currently being considered by the Scottish Committee on HTLV III infection and intravenous drug misuse, which is chaired by the director of the south-east Scotland regional blood transfusion service and by the expert advisory group on AIDS, which is chaired by the Government's Chief Medical Officer. No conclusions have yet been reached. The advisory council on the misuse of drugs will be consulted at its next meeting in May.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps are taken by his Department before it seeks to recover certificated housing benefit overpaid so as to ensure that the claimant has first been notified by the relevant local authority (a) that a decision to recover has been made and (b) that the claimant may apply to the authority for a review of that decision.

Mr. Major: Local authorities are under a statutory obligation to notify claimants of all determinations of benefit, including any given rise to an overpayment. The notification must inform the claimant of his right to seek a review of the determination. It is a matter for individual authorities to decide how best to inform claimants of actual amounts of any overpayments and the proposed method of recovery. The Department's local offices become directly involved in recovering only certain categories of overpaid certificated benefit which are referred to them by the local authorities. In these cases the local office informs the claimant of the reason for the overpayment, the proposals for recovery, and that if the claimant disagrees with the calculation of the overpayment he should take this up with the relevant local authority.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provision is being made by his Department for extra staff to be available to deal with exceptionally severe weather payments in order to avoid the long delays to routine claims.

Mr. Major: The manpower provided for DHSS local offices contains a margin to deal with peaks of work such as that relating to exceptionally severe weather which, by their nature, cannot be planned in advance.

Hospitals

Sir Gerard Vaughan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service hospitals have been closed in Berkshire since May 1979; how many National Health Service beds have been withdrawn as a consequence; and how many National Health Service beds have been withdrawn as a result of major downgradings.

Mr. Hayhoe: Since May 1979 four hospitals in Berkshire have been closed. At the time of the closures a total of 230 National Health Service beds had been in use in these four hospitals. This compares with a bed availability of some 4,000 across the whole of the two health districts in Berkshire. Facilities have been provided elsewhere to meet patient needs. The services reprovided include general acute beds, beds for the elderly and elderly mentally ill, and facilities for people with mental handicaps.

There has been no loss of beds as a result of "downgrading" or deterioration in building fabric.

Nurses (Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped)

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, in view of the shortages of nursing staff in the mentally ill and mentally handicapped specialties, he will consider the introduction of further incentive payments to nurses in these areas.

Mr. Hayhoe: Nursing staff in hospital-based mental illness and mental handicap services currently receive a pay lead of £165 per annum.

Although for a variety of reasons recruitment is traditionally difficult, the total number of nursing staff employed in these services in Great Britain rose by 2·3 per cent. between September 1983 and September 1984.

The nursing and midwifery staffs negotiating council is currently reviewing relativities in the nurse clinical grading structure, and the implications of any new structure for existing responsibility allowances and leads. When this work is complete, it will be for the independent review body which considers nurses' pay to recommend appropriate levels for any allowances and leads.

Goods and Services (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Major: Payments to suppliers are not centralised, but may be made from any of the local, regional or central offices of the Department. No figures are therefore available for an average time for payment across the Department as a whole.

NHS (Compensation Scheme)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to introduce a comprehensive state compensation scheme for persons harmed by National Health Service treatment to avoid the necessity of such persons having to resort to the courts.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Mr. McNair-Wilson) on 28 January at columns 493-94, and to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 21 November 1985 at column 288.

Health Authorities (Resources)

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the use by health authorities of the quality adjusted life years formula for allocating resources between different expenditure priorities; which authorities use such formulae; what criteria are used in applying them; whether the criteria vary from region to region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret this information is not available centrally.

The quality adjusted life year is a qualitative measure of health which is being developed experimentally in various centres mainly, so far, for evaluating new medical developments. No concensus has yet emerged on its practical use by health authorities.

Cancer (Aldermaston and Burghfield)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he expects either the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment or the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to produce their findings about incidences of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer among the under 25 year olds living in Aldermaston and Burghfield, by the end of 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out the average level of (a) the state earnings-related pension scheme additional component and (b) the guaranteed minimum pension paid out each year since 1978, both at current and constant prices; and on the basis of the economic assumptions of the five-year rolling Public Expenditure Survey Committee programme, what he estimates will be their levels over the next five years.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Social Security Bill

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate the savings expected to be made from each of the relevant clauses in the Social Security Bill, both in the first year after implementation and in whatever year the saving reaches its maximum.

Mr. Newton: The financial effects of those clauses relating to benefits paid from the national insurance fund were explained in the "Report by the Government Acturary on the Financial Effects of the Bill on the National Insurance Fund" (Cmnd. 9711). On the financial effects of other clauses I would refer the hon. Member to what is said in the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Bill.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list (a) the number of claimants of social security benefits and (b) the number of dependants in 1979 and at the latest available date and if he will calculate the extent to which the increase in unemployment since 1979 correlates with the increase in the number of claimants and dependants.

Mr. Major [pursuant to the reply, 19 March 1986]: I regret it is not possible to provide the information in the form requested without a substantial element of over-counting because some people receive more than one benefit. However, the latest available information in respect of these benefits related solely to unemployment is as follows:

Date	*Number of recipients	Number of dependents†*
	Unemployment benefit only
November 1979	386,600	158,500
November 1984	699,500	154,300
	Unemployment benefit plus supplementary allowance
November 1979	80,100	129,600
December 1983	205,500	351,500
	Supplementary allowance only
November 1979	435,700	382,000
December 1983	1,504,400	1,188,400

* Figures are rounded to the nearest 100
† Adults and children

Although no direct correlation is possible between these two sets of figures there is some indication of an upward trend in the number of unemployed without dependents.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Quality

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the latest long-term water quality objectives and the timetables for achieving them adopted by each authority for both inland and tidal waters.

Mr. John Patten: The responsibility for drawing up detailed water quality objectives and the timetables for their implementation rests with the individual water authorities. Generally there is extensive public consultation and the reports are available to interested parties and published. An overriding consideration is that the objectives reflect the national policy that authorities should maintain and improve the quality of surface waters.

There are also specific quality standards for substances and waters covered by various EC Directives, such as the fresh water fish and the dangerous substances directives. Authorities are required to observe these international obligations.

Emergency Headquarters, Dover

Mr. Peter Rees asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in view of the decision of the Secretary of State for the Home Department not to refurbish the emergency headquarters at Dover of the former sub-region 6.1, those headquarters might be opened for public viewing.

Mr. Tracey: The management and presentation of Dover Castle is the responsibility of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission. Decisions as to which areas should be open to the public are for them to take. My hon. Friend may care to pursue this matter with the chairman.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what complaints he has received about alleged failures by the Camping and Caravanning Club to consult the local authority concerned before issuing a certificate under paragraph 5 of the first schedule to the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have received one complaint of this nature.

Although there is no statutory requirement upon the Camping and Caravanning Club to consult the relevant local planning authority before issuing certificates under paragraph 5 of the first schedule to the 1960 Act, I understand that in practice it invariably does so and that it had in fact notified the district council in the case in question.

Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: 90 per cent. of invoices received by the Crown Suppliers and DOE (Central) are paid within 30 days, and the remainder as soon as queries or disputes have been resolved.

For PSA works contracts, the payment provisions will vary according to the type and value of the contract. Normally there are arrangements for payment on account during the course of a contract, but both those interim payments and the final payment can only be made once the work has been valued and certified as satisfactory. Following such certification, bills are normally paid within three weeks.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Chislehurst of 13 March 1986, he will introduce legislation similar to the Tobacco Products (Control of Advertising, Sponsorship and Sales Promotion) Regulations 1986 which come into force in Eire on 1 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I hope to reach agreement with the tobacco industry during the renegotiation of the voluntary agreement on sports sponsorship.

Community Support Programme (Docklands)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the numbers of workers in the community support programme submitted to him for 1986-87 by the London Docklands Development Corporation which have not been approved; when he expects to approve such applications; and if, in respect of those where a decision cannot be made within the next seven days, he will make it his policy to retain the relevant personnel for three months beyond 31 March 1986.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Water and Sewerage Law

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his proposals for modernising water and sewerage law.

Mr. John Patten: As promised in Cmnd. 9734 "Privatisation of the Water Authorities in England and Wales", I have today published a consultation paper outlining our proposals for modernising the law and have placed copies in the Library. Reform is long overdue and I believe our proposals will benefit both consumers, by resolving some common causes of complaint, and water authorities, by enabling them to operate more efficiently. We would welcome comments on the proposals and they should be sent to the Department by 30 May.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Pollution

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of individuals employed by each water authority on pollution monitoring and control in each year since 1980-81; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not held by my Department but operating expenditure on water quality legislation and pollution alleviation may be helpful. The figures are:

	£million
1980-81	16·1
1981-82	18·3
1982-83	19·1
1983-84	20·6
1984-85	21·1

Further information may be found in the November 1985 edition of Waterfacts, published by the Water Authorities Association, a copy of which I placed in the Library in response to recent questions from the hon. Member from Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Brown).

Management Agreements

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will place a copy of the Gould report on management agreements under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in the Library; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he received the Gould report on management agreements under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mrs. Rumbold: The consultant's report on financial guidelines for management agreements was received in September 1985. It is currently being considered in detail and I shall be making an announcement and publishing the appropriate background information in due course.

Nature Conservation

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 39, if he will consult widely with conservation bodies before issuing a new circular to local authorities giving guidance on their role on nature conservation.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes. It is our intention to ensure that appropriate bodies have been or will be consulted.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to introduce legislation providing for the compulsory registration of private and voluntary sheltered housing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Private and voluntary sheltered housing providing board and "personal care" of the kind defined in part I of the Registered Homes Act 1984 would be covered by that Act. We have no plans to introduce legislation for the registration of ordinary private and voluntary sheltered housing, as this differs from ordinary housing only in addition of particular design features and facilities for help in emergencies.

Planning Advice (Small Firms)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the new circular and booklet on planning advice for small firms.

Mr. Tracey: DOE circular 2/86, "Development by Small Businesses" and the booklet, "A Step by Step Guide to Planning Permission for Small Businesses", were published on 20 March. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Palace of Westminster

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received about the incidence of build-up of static electricity in the Palace of Westminster; and what action he has taken in consequence.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 20 March, c. 255]: I would refer the hon. Member to my replies to my hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 14 March at column 619 and 17 March at column 68.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost of (a) gas, (b) electricity, (c) oil and (d) other fuels for the Palace of Westminster in each of the last five years.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 20 March, c. 255]: Expenditure figures, in cash, for gas, electricity and oil as used on the parliamentary estate as a whole are given in the table. No other fuels are used.

	(a) Gas	(b) Electricity	(c) Oil	(d) Other

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

GCSE

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the cost of introducing the general certificate of secondary education examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 21 March.

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if any transitional arrangements are being made to cater for students who are sick or who fail their O or A-level examinations and who wish to re-take them after the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The first GCSE examinations will be held in summer 1988. GCE O-level examinations will not be available from then on. I understand that the GCE examination boards will be making their normal provision for O-level examinations in winter 1987 which will enable pupils to repeat examinations taken in summer that year. GCE A-level examinations are not affected.

Books (Primary Schools)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the level of expenditure per pupil on text and library books in primary schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Since 1979, spending per primary pupil on books has increased slightly in real terms as measured by the GDP deflator. In their report "The Effect of Local Authority Expenditure Policies on Education Provision in England—1984" Her Majesty's inspectors stated that the level of book provision in primary schools was "satisfactory or better in over four-fifths of LEAs".

The Government's expenditure plans allow authorities to give priority to expenditure on books so long as they take advantage of the scope for savings elsewhere in the education budget and contain their costs.

Overseas Students

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on recommendations affecting his Department's responsibility contained in "Continuing Crisis: the Response to Overseas Student Groups in Hardship", in the light of recent discussions chaired by his hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Mr. Walden: The report "Containing Crisis" was welcomed by the Government and other organisations concerned at the fourth "round table" meeting on matters concerning overseas students chaired by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 27 February. Departments concerned — including this one — are considering the report in detail, and expect to be able to issue a joint response to its recommendations in a few months' time.

Schools Inspectors

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average period that has elapsed between the inspection of a school by Her Majesty's Inspectorate and the publication of its report since 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: Since 1 January 1983, there have been 402 published reports by Her Majesty's Inspectorate on individual primary and secondary schools on the basis of formal inspections. The average time between inspection and publication has been nine months, although Her Majesty's Inspectorate does discuss its findings with the head and governing body of the school on the completion of each inspection. It remains the aim of Her Majesty's Inspectorate, as set out in the 1983 policy statement "The work of Her Majesty's Inspectorate in England and Wales" that reports be issued to individual institutions within six months of an inspection. In addition to carrying out formal inspections, Her Majesty's Inspectorate makes a large number of specialist and routine visits each year to keep in touch with the situation in particular institutions. Her Majesty's Inspectorate reports orally to the staff concerned on what it finds, but these visits do not lead to published reports. In 1985 Her Majesty's Inspectorate visited some 15 per cent. of primary schools and nearly 60 per cent. of secondary schools in England.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools employed in England for each of the last five years.

Sir Keith Joseph: The information is as follows:

(At 1 April)	Number
1982	392
1983	382
1984	390
1985	454

* Forecast.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in England who have had (a) no experience of teaching in primary schools, (b) up to three years teaching experience in primary schools, (c) three to six years teaching in primary schools and (d) more than six years teaching in primary schools;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in England who have had (a) no experience of teaching in secondary schools, (b) up to three years teaching experience in secondary schools, (c) three to six years teaching in secondary schools and (d) more than six years teaching in secondary schools;

(3) if any of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in England have had no experience of teaching in schools.

Sir Keith Joseph: The overwhelming majority of Her Majesty's inspectors are appointed on the basis of proven success as teachers in schools or establishments of further or higher education. As Her Majesty's inspectors are appointed in mid-career, many have taught successfully in a number of different phases of the education service. In exceptional cases, Her Majesty's inspectors with a non-teaching background may be appointed on the basis of experience in other aspects of education which the inspectorate considers necessary to have within its numbers. The Department does not maintain in readily accessible form records of all the previous employment of Her Majesty's inspectors. The detailed information requested could thus only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Subject Teachers

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what proportion of teachers of home economics in secondary schools in England are estimated to be (a) over 50 years of age and (b) over 40 years of age;

(2) what proportion of teachers of foreign languages in secondary schools in England are estimated to be (a) over 50 years of age and (b) over 40 years of age.

Mr. Chris Patten: The estimates that follow are derived from a survey of a sample of maintained secondary schools carried out by this Department in 1984.

England
Full-time teachers teaching named subject in maintained secondary schools, 1984

	Estimated percentage who were (a) 50 years of age and over	(b) 40 years of age and over
Home economics	17	44
French	15	40
German	10	37
Spanish	9	34
Russian	17	53
Italian	19	36
Other modern languages	38	61
Classical languages	27	62

With the exception of home economics and French, the numbers of teachers of the subjects listed who are in particular age groups are relatively small. Percentages shown may therefore be subject to wide margins of sampling error. Small differences between percentages should therefore not be treated as significant.

Poundswick School, Manchester

Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what steps he intends to take to seek to ensure the restoration of education to pupils at the Poundswick school, Manchester;

(2) what steps he intends to take to seek to ensure that all pupils of Poundswick school, Manchester who wish to do so are able to sit their examinations this summer.

Mr. Dunn: These matters are for the Manchester local education authority. My right hon. Friend trusts that they will very soon be able to bring the disruption to an end.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Domestic Furniture (Fire Safety)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to improve the safety of domestic furniture with regard to the danger of fumes emanating from them in the event of fire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I would refer the hon. Member to the answers given on 20 March to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) at column 266 and the hon. Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) at columns 264-5.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report a table based on (a) the figures for the fourth quarter of 1976 and (b) the average for the years 1973 to 1976 inclusive, showing the change in the real exchange rate, measured in terms of export prices, for the latest available period against Germany, the United States of America and Japan; and if he will also include the change in the nominal exchange rate to date compared with the average for the period in question, together with the rates of inflation over the past 12 months.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the table.

Non-woven Fabrics

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will give his Department's estimate of current and future demand for United Kingdom manufactured non-woven fabrics;

(2) if he will give his Department's estimate of United Kingdom installed capacity and production of non-woven fabrics.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The available information relates to the production and demand for non-woven textile fabrics excluding non-wovens of plastic and paper, figures for which are given in the following table. No figures are available for installed capacity or future demand for non-woven fabrics.

*Non-woven textile fabrics

	1984 £ million	1984 Q1-Q3 £ million	1985 Q1-Q3 £ million

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what applications he is currently considering for grant aid for the installation of new productive capacity of non-woven fabrics.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Details of applications for grant aid are not available for reasons of commercial confidentiality. However, details of the following are published quarterly in British Business: (1) individual payments of old-style regional development grants over £25,000; (2) payments to individuals of new-style regional development grants which cumulatively amount to more than £25,000; (3) when payments have been made, offers of regional selective assistance over £5,000 and general investment support.

Scientific Research

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on how the United Kingdom's spending on scientific research compares to other European countries.

Mr. Pattie: The available information from international sources relates to gross expenditure on research and development (R & D). The latest data are given in the table below.

Gross R&D expenditure at 1983 purchasing power parities

	$ billion
Germany	19·7
France	14·3
United Kingdom	13·5
Italy	6·0
Netherlands	3·3

Petrol

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set up an urgent inquiry by the Director General of Fair Trading under section 13 of the Competition Act 1980 into the price of petrol.

Mr. Howard: The Government's concern about the oil companies' initial response to the petrol duty change announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Budget is well known. However, the powers under section 13 of the Act have not previously been used. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry will consider whether this or other action under competition legislation may be justified in the light of further developments in the petrol retail market and all relevant circumstances.

Import Substitution

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he takes to promote import substitution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

St. Mary's, Southampton

25. Mr. Chope asked the hon. Member for Wokingham, as representing the Church Commissioners, what is the policy of the Church Commissioners on the sale and development of the deanery grounds at St. Mary's, Southampton.

Sir William van Straubenzee: The Commissioners do not own this land, neither have they received an application for their statutory consent to its sale and development.

PRIME MINISTER

British Airways

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with the chairman of British Airways about whether the Bermuda 2 air routes agreement must be settled before British Airways can be privatised; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: This matter was discussed when I met the chairman of British Airways on 17 March. He confirmed that British Airways supports Her Majesty's Government's efforts to achieve a successful outcome in the current negotiations on the Bermuda 2 agreement.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she has received any reports of the effect of changing and delaying the dates for the privatisation of British Airways on staff morale at all levels; if she will now send a message of encouragement to the chairman and all his employees; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government have never set a date for the privatisation of British Airways and I regret that it is still not possible to do so. I know that this has been a major disappointment for the board and staff of British Airways. The company and all its employees deserve great credit for bringing the airline to a state of readiness for privatisation, which I hope will soon be achieved.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy not to take any action to prevent British Airways from purchasing or giving firm orders for (a) necessary replacement aircraft, (b) new aircraft for replacement or expansion of trade, (c) refurbishing existing aircraft and (d) modern avionic navigational and safety equipment from now until the mid 1990s; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: British Airways has received authorisation for all the major equipment needs it currently foresees for the immediate future and has no requests for investment approval outstanding. Satisfaction of British Airways' further investment requirements will continue to depend on the viability of the investment, and the performance of the business, which will necessarily determine the company's ability, both before and after privatisation, to raise finance from its shareholders and elsewhere.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the change in the performance of British Airways over the past three years: and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: British Airways has turned a pre-tax loss of £110·6 million in 1981-82 into a profit of £168·1 million in 1984-85 and I understand that it is now one of the world's most profitable major international airlines.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on Government policy on the future of British Airways.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the statement which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport made on this subject on 12 March at columns 482-3.

Leicester

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister what funds have been made available to the city of Leicester in each of the past three years and to date, broken down by Department; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The readily available information covers grants and subsidies to the city of Leicester district council and is given in the table. The figures for inner-area programme, slum clearance and improvement grants are from DOE central records of payments and entitlements, whereas the balance of specific grants not identified by Departments has been estimated from the authority's outturn or budget returns.

The figures do not include allocations of money other than to the local authority—for instance, social security payments, funding for hospitals and other health services, aid for employment and training measures, grants to companies, voluntary bodies, other institutions and individuals and support for the arts. Details of this funding could not be obtained without disproportionate cost, but it would be in total be much larger than the grants and subsidies to the local authority shown here.

Notes:

1. The block grant figure for 1982-83 is final. Those for 1983-84 to 1985-86 are based on the latest supplementary reports for those years.
2. The figures for domestic rate relief grant for 1982-83 to 1984-85 are final. The figure for 1985-86 is the first estimate.
3. Housing benefit includes rent rebates, rent allowances and rate rebates. In 1982-83, payments were made by both DOE and DHSS. From 1983-84 payments have been made only by DHSS.
4. The 1985-86 figure for inner area programme is for payments to date.
5. The 1985-86 figures for slum clearance, homes insulation scheme, improvement grants and DHSS housing benefit payments are provisional.
6. The figures for the balance of specific grants not paid by the DOE have been estimated from the authority's outturn or budget returns.

Energy Efficiency (Low Income Households)

Mr. Rost asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Energy and the Department of Health and Social Security of the Government's policy towards promoting energy efficiency in buildings occupied by low-income households.

The Prime Minster: In the short term, the most effective way to help low income households with their heating bills is through the social security system. The Department of Health and Social Security provides such assistance through the weekly scale rates for those on supplementary benefit; on top of that, heating additions are now worth about £400 million a year, which is £140 million more in real terms than when this Government took office. Meanwhile, the Government's energy efficiency campaign provides advice for all households on how to improve the energy efficiency of their homes. In addition, the Government-funded voluntary sector insulation projects, which provide a free or low-cost basic insulation service for low income households, doubled in number during 1985 and are expected to double again during Energy Efficiency Year. I am satisfied with co-ordination between the Departments of Energy and of Health and Social Security on these respective programmes.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Autocrime

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with insurance companies about the security from theft of motor vehicles and parts thereof and the contents of motor vehicles.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The motor insurance industry is represented on the working group set up last year by the Home Office standing conference on crime prevention to consider autocrime. The group is currently discussing how motor insurers might reflect in premiums the presence or absence of sophisticated security measures. At the recent seminar on crime prevention held by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, motor insurers agreed to consider security in rating vehicles for insurance and in the use of excesses on settlements.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home department how many prosecutions there have been in England and Wales for theft of a motor vehicle in the last three years; and how many of these have been successful.

Mr. Mellor: The information on the results of criminal proceedings for offences of theft or unauthorised taking of motor vehicles is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" —table S1.1(A), Volume 1, and table S2.1(A), volume 2, under offence classification 48. Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motor vehicles have been reported stolen in the area of the Metropolitan police and the rest of England and Wales, respectively, in each of the last three years; and how many of these subsequently have been recovered.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of offences of theft or unathorised taking of a motor vehicle recorded by the police are published annually by police force area in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales, Supplementary Tables Volume 3" (table S.3.1 of the issue for 1984). Total figures for England and Wales are also published annually in a Home Office statistical bulletin, the most recent issue (number 4/86) giving that for 1985; 88,076 such offences were recorded by the Metropolitan police in 1985. The numbers of stolen vehicles recovered are given in the following table.

Stolen vehicles recovered

	Numbers
	Metropolitan Police District	England and Wales
1983	52,200	247,800
1984	58,200	255,900
1985	54,900	262,700

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he is having with motor manufacturers to make vehicles more secure from theft.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Motor manufacturers are represented on the working group set up last year by the Home Office standing conference on crime prevention to consider car security. The group is now following up recommendations made in its report published last November which, inter alia, called on motor manufacturers to persuade car buyers that a high level of security is a desirable feature in new cars and to provide more sophisticated security features as optional extras. Motor manufacturers are also represented on the committee drawing up the British standard on car security, one of the initiatives to emerge from the recent crime prevention seminar held by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research is being conducted by Her Majesty's Government into the security from theft of motor vehicles, their parts and contents.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Recent research projects in this area conducted or commissioned by the Home Office have investigated: possible design changes to enhance vehicle security; the problem of vehicle-related crime in Basingstoke; and abuse of the car import system.

Police Interviews (Tape Recording)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a further statement on the effectiveness of the tape recording of police interviews in selected experimental areas.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The two-year period of field trials of tape recording of police interviews with suspects in five areas is nearly complete. A further interim report will be published by the Home Office research and planning unit later this year. The final report will be prepared when all the data from the trials have been analysed.

Officers in all five areas have reacted positively to the new procedures, and there is some early evidence that tape recording has led to an increase in the rate of guilty pleas when cases come before the court.

In December 1985, the Home Office approved expenditure on police minor works connected with the introduction of some tape recording facilities in 29 forces, additional to the field trial areas. Those works will be started in the course of the current financial year. We shall be encouraging the implementation of tape recording of interviews and we shall shortly be inviting proposals for expenditure in the next financial year.

In the course of this year, my right hon. Friend intends to issue a code of practice in connection with the tape recording of interviews.

United States Air Force (Traffic Incident)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Hampshire about the circumstances in which a cruise convoy support vehicle crashed and overturned on the A339, two miles from Basingstoke, at 12.30 pm on 17 March.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable of Hampshire that this incident involved a vehicle belonging to the United States air force towing a trailer carrying camping equipment. At 11.45 am, as a heavy goods vehicle approached from the opposite direction, the driver of the USAF vehicle appeared to lose control and after mounting a bank it overturned. Three persons were on board but none was hurt. The vehicle did not form part of a cruise missile or any other convoy, and there was no wider threat to safety.

Licensing Hours

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further consultations he has in mind to test public reaction to the introduction of flexible drinking times in public houses in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have no such further consultations in mind at present. My right hon. Friend will be taking into account the public response to the recent report by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on drinking and attitudes to licensing in Scotland before deciding whether the licensing laws in England and Wales might be changed.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has intentions of completing his consideration of the flexible hours for licensed premises and his discussions with interested parties in time to present legislation in this Session of Parliament.

Mr. Mellor: We have no plans for legislation on liquor licensing hours in this session of Parliament. We shall be looking carefully at the available evidence on flexible licensing hours in Scotland before reaching a decision on whether legislation is desirable in principle.

Leicester Prison

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current prison population at Leicester prison; and how this compares with each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The information is given in the following table:

Population of Leicester Prison at the end of February

Year	Population
1976	400
1977	359
1978	348
1979	379
1980	397
1981	374
1982	388
1983	428
1984	394
1985	394
1986	415

Rape Defendants

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to remove the anonymity of rape defendants once charged; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a Question by my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Mr. McNair-Wilson) on 20 March 1986 at column 277.

Indian Sub-continent (Visitors)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors from the Indian sub-continent have failed to return home within the period specified on their entry clearance in the last 12 months.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available.

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy not to admit persons from the Indian sub-continent to the United Kingdom on either a permanent or a temporary basis without their first obtaining written permission from a United Kingdom post in the sub-continent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Any person who comes to the United Kingdom for settlement, including for marriage with a view to settlement must first obtain an entry clearance from a British mission abroad. People from the Indian sub-continent do not require entry clearance if they come here as visitors or students but they may apply abroad if they wish to establish before travelling whether they will prima facie qualify for admission on arrival. All immigration control arrangements are kept under continuous re-examination in the light of changing patterns of travel and traffic.

Prisoners (Visits)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons which currently allow visits to convicted prisoners more frequently than once every 28 days and identify which of them allow visits once a fortnight.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been (a) the cost of fares, (b) the administrative cost and (c) the total cost each year since 1971 of the assisted visits scheme for close relatives visiting prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information, which relates to total expenditure on assisted visits to inmates in the years from 1976-77 onwards is as follows:

1976-77	266,901
1977-78	353,625
1978-79	305,127
1979-80	314,315
1980-81	402,395
1981-82	*318,234
1982-83	*617,025
1983-84	637,795
1984-85	702,808

* As a result of a delay in billing in 1981-82, repayment of about £130,000 relating to expenditure incurred by the Department of Health and Social Security in that financial year was carried over to 1982-83.

These figures do not include administrative costs, which cannot be separately identified.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has any plans to extend the assisted visits scheme;

(2) if he has any plans to extend the assisted visits scheme to cover (a) all visits by close relatives presently eligible to receive assistance for which a visiting order is issued, (b) visits to prisoners serving sentences of less than three months, (c) reception visits and (d) visits by close relatives in full-time work with an income not above supplementary benefit level; and if he has estimates of (i) the costs of fares, (ii) the administrative costs and (iii) the total costs of such extensions.

Mr. Mellor: We have at present no plans to extend the assisted visits scheme. Area probation services already have discretion to provide financial assistance with visits to prison department establishments by close relatives in full-time work with an income not above supplementary benefit level. I have no estimates of the financial information requested.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to increase the funds available for assisted visits.

Mr. Mellor: In 1985-86, estimate provision, in class IX, vote 8, of £750,000 was made for assisted vsits to inmates. The corresponding figure for 1986-87, in class XI, vote 2, is £864,400.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the terms of reference of the inquiry recently being conducted concerning the assisted visits scheme; and if he will publish its findings.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services has initiated an efficiency scrutiny of agency benefit arrangements for low income families, including financial assistance for visits to prison department establishments. I understand that its terms of reference are:

"To examine the current arrangements for claiming and determining entitlement, on the ground of low income, to exemption from, repayment of, or help with charges for NHS prescriptions, dental treatment, spectacles and optical treatment, wigs and appliances, and fares to and from hospitals and prisons, and, pending final Ministerial decision on the future of the scheme, free welfare milk and vitamins; and to recommend changes which, in the light of the revised structure of the main income-related benefits, will lead to more efficient and effective low-income arrangements."

The question of publication is for my right hon. Friend.

Seals

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his latest estimate of the number of seals in British waters; and how this compares with the situation five and 10 years ago, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available figures, published in the news journal of the National Environment Research Council in December 1985, show that the estimated total populations of grey and common seals in British waters in 1984 were 84,500 and 21,500 respectively. In 1979, the corresponding figures were 72,000 and 20,500 and in 1974 they were 61,000 and 18,500.

Manchester University (Home Secretary's Visit)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress and conduct of the inquiry by the Avon and Somerset police force into the events surrounding the visit of the then Home Secretary to Manchester university on 1 March 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This investigation is now being conducted by the deputy chief constable of the South Wales police. It is expected to be completed within the next 10 weeks. The results will then be considered by the Police Complaints Authority and, if appropriate, the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Repatriation

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to his Department in each of the last five years of paying for tickets to enable those who have been refused leave to enter the United Kingdom to return to their home country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that this information is not available.

The total expenditure on removal of persons from the United Kingdom at public expense, including not only those refused leave to enter, but also those deported, or removed as illegal entrants, in each financial year since 1981-82 is as follows:

Expenditure (to nearest £1,000)

1981-82	555,000
1982-83	546,000
1983-84	581,000
1984-85	856,000

Arrangements have been made so that the expenditure on persons refused entry, and on the other categories mentioned above, will be separately identified from the beginning of the financial year 1986-87.

Magistrates' Court, Southampton

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will add the scheme for a new magistrates' court in Southampton to his Department's priority planning list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We shall shortly be notifying Hampshire county council that the scheme for a new magistrates courthouse in Southampton has been placed on the priority planning list.

Immigration

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time that an individual, who is refused leave to enter the United Kingdom but is granted temporary admission pending the making of representations by an hon. Member, stays in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested.

The length of time a passenger refused entry spends on temporary admission in these circumstances depends on several factors, including the time within which written representations are received, the number of times further representations are submitted in the same case, and the resources available to consider the representations.

Protection of Animals Act 1911

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 arguing for an extension of the clause beyond domestic and captive animals.

Mr. Mellor: No central record is kept, but we receive a number of representations on this matter from hon. Members and others, from time to time.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought under section 1 of the Protection of Animalls Act 1911 in the last five years in respect of hedgehogs; and how many have resulted in conviction.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 to cover animals other than domestic and captive.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have any plans for legislation to extend the scope of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 to include wild animals. However, there are other statutes which provide protection for particular species, for example, deer and badgers. The course which the Government adopted in the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 was to give special protection and to extend it where appropriate to certain species which were thought to be in need of it.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is satisfied with the present law protecting animals as it relates to preventing cruelty to hedgehogs; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have any plans to extend the scope of the Protection of Animals Act 1911 to include wild animals. Schedule 6 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 contains restrictions on the killing of hedgehogs.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Peter Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further initiatives he proposes to take in the field of crime prevention.

Mr. Hurd: Much work is already in hand following the crime prevention seminar hosted by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in January. But it is important that the momentum is not lost and I have therefore established a ministerial group to be chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, with the following terms of reference:

"To carry forward the Government's strategy for preventing crime and the fear of crime by reducing opportunities that exist for crime to occur, and to create confidence within the community that crime can be reduced, having particular regard to:

(i) developing proposals for the more effective implementation of that strategy; and

(ii) the arrangements within and outside of government for the co-ordination, development and implementation of initiatives.

The Group should take such action as it considers necessary and report on its work".

The success of any initiative on crime prevention depends to a great extent on public support and involvement, and the group will also seek to heighten public awareness.

The group will include Ministers and officials from the following Departments: Her Majesty's Treasury; Northern Ireland Office; Scottish Office; Welsh Office; Department of Education and Science; Department of Employment; Department of Energy; Department of Trade and Industry; Department of Health and Social Security; Department of the Environment; Department of Transport.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Hong Kong

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's title to Victoria Island and Kowloon, respectively, distinguishing if necessary between different parts of Kowloon; whether the title to any part of these two areas is held with any limit of time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The island of Hong Kong was ceded in perpetuity to the Crown in 1842; the Kowloon peninsula, south of Boundary street, was also ceded as a dependency of Hong Kong in 1860. The remainder of Kowloon was included in the 99-year lease granted in 1898. In accordance with the joint declaration of the United Kingdom and the People's Republic of China, the United Kingdom will restore the whole of Hong Kong to China with effect from 1 July 1997.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will tabulate the results of the recent elections in Hong Kong by listing in declining order the total number of votes case for each candidate, the percentage of votes cast in each case, for each candidate in the relevant seat, the turnout in the seat, and which candidate was, and was not, elected.

Mr. Renton: It has not been possible in the time available to obtain from the Governor of Hong Kong the information requested. I will write to my hon. Friend with details as soon as possible and arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Nicaragua

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the United States Government concerning American foreign policy towards Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: As my right hon. and learned Friend said in reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 5 February, at column 267, we support the Contadora process: we obviously take steps to ensure that the United States is aware of our views. We want to see Nicaragua commit itself fully to the Contadora principles.

Contras (Central America)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what statements have been made by the Government in the last three years concerning the activities of the Contras in Central America and their financing.

Mr. Eggar: We have made it clear on many occasions, and most recently in my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 5 February at column 267, that we do not believe the problems of the region can be resolved by armed force. We support a negotiated settlement on the basis of the Contadora principles.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in the course of negotiations on the Anglo-Irish agreement, he held discussions with the Prime Minister or Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Ireland on the substance of the proposed agreement, in the context of discussions with other European Economic Community member states.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I held a number of discussions with Irish Ministers about the Anglo-Irish agreement. No other EC member state was involved or represented in any of these discussions.

USSR (Separate Recognition)

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what way Her Majesty's Government gave separate recognition to certain member states of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Renton: We do not recognise as a separate state any part of the USSR. Our acceptance in the negotiations leading up to the establishment of the United Nations that the Ukrainian SSR and the Byelorussian SSR, as well as the USSR, should be treated as full UN members with appropriate voting and other rights, does not affect that position.

Australia (EC Trade)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will protest to the European Economic Community Commission on the refusal of Mr. Willie de Clercq, Commissioner for External Affairs, and other European Economic Commission officials to fulfil scheduled discussions on trade with representatives of the Australian Goverment; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The high level consultations between Australia and Commission officials have been postponed. The President of the Commission and his colleagues will be holding talks with the Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Hawke, when he visits Brussels on 22 April.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Electricity Costs

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about electricity costs to the agricultural industry.

Mrs. Fenner: In recent months we received only one representation concerning electricity costs. Energy pricing policy is a matter for the Secretary of State for Energy.

Carcase Weights

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the weight of a carcase is classified under regulations made by his Department as cold weight after one hour following the stunning and consequent slaughter of an animal.

Mr. Gummer: When beef or sheep variable premium is claimed at the deadweight stage, carcases should normally be presented for certification within twenty four hours of slaughter. Payment is based on the cold weight of the carcases concerned which, for the purposes of these schemes, is taken to be the actual weight recorded in cases where the carcase is weighed more than one hour after slaughter. In cases where the carcase is weighed before this time, an adjustment is made to allow for subsequent weight loss.

Intervention Stores

Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost of storage at each intervention store within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: Storage costs at individual stores vary with the quantities held, which are liable to fluctuate, but total intervention storage and related costs for the 1985-86 financial year are estimated at £110 million.

Brown FK

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards the proposal by the EEC Commission to move Brown FK (herring colouring) from annex II (permitted colourings) to annex I (prohibited colourings) of the eighth amendment to the colours direction (Com. (85) 474 Final); what information he has as to which other EEC states use Brown FK; what assessment he has made of the effect of its prohibition (a) on the herring industry and (b) on the colour of the British kipper; what representations he has received on this from the British industry; and if he will veto any proposal to prohibit Brown FK.

Mrs. Fenner: The eighth amendment to the EC directive on colouring matter in foodstuffs as proposed by the Commission would transfer Brown FK from annex II (those colours which member states may permit if they wish) to annex I (these colours which member states are required to permit). The United Kingdom supports this proposal which recognises that there are no toxicological reasons to prohibit the use of Brown FK. I understand that the Republic of Ireland also permits the use of Brown FK in smoked herrings.

My Department has received representations from the United Kingdom kipper industry regarding Brown FK and is aware of the importance attached by the industry to its use.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of the effect since 1979 of the common agricultural policy on (a) the retail prices index and (b) real disposable incomes.

Mrs. Fenner: Between 1979 and 1985 the retail price index rose by 67 per cent. and real personal disposable incomes are forecast to have risen by 6 per cent. The corresponding increase in retail food prices was 47 per cent., representing a fall in real terms of 12 per cent.; prices received by agricultural producers rose by 30 per cent. The effect of the common agricultural policy on these indicators could be estimated only on the basis of an array of assumptions on alternatives to the policy that actually obtained. Restraint on CAP price changes in recent years has, however, contributed to the real fall in food prices since 1979.

Salmon Stocks

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to conserve salmon stocks in British waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Conservation of British salmon stocks has been an active concern of this Government and of the bodies responsible at local level for maintaining and developing salmon fisheries: the water authorities in England and Wales and the district salmon fishery boards in Scotland. These bodies operate a wide range of measures to regulate salmon fisheries in British waters and to promote the conservation and development of salmon stocks. Research and development into salmon and freshwater fisheries currently costs about £4 million a year and a large part of this is devoted to salmon conservation.

It is because of our long history of such active concern about salmon stocks and strict regulation of fisheries that we have been able to keep the salmon in our rivers over a period when several other countries have seen their stocks of Atlantic salmon decline drastically.

Nevertheless, the threat presented by illegal fishing is the most serious cause for concern and we devoted a lot of effort to examining the very interesting proposals put forward by the salmon sales group of the former National Water Council for a salmon tagging scheme to tackle the poaching problem. Unfortunately, that proved to present too many difficulties to be viable. We therefore brought forward a proposal to tackle the trade in illegally caught salmon by making it an offence to possess or handle salmon, believing or having reason to suspect that it was illegally taken, and backed this up with a proposal to licence salmon dealers, who would be required to keep suitable records.

Both these proposals are enshrined in the Salmon Bill which is currently before the House, together with other proposals to improve further the regulation and management of salmon fisheries.

Intervention Board (Headquarters)

Mr. Silvester asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider Manchester as the new site for the EEC Intervention Board headquarters.

Mr. Jopling: If a move were proposed, the merits of alternative locations, including the north of England, would be considered.

Wheat

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the subsidy per tonne on wheat produced in the United Kingdom in 1983, 1984 and in 1985;

(2) what was the total subsidy on wheat produced in the United Kingdom in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Gummer: There are no subsidies paid directly to producers for cereals production. The market prices of wheat in the United Kingdom are supported by means of a system of intervention purchases, levies on imports and refunds on exports. Details of this expenditure can be found in the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce's annual report for 1983 and 1984. The report for 1985 is due to be published in June.

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to which countries Britain exported wheat in the last five financial years; and what was the total quantity and value per country in each year.

Mr. Gummer: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the percentage levy on imported wheat for the last financial year; and what is the levy in the current financial year;

(2) what was the percentage levy on imported maize for the last financial year; and what is the levy in the current financial year.

Mr. Gummer: Rates of import levy are set daily by the European Commission. The levy is a specific amount representing the difference between world prices and EC threshold prices. Simple averages of the daily rates applicable on imports of common wheat into the United Kingdom from third countries during the period April 1984 to March 1985 and April 1985 to mid-March 1986 were £48/tonne and £75/tonne respectively. The corresponding figures for maize were £37/tonne and £62/tonne. These figures are net of the United Kingdom monetary compensatory amounts.

Grain Exports

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total value of grain exports in the last financial year; and how this compares with the value of grain retained for home consumption.

Mr. Gummer: The value of grain exported from the United Kingdom in the period April 1984 to March 1985 was £637 million. The value of grain exported from April 1985 to the end of January 1986 was £434 million. Comparable data for grain retained for home consumption are not available. Information on the value of total cereals output is, however, set out in table 22 of the annual review of agriculturue White Paper (Cmnd. 9708).

Subsidies

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of agricultural subsidies for the last financial year and the estimated amounts for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Gummer: Public expenditure in the United Kingdom on market support under the CAP, national market support and structural measures for agriculture, as set out in table 3.4 of the Government's expenditure plans 1986-87 to 1988-89 (Cmnd. 9702) is as follows:

	Year	£ million
Outturn	1984-85	1,694
Estimated outturn	1985-86	2,154
Planned	1986-87	1,753

WALES

Welsh Development Agency

3. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency since its inception.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: From 1 January 1976 to 31 March 1986 gross expenditure by the Welsh Development Agency will have totalled some £624 million.

Labour Statistics

13. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Wales what are the most recent unemployment figures for Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In February 1986 the seasonally adjusted number of unemployed people in Wales was 176,900.

British Rail

14. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the performance of British Rail in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has received 20 such representations in the last year, most of them concerning services in north Wales.

15. Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were unemployed for more than one year in (a) Clwyd and (b) Wales in (i) March 1979 and (ii) 1986 at the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In January 1986, the number of claimants unemployed for more than a year in Wales and Clwyd were 78,014 and 10,128, respectively. Figures available for 1979 cannot properly be compared with these since they relate to numbers registered, but were 22,844 for Wales and 4,117 for Clwyd.

Machynlleth Chest Hospital

16. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from Powys health authority about additional funds for Machynlleth chest hospital.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I have not received any representations on the subject from Powys health authority.

Education

17. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what recent steps he has taken to improve the standard of state education in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Current policies were set out in the White Paper "Better Schools" and are progressively being carried into effect.

Chirk and Ruabon Bypass

18. Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what the present timetable is for completion of the Chirk and Ruabon bypass; and whether there are any plans for a dual carriageway along the A483.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The estimated opening date of the Ruabon bypass is autumn 1987. The timing of the Chirk bypass depends on the National Coal Board's proposals to undertake opencast mining on the intended line of the road. The Ruabon and Gresford-Pulford bypasses will be dual carriageway. The Newbridge and Chirk bypasses will be single carriageway.

University Hospital

19. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will enumerate the departments with the University Hospital of Wales that have received extra funding during the current financial year to meet technological medical advances.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The following departments at the University Hospital of Wales have received extra funding from my Department during the current financial year to meet technological medical advances:

Cardiac Surgery	Sterile Products Unit
Cardiology	Child Health
Assay Service	Medical Microbiology
Drug Information Service	Medical Biochemistry
Haematology
Orthopaedics

Part of the district health authority allocations also includes an element for new technology and is in turn built in to university departmental budgets. This item cannot be identified specifically.

South Glamorgan Health Authority

21. Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what cuts he has imposed on South Glamorgan health authority in 1985-86 and for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: None. On the contrary, the initial revenue allocation of £127 million notified to South Glamorgan for 1985-86 represents a cash increase of 4·6 per cent. over the previous year. In 1986-87 South Glamorgan will receive an initial allocation of £135 million, which represents a cash increase of 5·6 per cent. over its 1985-86 provision.

Nurses' Homes

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that no nurses' homes should be sold in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It is the Government's policy that the NHS in Wales should provide accomodation for staff only where there is no reasonable alternative. Every effort should be made to sell surplus property and to use the proceeds to improve services to patients.

Rural Areas (Support)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what support is available from Government sources for the development of rural areas in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: A very extensive range of assistance is provided by the Government and their various agencies towards developments in rural Wales. I am today publishing a document which sets out in detail what is already on offer. The document also describes a new grant scheme (development of rural initiative, venture and enterprise—DRIVE) which is being introduced by the Welsh Development Agency and Mid Wales Development. One million pounds is being made available over the next two years for this scheme, the aim of which is to stimulate private sector investment in services, tourism related, leisure and craft projects in rural areas. The two agencies will consult and collaborate with the Wales Tourist Board in respect of applications which have a tourism dimension. Some to the existing schemes operated by the Welsh Development Agency and Mid Wales Develoment are also being extended or streamlined; and the total package is to be marketed under the label "Rural Enterprise". Government agencies will continue to work with local enterprise agencies where these exist. Efforts will also be made to establish on a pilot basis and in a few areas rural enterprise groups which will be encouraged to identify and bring forward ideas for development within their own communities. This new initiative underlines the commitment of the Government to the continued development of rural Wales.

A copy of the document being published today has been placed in the Library.

Derelict Land

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each county in Wales the amount of derelict land, in hectares, in (a) 1974 and (b) the latest available date; and if he will indicate the number of hectares of land restored by each county for the corresponding period.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Figures are not available for 1974, but the amount of derelict land in 1972 when the last survey was undertaken was as follows:

1972

	Hectares
Clwyd	1,177
Dyfed	2,113
Gwent	2,762
Gwynedd	1,968
Mid Glamorgan	3,631
Powys	665
South Glamorgan	508
West Glamorgan	1,658
Total	14,482

Detailed information is not available for the amount of derelict land at present, but the Welsh Development Agency's assessment, taking account of land reclaimed and new dereliction, is that the overall amount of dereliction remains broadly the same.

Figures are not available by county since 1972 but the area of derelict land reclaimed in the period since 1975 is as follows:

Area Reclaimed

	Hectares
Clwyd	151
Dyfed	244
Gwent	767
Gwynedd	81
Mid Glamorgan	734
Powys	17
South Glamorgan	102
Total	2,545

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the distribution of derelict land in Wales in (a) 1974 and (b) the most recent available date, by the following categories: (i) spoil heaps, (ii) excavation and pits, (iii) military and so on dereliction, (iv) derelict railway land, (v) other forms of dereliction and (vi) total.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is not available in the form requested. A survey of derelict land in Wales was carried out in 1972 and this identified some 14,000 hectares of derelict land of which about 50 per cent. was thought to be attributable to coal mining activities. The latest estimate by the WDA, taking account of land reclaimed and new dereliction, is that the overall amount of dereliction remains broadly the same.

Schools Inspectors

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to increase the proportion of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools employed in Wales who have experience of teaching in primary schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no plans to increase the proportion of Her Majesty's inspectors who have experience of teaching in primary schools.

In making appointments to the inspectorate a balance is sought between the requirements to cover all the main subject areas of instruction and phases of education. In addition to individuals appointed, who have experience of primary schools teaching, most of those who enter the inspectorate from teacher training posts have had regular contact with primary schools in their former posts and others have had experience of visiting primary schools as LEA advisers or officers. The great majority of Her Majesty's inspectors have acquired within the inspectorate substantial experience of primary schools through inspection visits.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the most recent information relating to Her Majesty's inspectors of schools' reports on schools supplied to him in accordance with paragraph 7 of his Department's circular 11/83; and if he will make it his policy to publish all such information in future.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: It is not the Department's policy to publish such information, which remains confidential to the Department and the local education authorities concerned. It would be for individual local education authorities in Wales to decide whether they would be agreeable to their response to reports made by Her Majesty's inspectors of schools being published.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if any of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales have had no experience of teaching in schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Five of Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales have no experience of teaching in schools.

M4 (Parking Areas)

Sir Raymond Gower asked the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for the provision of parking areas along the M4 motorway within Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Parking provision for drivers using the M4 already exists at the Sarn and Pont Abraham service areas. It is our policy to encourage the provision of service areas at intervals of roughly 25 miles.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Rowlands asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will give the corresponding Welsh figures for those in employment and the increase and decrease of employment in Wales, to those given for Great Britain in table 3.11 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1986-87."

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Figures for self-employment and Her Majesty's forces' employment are not available for Wales for September. The following table therefore applies to June each year (1 July in the case of Her Majesty's forces).

Employment estimates
Thousands, change in Wales (not seasonally adusted)
Employees in employment

	Male	Female full-time	Female part-time	Self employed*	Her Majesty's forces†	Employed labour force
June 1983 to June 1984	−7	+8	+3	+19	0	+23
June 1984 to June 1985	−9	−3	+6	+10	0	+4

* 1985 figure is a forecast based on 1981-84 rate of increase.
† Based in Wales at 1 July each year.

SCOTLAND

Private Legislation Procedures

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has had any discussions with the Scottish Law Commission on the Scottish private legislation procedures.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no discussions with the Scottish Law Commission on these matters. He is, however, aware that in its 19th and 20th reports (Scottish Law Commission 89, paragraph 3.49, and Scottish Law Commission 98, paragraph 2.50) the Commission has recorded that it is to provide information on the practical working of the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act 1936 to the joint working party of the Law Commissions on local statute law in England and Wales and in Scotland.

Motor Vehicles (Theft)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions there have been in Scotland for theft of a motor vehicle in each of the last three years; and how many have been successful.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is given in the table below:

Theft of motor vehicles in Scotland

	1982	1983	1984
Persons proceeded against	4,427	4,205	4,080
Persons against whom a charge was proved	3,804	3,617	3,409

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many motor vehicles have been reported stolen in Scotland in each of the last three years; and how many of these subsequently have been recovered.

Mr. John MacKay: The latest available information in respect of thefts of motor vehicles is set out below. No information on the number of motor vehicles recovered is collected centrally.

Theft of motor vehicles in Scotland

Year	Number recorded
1982	32,965
1983	29,888
1984	32,557

State Hospital, Carstairs

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients there are at present in the State hospital, Carstairs, subject to a restriction order whose transfer to an ordinary National Health Service hospital he has authorised; how long each of them has been waiting for such a transfer; and what steps he is taking to facilitate their transfer.

Mr. Rifkind: There are at present three patients in the state hospital subject to restriction orders whose transfer to an ordinary mental hospital I have approved. One patient has been waiting for a suitable place in another hospital for two months since my approval was given for his transfer; a second patient has been waiting for three weeks to be transferred; and the transfer of the third patient has only been approved within the past week. I expect all three patients to be transferred from the state hospital during the next month or so.

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients there are at present in the State hospital, Carstairs, not subject to a restriction order whose transfer to an ordinary National Health Service hospital has been approved; in how many of these cases an ordinary National Health Service hospital has agreed in principle to a transfer; in how many cases an agreement in principle is still being sought;; how long each patient in each category has been waiting for transfer; and what steps he is taking to facilitate their transfer.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is as follows:

(1) Number of patients in the State Hospital not subject to a restriction order whose transfer to an ordinary National Health Service hospital has been approved: 16.

(2) Number of cases included under (1) where an ordinary National Health Service hospital has agreed in principle to a transfer: 4.

(3) Number of cases included under (1) where agreement in principle is still being sought: 12.

(4) Length of time in months each patient included under (2) has been waiting for transfer: 1, 6, 30, 32.

(5) Length of time in months each patient included under (3) has been waiting for transfer: 1(2 patients), 2, 3, 8, 9, 10 (2 patients), 16 (2 patients), 22, 31.

Responsibility for the transfer of patients in the state hospital who are not under a restriction order rests with their responsible medical officer and the medical sub-committee. During the past year 70 patients were assessed as suitable to be transferred or discharged from the state hospital, and most of these were placed without any difficulty. A minority of patients cannot be transferred very easily for various reasons. Every effort is made by the state hospital to transfer patients who have been waiting to leave the hospital for some time.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the protest by Care in the Community—Scottish Working Group at the Government's proposal to seek to remove clause 8 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill; if he will publish its submission; what action he is taking in response to it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend is giving careful consideration to the numerous responses he has received from interested parties in Scotland to the Government's proposals for amending the Bill as contained in a consultation document issued on 14 February 1986. Copies of these responses have been sent to members of the Standing Committee which considered the Bill earlier this year and further copies are available for consultation by the public in the Scottish Office library in St. Andrew's house, Edinburgh.

Our conclusions in the light of these consultations will be communicated to the Bill's sponsors as soon as possible.

Teachers (Pay and Conditions)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is yet in a position to announce the members of the committee which will conduct the inquiry into teachers' pay and conditions.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to do so shortly.

Macaulay Institute for Soil Research

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if it is his intention to have further full and public consultations on the feasibility study being conducted into the proposed closure of the Aberdeen-based Macaulay Institute for Soil Research before making a final decision on the matter; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he expects to be in a position to publish the results of the feasibility study into the proposals to close the Aberdeen-based Macaulay Institute for Soil Research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend will not make his decision on the future location of the new institute to be formed by the merger of the Hill Farming Research Organisation with parts of the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research until after the report of the feasibility study has been received and considered. In reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) on 13 February at column 506, he said that the report of the study would be made available to interested parties. It is not possible to predict when this will be. He does not anticipate the need for full public consultation on the outcome of the study.

Forestry

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will review the grades of land that can be released for forestry planting.

Mr. Rifkind [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 315-16]: The statement on forestry policy made on 10 December 1980 by my right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr, at column 1405, said that the Government saw scope for continued planting at broadly the rate of the previous 25 years (about 30,000 hectares per year) and that planting of this order would be compatible with preserving an acceptable balance with agriculture, the environment and other interests. Since 1980, new planting, at about 23,000 hectares a year, has fallen significantly short of this figure. Scotland has been the focus of interest for new planting. I have, accordingly, considered what measures might be taken to facilitate an increased rate of planting that is consistent with maintaining a balance with those other interests.

Policy has long been to encourage forestry planting on the poorer land and to preserve arable land and the better hill land for agriculture. The Government remain committed to a prosperous agricultural industry and in particular to the maintenance of a thriving hill sheep sector, but I believe there is scope for forestry planting in blocks of appropriate size, type and location on land which hitherto would have been reserved for agricultural use. Applications under the Forestry Commission's grant schemes will continue to be considered on their merits through the usual procedures for consultation between the commission and others. In advising the commission on agricultural implications my Department will continue to pay regard to factors such as the quality of land, the viability of the unit and the extent to which forestry proposals integrate with and benefit agriculture. It will also continue to take into account the importance of the land in the agricultural structure of the area. But within this overall framework it will in future acknowledge a presumption in favour in the following cases:

In the case of hill land

(a) where the application is in respect of land not essential to the viability of a unit consisting of unimproved or unsuccessfully improved peats or peaty gleys which although of agricultural potential are not being agriculturally exploited; or

(b) where the application is in respect of land which, although of good quality, is not capable (by virtue of its size, slope or location) of making a significant agricultural contribution; or

(c) where the application, although in respect of land which would not otherwise meet the criteria for clearance, forms part of a plan accepted by the Department which takes account of agriculture and forestry and specifies the continuation of the unit in agricultural use for at least 10 years.

In the case of upland and arable land other than prime land (class 4 or poorer in the land capability classification for agriculture)

(a) where the land forms part of a farm-forestry proposal promoted by the farmer and remains part of his business; or

(b) where the land requires capital and/or maintenance inputs which are high in relation to the agricultural production achievable.

The Department will maintain a presumption against clearance for afforestation of prime land (LCA classes 1 to 3) except in the case of proposals for small stands for eg. shelter, amenity or sporting purposes.

In appropriate cases other than on prime land clearance will be given to the restoration of opencast coal and mineral sites for forestry as an alternative to agriculture.

The general threshold on hill land below which clearance is not required will be increased from 20 to 40 hectares. Other thresholds on hill and upland farms will remain five hectares for arable and former arable land, for reseeded land and for land consisting predominantly of better soils and 20 hectacres for land not in these categories. The requirement for clearance will also continue on areas below these thresholds where agricultural grant has been given within the previous two years or where the application forms part of a series of adjacent or connected areas.

These changes will provide the basis for a more flexible approach to new planting proposals while safeguarding essential agricultural interests. It will, however, be no less important to ensure that environmental and other interests are equally safeguarded. There is a general duty on Departments to have regard to the desirability of conserving the natural beauty and amenity of the countryside and the Forestry Commission has a particular duty to endeavour to achieve a reasonable balance between the needs of forestry and the environment. It is already the practice for the Forestry Commission to consult, as appropriate, local planning authorities, the Nature Conservancy Council, the Countryside Commission for Scotland and the Red Deer Commission. Where an objection arising from these consultations cannot be resolved, the matter is put before the Forestry Commission's regional advisory committee, which considers the conflicting arguments and seeks to reconcile them.

This system has worked well but it is now right to consider whether the composition and procedures of these committees could be adjusted to achieve a better balance between forestry and other countryside interests and to improve public accountability. To this end, and in response to the undertaking given in the Government's reply to the Countryside Commission's report "A Better Future for the Uplands", the Forestry Commission is today issuing a consultation paper which seeks comments on a number of proposed changes.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

World Food Programme

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what pledges were made by Her Majesty's Government at the 12th World Food Programme conference for its regular programme, its international emergency food reserves and its non-food aid, respectively.

Mr. Raison: At the World Food Programme pledging conference on 4 March we expressed our continuing support but, in common with many other major donors, made no specific pledge at the time for the biennium 1987-88. We indicated that we would announce pledges at a later date.

United Nations Special Session (Africa)

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Ministers will attend the special session on the critical economic situation in Africa of the General Assembly of the United Nations from 27 to 31 May; and for how long.

Mr. Raison: No decision has yet been taken.

RMS St. Helena

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress in deciding upon a replacement for the RMS St. Helena.

Mr. Raison: I hope to be in a position to make a firm decision later this year.

EMPLOYMENT

Young Workers Scheme

Mr. Speller asked the Paymaster General if he will extend the period of eligibility for entry to the young workers scheme from 31 March until 30 September.

Mr. Lang: No, but the new workers scheme, proposed by the Chancellor in his Budget statement, will from 1 April provide help to under 21-year-olds in their first year of employment by giving employers a positive financial incentive to recruit them.

Working Population

Mr. Best asked the Paymaster General what is the estimated demographic change in the number of those eligible for work in each of the next 10 years.

Mr. Lang: Projected annual changes in the Great Britain population of working age (all those above minimum school leaving age and below state retirement age) are as follows:

Projected annual change in population of working age*

	Numbers
1986	+88,000
1987	+117,000
1988	+92,000
1989	+42,000
1990	−6,000
1991	−26,000
1992	−34,000
1993	−49,000
1994	−37,000
1995	+9,000

* Figures relate to the year ending in June of the year shown.

Coventry

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many full-time vacancies were available at Coventry careers office at the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: On 7 February 1986, the latest date for which vacancy figures are available, there were 42 unfilled full-time vacancies at Coventry careers office.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General what proportion of the work force in Coventry were unemployed in 1979; and what is the proportion unemployed at the present time.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. On 6 February 1986 the unemployment rate for the Coventry and Hinckley travel-to-work area was 15·6 per cent. Comparable rates for 1979 are not available because of changes in the way figures are collected. However, in February 1979 the unemployment rate for registrants in the old Coventry travel-to-work area was 6·5 per cent.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many people in Coventry, having successfully completed a YTS course, have found work.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission conducts a regular follow-up survey of young people some three months after they leave YTS. The latest results cover young people who left YTS between April and September 1985. They show that 60 per cent. of those young people who completed YTS in the Coventry local authority district were in work.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many businesses have been set up in Coventry under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: In the Coventry area 3,115 people have set up in business with the help of the enterprise allowance scheme since January 1982.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many Coventry men and women over 50 years of age have been unemployed for more than one year, two years and three years, respectively.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. The figures relate to unemployed claimants on 9 January 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by age and duration is available.

The table shows the numbers of male claimants and female claimants aged 50 years and over in the Coventry local authority district who have been unemployed for the durations specified.

Numbers of unemployed male and female claimants aged 50 years and over in the Coventry local authority district (9 January 1986)

Duration of unemployment	Males	Females
More than one year	2,155	690
More than two years	1,634	468
More than three years	1,253	324

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General what is his estimate of the number of young people in Coventry likely to be affected by their removal from the protection of wages councils; and how many new jobs are likely to be created by this measure in Coventry.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available on a local basis about the number of young people within scope of wages councils. Whilst we are not aware of any studies which estimate the number of jobs which will arise from the specific reforms we have proposed, there are many studies which provide evidence of the link between pay and jobs or indicate that statutory minima affect employment. The removal of regulations which prevent employers offering jobs at rates which young people would accept must result in increased employment, in Coventry as elsewhere.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General what new initiatives will be undertaken to fight unemployment in Coventry.

Mr. Lang: Coventry will benefit from the new package of measures announced in the Budget statement at columns 166-184.

In particular, there is the boost to enterprise. The enterprise allowance scheme will be increased to help 100,000 unemployed people a year nationally; and small firms will benefit from the extension and improvement to the small firms loan guarantee scheme and the business expansion scheme.

To help young people, the two year YTS starting on 1 April will provide 16 and 17-year-old school leavers with high quality training leading to a recognised qualification. The new workers scheme will help 18 to 20-year-olds to find work.

To help the long-term unemployed the new national Restart programme will provide counselling on job opportunities; the jobstart allowance will give unemployed people a financial incentive to return to work; and the community programme is to be improved and expanded to 255,000 places nationally by November 1986.

Coventry already derives considerable benefit from our employment and training measures which are currently helping nearly 10,000 people in Coventry and Warwickshire. However, the main impact on unemployment must come from employers and those who decide to work for themselves. It is their drive towards competitiveness, profitability and keeping costs down that will provide new jobs in Coventry and elsewhere.

Mr. Park asked the Paymaster General how many places have been taken up in the YTS in Coventry over the last three years; and how many places have been allocated for the two-year scheme.

Mr. Trippier: There have been some 9,309 entrants to YTS in the Coventry local authority district between the inception of YTS in April 1983 and the end of February 1986. This figure includes some young people who have entered YTS more than once.

Approximately 3,900 places have been allocated to the Coventry local authority district for the two-year scheme.

Departmental Budgeting

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General if he plans to issue a strategic overview paper to all staff in his Department in line with the recommendation of the final report on multi-department review of budgeting of December 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: This recommendation appears in my Department's own report, which was one of a number of such studies undertaken as part of the multidepartmental review. We will be considering the specific recommendations in the report in the light of those made by the central team when its report is also issued. A statement of the aims of the Department of Employment Group already appears in the latest public expenditure survey White Paper and I am considering whether to develop a further statement of departmental objectives.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Kennedy asked the Paymaster General if, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye of 13 March, Official Report, column 546, he will give some indication of the regional distribution within Scotland of each of the following categories from the labour force survey relevant to the spring of 1984: (a) previously self-employed people without jobs and seeking work who were excluded from the unemployment count, (b) previously self-employed claimants included in the count who were not actively looking for work, and (c) claimants who did some paid work in the reference week and said they were self-employed.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available for the areas requested because of the possible sampling error on the small numbers involved.

Labour Market

Sir David Price asked the Paymaster General what was the demographic imbalance in each of the last three years between those seeking to enter the labour market and those retiring from it; and what are the similar projections for each of the next three years.

Mr. Lang: The table gives estimates and projections of the numbers of entries to, and exits from, the Great Britain population of working age.

	*Entries (thousands)	Exits† (thousands)	Net increase (thousands)
1983‡	902	652	+250
1984	873	611	+262
1985	866	763	+103
1986	836	748	+ 88
1987	845	728	+117
1988	792	700	+ 92

* Those reaching minimum school leaving age in the 12 months to the end of June.
† Mainly those reaching state retirement age, but also including deaths of persons of working age and the net effects of migration.

Farming Accidents

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General (1) pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 344, if he will provide a breakdown by regions in Great Britain of those farm employees injured or killed in accidents in each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 345, if he will provide a breakdown by regions in Great Britain of those cases brought against self-employed farmers and employers of agricultural labour for infringement of safety standards in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage of convictions in each year.

Mr. Trippier: Information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Agricultural Employment

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General what evidence he has about the trend in standards of safety in agricultural employment over the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Figures for major injuries reported to the Health and Safety Executive in agriculture are:

	Employees	Non-employees	Total
1981	148	43	191
1982	135	38	173
1983	183	51	234
1984	251	51	302

Major injuries in this industry are notably subject to under-reporting and some of the increase may reflect an increased propersity to report.

Fatalities reported to HSE in agriculture are:

	Employees	Non-employees	Total
1981	31	38	69
1982	27	39	66
1983	26	28	64
1984	26	30	66

Comparable figures before 1981 are not available for either major injuries and fatalities.

While the figures for fatalities show some decline the trend in major injuries continues to cause concern and is being kept under careful review.

Job Start Scheme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many unemployed persons have joined the job start scheme in each of the pilot areas where it operates.

Mr. Lang: On 14 March, the latest date for which figures are available, a total of 93 applications for the job start allowance had been accepted. The numbers in each pilot area were as follows:

	Numbers
Dundee	10
Billingham	1
Preston	18
Huddersfield	10
Stoke	18
Port Talbot and Neath	18
Plymouth	11
Crawley/Horsham	5
Ealing	2
Total	93

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the traffic and revenue study undertaken for the Channel Tunnel Group by Wilbur Smith Associates in connection with its successful proposal for a Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. The study of traffic and revenue carried out jointly by Wilbur Smith and Associates and SETEC-Economic for Channel Tunnel Group—France-Manche remains the property of CTG-FM, and it is for them to decide how much of this information should be made publicly available.

National Traffic Club

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress towards the establishment of a national traffic club for pre-school children.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department invited a number of private organisations to submit proposals for the formation, long-term organisation, financing and promotion of a national traffic club. We will consider whether any of them provides a sound basis for the establishment of a traffic club on a national scale.

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he proposes that Glasgow airport should be developed as a gateway airport.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. The Government's policy, set out in the airports policy White Paper, published in June 1985 (Cmnd. 9542), is that Prestwick should serve the whole of Scotland as the Gateway international airport for long-haul (primarily transatlantic) services, but if Prestwick's financial results did not improve, the policy would be reviewed in 1989.

Humber Bridge

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest available figure for the debt on the Humber bridge; what has been the increase in debt since the bridge was opened; what are the latest available annual figures for revenue and debt charges; and what proposals he has for paying off the debt.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information requested is as follows:

	£ million rounded
Total debt at 31 March 1985	233
Increase in debt since date of opening	82
Revenue for 1984-85	5
Debt charges for 1984-85	27

The Humber Bridge Board has been invited to come forward with proposals for putting Humber bridge finances on a sound footing. When these are received, consideration will be given to what further action may be necessary.

A19 (Accident Statistics)

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of deaths and serious accidents, respectively, that have occurred in each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, on the A19 road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is as follows:

Accidents on the A19, by severity, 1983 and 1984

	Fatal	Serious
1984	12	105

Numbers for 1985 are not yet available. Further details for the trunk road sections of the A19 can be found in table 8 of the 1983 and 1984 edictions of "Road Accident Statistics English Regions," copies of which are in the Library.

Ross-on-Wye (Goods Vehicles)

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to give his consent to the proposed order to prohibit goods vehicles in excess of 7·5 tonnes gross from travelling through Ross-on-Wye on the A40.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Consent has now been given to the order which is to be made by Hereford and Worcester county council.

South Africa/Southampton (Trade)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish figures showing the volume and value of seaborne trade between the Republic of South Africa and Southampton for the last five years for which statistics are available.

Mr. Ridley: The information requested is as follows:

United Kingdom Seaborne Trade with South Africa through Southampton 1981-1985

	Imports		Exports
	Tonnes '000s	Value £ million	Tonnes '000s	Value £ million
1981†	136	147	190	361
1982	232	220	278	585
1983	270	307	328	706
1984	202	265	297	630
1985*	189	193	158	329

* Provisional.
† includes Namibia.
1981, 1984 and 1985 traffic levels were affected by strikes at Southampton during which its share of the trade with South Africa switched to other ports.

British Airways

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport what were the gross and net profits of British Airways in the financial years ended 1982 to 1985 inclusive; if he will give the percentage of the airline which was privately owned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Airways' operating results and retained profits were as follows:

	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85
Operating result	11·8	185·1	267·7	292·1
Retained profit/(loss) after extraordinary items	(544·2)	88·6	214·5	176·1

The airline was wholly owned by the Government throughout this period.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any request from British Airways for permission or financial help in purchasing or ordering new aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has approved the acquisition of seven new aircraft during the last 12 months. No requests for approval are outstanding and none has been turned down. British Airways meets all its investment requirements from internal resources or from finance made available on commercial terms.

Bermuda 2 Agreement

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is causing the delay in a settlement of the Bermuda 2 agreement; when he expects to conclude an agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Negotiations are taking place with the United States Government about a replacement for the capacity annex (Annex 2) of the Bermuda 2 air services agreement. This annex is due to expire in July of this year. I hope that agreement on new provisions can be reached soon.

Motor Vehicles (Security)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make central locking devices compulsory on all new motor cars manufactured in Great Britain.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. Central locking is being considered by a committee of the British Standards Institution which is producing a standard on car security.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he is having with motor manufacturers with a view to separate panels of motor vehicles being indelibly marked for identification purposes as a security against theft.

Mr. Ridley: None. The marking of glass in new vehicles is, however, being considered by a committee of the British Standards Institution which is producing a standard on car security. I am not aware of any plans to extend this to other vehicle components.

North Sea (Helicopters)

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the priority accorded to safety considerations in the drawing up of recent contracts for helicopter use in the North sea oil and gas industry; and to what extent his Department is involved in such contracts.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Contracts for the use of helicopters in the North sea oil and gas industry are a matter for the contracting parties only. Helicopter operators are required to comply with public transport safety regulations laid down by the Civil Aviation Authority, which is statutorily responsible for aviation safety.

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what information he has in relation to the safety of landing of helicopters on alternative landings in the North sea; and what is the fuel margin specified to enable helicopters to land onshore;

(2) if he will list the offshore oil rigs designated as alternative landing sites for helicopters; and how he satisfies himself that the risk of helicopters having to ditch in the sea will be safeguarded by such a practice.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation safety is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. The authority has informed me that it expects its study into the risks involved in the use of offshore diversions for helicopters to be completed in mid-April and a paper to be available in May.

The CAA tells me that the nomination of offshore alternates is practised by only one of the four major North sea operators at present pending the conclusions on safety to be drawn from the authority's study. Irrespective of whether a nominated alternate is situated onshore or offshore, the fuel to be carried must not be less that that required to fly to the destination and thence to the alternate, plus an appropriate fuel reserve.

The CAA also tells me that any offshore rig classified as unrestricted for use by helicopters by the authority may be nominated as an alternate provided the helicopter operator first ensures for each flight that the rig is available and that the weather there is forecast to be satisfactory.

Liner Shipping Freight Rates

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to publish the report by officials on the inquiry into liner shipping freight rates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: The report was published today and copies have been placed in the Library.

The report was commissioned in response to complaints from British exporters that they were being disadvantaged in overseas markets by disparities between the levels of deep sea freight rates available to them and those available to their European competitors.

The study has established that, while significant disparities existed in 1984, this was by no means the case in all foreign trades, and that the problem tended to be more widespread for conventional cargo than for containerised cargo.

These rate disparities are attributable to higher United Kingdom port costs and to the much sharper competition in the supply of liner services which undoubtedly exists on the continent compared with the United Kingdom. This enhanced competition stems largely from the greater participation of independent shipping lines, and the strength of the freight forwarding industry in mainland Europe.

The report draws attention to the important role for Government in helping to ensure that liner trades to and from the United Kingdom remain open and in maintaining the scope for independent lines to offer fair and effective competition to conference lines. It recognises the major technological innovation undertaken by shipping lines, which has been of widespread benefit. The report encourages a wider role for freight forwarders and suggests steps which shippers themselves can take to control their transport costs and so help win vital orders overseas.

I hope that the report will now lead to further discussion and consideration by all sides of the industry—shippers, forwarders and the lines themselves. Liner shipping worldwide is in a dynamic phase of its development and I share the study team's conclusion that United Kingdom liner shipping companies are well-placed to meet the challenges facing them and to respond positively to their customers' requirements.

Airports Bill

Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for Transport what number of passengers he intends to regard as substantial in relation to clause 28, subsection (b), of the Airports Bill.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The number would vary from one group of airports to another. There are already two airport systems where traffic distribution policy is applied: in the London airports system some 75 per cent. of air passengers, and in the Scottish lowlands airports system over 90 per cent. of air passengers, have their ultimate origins or destinations in the south-east of England and in Scotland, respectively.

Chatteris Bypass

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement on the state of progress of the Chatteris bypass; and if he will list any recent representations he has received in opposition to the bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Chatteris eastern bypass is a scheme for which Cambridgeshire county council is the highway authority. It made the necessary orders on 27 January 1986. The other objection period expired on 19 March. There have been 21 objections, eight of them from statutory objectors. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will accordingly be arranging a public inquiry unless these objections are withdrawn in the meantime.

Road Safety Programmes

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are being made by his regional offices in conjunction with successor bodies for the co-ordination of road safety programmes including accident, investigation and prevention work, after 1 April 1986 in (i) West Yorkshire, (ii) West Midlands, (iii) Greater Manchester, (iv) Tyne and Wear, (v) Merseyside and (vi) South Yorkshire; and if he will name the successor bodies in each of these metropolitan areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall answer this question shortly.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now provide information in relation to Stansted airport comparable with that for other airports listed in table 16 of " United Kingdom Airports".

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information on the origins and destinations of air passengers in relation to Stansted airport will be included in the next edition of "United Kingdom Airports", which the Civil Aviation Authority expects to publish shortly.

British Rail

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport what level of public service obligation grant will be available to British Rail for 1986-87.

Mr. David Mitchell: In October 1983 we set the British Railways Board the object of reducing, over three years, its requirement for public service obligation grant to £635 million in 1983 prices. This target is now £736 million at 1986-87 prices, so I am setting the board a cash ceiling for this grant in 1986-87 of £736 million to reflect that. Meeting the target will have meant reducing the level of grant by more than one quarter, and this reflects the considerable progress which Sir Robert Reid, his board, and railwaymen have made to improving the financial effectiveness of the railway.

Marine Pilotage

Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has considered the recommendations made by the Transport Committee in its report on marine pilotage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I have now considered the report of the House of Commons Transport Committee on marine pilotage. The Committee's report contains a careful analysis of this complex subject, and, together with the minutes of evidence and appendices, provides a most useful source of information about it. I welcome in particular the Committee's recognition of the need for urgent reform of the present administrative structure of pilotage, and its endorsement of the central proposal in the Green Paper which I published in December 1984, that pilotage should become the responsibility of harbour authorities.

The report contains 26 main recommendations. The Government's responses to these recommendations are contained in a detailed memorandum of which I have placed a copy in the Library. The memorandum is also being sent to the principal bodies interested in pilotage: further copies are available on request from the Department of Transport.

In considering how to take forward the reform of pilotage administration, I have taken careful account of the many comments received in response to the Green Paper, and I am grateful to all those who responded. Having considered these responses, and the Committee's report, I can confirm that I intend to introduce legislation as soon as possible to provide for the transfer of pilotage responsibility to harbour authorities, for the abolition of the existing pilotage authorities and the Pilotage Commission, and for the repeal of most of the present complex legislative provisions governing pilotage. The legislation will provide for a statutory compensation scheme to be available for pilots whose services will no longer be required under the new regime. Further details of the Government's proposals are included in the memorandum.

As the Transport Committee noted, a number of draft byelaws and pilotage orders were prepared by pilotage authorities, with the aim of securing reorganisation under the existing legislation. These were submitted to my Department, but in view of objections that were raised against them by the various interested parties, and because of the developing uncertainty about the future of pilotage administration, my predecessors and I have taken decisions on very few of them. Following my announcement that the Government intend to proceed with early legislation the Department of Transport will now return the outstanding orders and byelaws to the authorities, and will invite them to consider whether they still wish to promote them, in whole or in part, so that they can take effect during the interim period before the new arrangements can come into effect.

In considering any orders or draft byelaws which are resubmitted, or submitted for the first time, I will be minded to approve proposals consistent with the policies outlined in the Government's response to the recommendations of the Transport Committee. I will also seek the views of the local harbour authority, or authorities, on whether the proposals in question are consistent with the pilotage regime which the authority is likely to introduce following implementation of the legislation, and I will give due weight to those views.

Foreign-registered Aircraft

Mr. Churchill asked the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent Dassault Falcon aircraft used by Flight Refuelling Ltd. in respect of a Royal Navy contract meet the required Civil Aviation Authority standards of operation; what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that, in the absence of any approved operations manual, the authority is able adequately to monitor the operations of these aircraft; and what is his policy towards future public sector contracts let on the basis of fleets of foreign-registered aircraft which do not have to comply with the air navigation orders.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The aircraft being used by Flight Refuelling Ltd. are registered in the USA and technically it falls to the Federal Aviation Authority to supervise their operation. The Civil Aviation Authority has, however, suggested to the FAA that the CAA should exercise supervision. New contracts to be let by the Ministry of Defence to civilian operators will include a condition requiring operators of foreign-registered aircraft to satisfy the CAA they can undertake work safely and competently.

My right hon. Friend's permission is required under the Air Navigation Order 1985 before a foreign-registered aircraft can be used in the United Kingdom for public transport. My Department will shortly be consulting the industry on a proposal to amend the order so that permission is also needed before foreign-registered aircraft can undertake any form of aerial work in the United Kingdom. Such an amendment would mean that, where necessary, the CAA could then directly supervise operators of foreign aircraft undertaking aerial work in this country.

Dawn Waters (Loss)

Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the circumstances surrounding the loss of the fishing vessel Dawn Waters off the Isle of Man on 20 March; if he will institute a public inquiry into the causes of the loss; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: The Dawn Waters was a fishing vessel registered in Jersey. She had been operating out of Fleetwood and reports suggest she was carrying a crew of five persons. The vessel was discovered at 9.18 am 11 miles east of Clay Head in the Isle of Man, almost completely submerged. Two life rafts from the vessel were found nearby but they contained no survivors. One body in a lifejacket was recovered. After an exhaustive search of the area by helicopters, lifeboats and other vessels nothing more was found. The search was terminated at 2.30 pm on 20 March. The weather at the time was severe.

The authorities in Jersey have requested my Department to undertake an investigation into the cause of this loss, to which I have agreed. A decision on whether a public inquiry is warranted will be made following consideration of the inspector's report.

I would like to express my deepest sympathy to the families and relatives of those who lost their lives in the tragic loss of this vessel.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Primary Pupils (Swimming)

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions will be made for teaching swimming to primary pupils in the light of the South Eastern Education and Library Board's elimination of the swimming programme.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Education for Northern Ireland has not yet received details of the south-eastern board's spending plans for 1986-87, but I understand it is the board's intention to discontinue the school swimming programme from the beginning of the 1986-87 school year. Schools already arrange swimming sessions for children outside the board's programme and I hope that many of these arrangements will continue.

Day of Protest

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what information he has on the value of the property damage caused by the day of protest on 3 March;

(2) what information he has on the cost of repairing the damage caused by the day of protest on 3 March.

Mr. Scott: The statutory time limits for claiming compensaton on 3 March have not yet expired. It is therefore too early to give an estimate of the value of the property damage and the cost of repair, up to 14 March, 281 notices of intention to claim compensation for damage caused on 3 March have been served on my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints of intimidation and police misconduct were reported to the Royal Ulster Constabulary in connection with the day of protest on 3 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Two hundred and thirty seven complaints of intimidation were made to the Royal Ulster Constabulary in connection with the day of action on 3 March. In addition, there were 43 complaints regarding police action and 132 complaints regarding police inactivity.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Royal Ulster Constabulary officers were on duty on Monday 3 March; how many were off duty but could have been called to duty at short notice; and if he will list the occasions in the past five years when the same number of officers were on duty.

Mr. Scott: All available Royal Ulster Constabulary officers were on duty on Monday 3 March. Rest days, annual leave and some elements of training were cancelled to ensure optimum use of resources.

Information relating to the occasions in the past five years when the same number of officers were on duty is not readily available, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Assembly

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will set the date for 1986 elections for the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Mr. Scott: The Prime Minister has offered to talk to the Northern Ireland political parties, among other matters, about the future of the Assembly. The desirability of new elections must be in doubt if the Assembly's suspension of its statutory duties continues.

Motor Vehicles (Theft)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many prosecutions there have been in Northern Ireland for theft of a motor vehicle; and how many of these have been successful;

(2) how many motor vehicles have been reported stolen in the Province in each of the last three years; and how many of these subsequently have been recovered.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Action for Community Employment

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for each action for community employment scheme in Northern Ireland (a) whether relevent trade union approval has been sought, (b) whether it has been obtained and (c) where approval has been sought, from which trade union and at what level of the union.

Dr. Boyson: Where appropriate, sponsors must consult trade unions before presenting their proposals to the Department of Economic Development and must give an undertaking that this has been done. Since the introduction of new ACE funding arrangements in December 1985, almost all new proposals have been deemed to involve trade union interests and the necessary undertaking has been obtained. Most trade unions require consultations to take place with full-time officials or headquarters staff.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for each action for community employment scheme in Northern Ireland (a) what rate is being paid to action for community employment workers and (b) whether the scheme is being used to (i) replace or (ii) supplement a present statutory provision and, specifying the provision as appropriate.

Dr. Boyson: Sponsors of Action for Community Employment schemes are expected to pay the local going rate for the job. ACE schemes may not be used to replace statutory provision. Public sector sponsors use ACE schemes largely to undertake additional environmental projects and the majority of voluntary sector ACE sponsors, operating in co-operation with public bodies, undertake similar work. In recent months the voluntary sector has shown a particular interest in developing community care projects which are aimed at supplementing existing statutory provision.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all action for community employment placements in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost, because there are over 800 ACE sponsors.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all employer or community organisations presently participating in action for community employment schemes in Northern Ireland and the numbers of action for community employment workers in each case.

Dr. Boyson: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost, because there are over 800 ACE sponsors.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the present total level of Government funding of action for community employment schemes in Northern Ireland and the levels of Government funding of each scheme.

Dr. Boyson: The departmental budget for the Action for Community Employment scheme in 1985-86 is £17·75 million. Sponsors are funded on a per capita basis. It is estimated that the average grant per ACE employee in the current year is about £4,559 per annum.

Divis Flats

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the total numbers of (a) families, (b) single parent families, (c) single households and (d) people of pensionable age or over living in the Divis flats at present; and what were the respective annual totals in each category from 1968 for the years for which figures are available;

(2) what are the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's estimates for the Divis flats of (a) the total cost of refurbishing the whole complex, (b) the total cost of the combination of refurbishment and demolition currently proposed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and (c) the average cost per dwelling, including loan and interest charges, for refurbishment, given a 30-year estimated life span;

(3) how many statutorily unfit dwellings there are in (a) the catchment area for Divis residents and (b) West Belfast as a whole;

(4) how many residents in the Divis flats have been subject to action under the Payments for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) in each year from 1968 to the present;

(5) what are the current levels of arrears and the number of tenants in arrears in payments for (a) rents, (b) rates and (c) heating by type in the Divis complex and the annual averages from 1968 for the years for which figures are available;

(6) what are the number of (a) illegal tenancies and (b) tenancies for which the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has issued use and occupation books in the Divis complex at the present time; and what are the annual averages of each from 1968 for the years for which figures are available;

(6) what are the figures for the number of dwellings in the Divis complex (a) occupied, (b) underoccupied, (c) overcrowded and (d) vacant at the present time; and what was the annual average in each category from 1968 for the years for which figures are available;

(7) what are the average annual costs from 1968 for the years for which figures are available, of (a) repairs, (b) maintenance and (c) services for the Divis flats, each according to (i) total, (ii) emergency work, (iii) normal work, A list and (iv) planned work, B list;

(8) how many residents of the Divis flats have received (a) certificated housing benefit, (b) housing benefit supplement and (c) standard housing benefit since November 1983; and what are the total amounts in each category paid to Divis residents since the introduction of housing benefit;

(9) what are the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's estimates of (a) total costs and (b) the breakdown of costs for (i) the total demolition of the Divis flats, (ii) the demolition of the two blocks currently under consideration and (iii) the building of two-storey houses to replace the existing flats, inlcuding any land, consultant and other significant costs.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The information is not readily available. I shall reply to the right hon. and learned Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's estimates for (a) the number of two-storey houses per acre which will be built on the Divis site if the existing flats were demolished, (b) the total number of two-storey homes which could be built on the site and (c) the costs of any additional land which might need to be purchased to rehouse any part of the present Divis population which could not be accommodated in two-storey houses built on the existing site.

Mr. Needham: (a) 15; (b) 165; (c) not available.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what are the current average annual costs for (a) maintenance of two-storey dwellings in the state sector in Belfast of the same age as the Divis flats and (b) management of the same;

(2) how many residents of the Divis flats have received rent and rate rebates, heating allowances and other forms of benefit support other than housing benefit since 1968; and what are the total amounts paid to Divis residents in each category since 1968, or for the period for which figures are available;

(3) what types of repair and maintenance work have been carried out by (a) the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and (b) the former Northern Ireland Housing Trust each year since 1968 in the Divis flats, including servicing and other work on lifts, bin chutes and heating systems;

(4) how many repair and maintenance requests, including the self-help scheme, have been made by Divis residents per year since 1968 according to (a) total, (b) emergency work, (c) normal work, A list, and (d) planned work, B list;

(5) what are the average annual costs from 1968, for the years for which figures are available, for management of the Divis flats according to (a) total, (b) emergency work, (c) normal work, A list, and (d) planned work, B list.

Mr. Needham: The information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are currently on the waiting list seeking (a) transfer into Divis and (b) transfer out of Divis; what is the breakdown of each list according to the categories used in housing allocation; and what are the average lengths of time spent on each waiting list according to the categories used in housing allocation.

Mr. Needham:

	Priority Transfer	Ordinary Transfer
(a)	—	4
(b)	21	173

The rest of the information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the figures for the number of dwellings in the Divis complex (a) originally, following completion, (b) after the demolition of the Whitehall and Farsett blocks, and (c) after the projected demolition of two further blocks.

Mr. Needham: (a) 795 dwellings; (b) 623 dwellings; (c) 536 dwellings.

New Dwellings (Building Costs)

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are (a) the average costs by type, including architect and other fees, of building new dwellings in Belfast and (b) the estimated costs by type, including building costs, fees, interest, maintenance and management charges over a 60-year period of new dwellings in Belfast.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The information is not readily available. I shall reply to the right hon. and learned Member as soon as possible.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations were received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland during the course of negotiations on the Anglo-Irish agreement as to the role to be played in such negotiations by representatives of the Unionist population.

Mr. King: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Exports

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on what is being done by Her Majesty's Government in Northern Ireland to secure increased export orders.

Dr. Boyson: Export promotion is a major element of the Industrial Development Board's medium-term strategy, and the board offers a wide range of financial and practical assistance to help Northern Ireland companies to identify and exploit opportunities in new and existing export markets.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Tobacco Advertising

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Government's discussions with the tobacco industry about tobacco advertising are yet completed.

Mr. Fowler: The Government have reached a new voluntary agreement with the tobacco industry to govern the advertising and promotion of tobacco products and health warnings. The agreement will come into effect on 1 April and run until 31 October 1989.

The main new provisions are:

First, advertising of cigarettes in cinemas will cease.

Second, in place of the present health warning, there will be six new messages that will be given roughly equal exposure on packs, posters and press advertisement. The wording of the warnings will be:

—Smoking Can Cause Fatal Diseases
—Smoking Can Cause Heart Disease
—Smoking When Pregnant Can Injure Your Baby and Cause Premature Birth
—Stopping Smoking Reduces the Risk of Serious Diseases
—Smoking Can Cause Lung Cancer, Bronchitis and Other Chest Diseases
—More Than 30,000 People Die Each Year in the UK From Lung Cancer.

The new warnings will be ascribed to the Health Departments' Chief Medical Officers.

Third, the space provided for the health warning and tar ratings on posters and press advertisements will be increased from 15 to 17½ per cent. of the available area.

Fourth, the industry will spend £1 million each year for the duration of the agreement on a campaign with the retail trade, supported by media advertising and direct mail, against illegal sale of cigarettes to children under the age of 16.

Fifth, expenditure on poster advertising will be frozen in real terms at 50 per cent. of that in year ending 31 March 1980.

Sixth, new rules will prevent cigarette posters being positioned close to schools.

Seventh, there will be no cigarette brand advertising on logos or "give-aways" to children at events sponsored by tobacco companies, such as roadshows and airshows.

Eighth, no cigarettes yielding 18 mg of tar or more will be advertised.

Ninth, no cigarette advertisements will appear in free-standing magazines with a female readership of over 200,000, where a third or more of those readers are aged between 15 and 24 years.

Tenth, the agreement is to be monitored by a new Government/tobacco industry committee under an independent chairman. The chairman will report annually on the progress of the agreement.

These provisions have been incorporated into the detailed text of an agreement, copies of which are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are available to the public. Discussions with the industry about the agreement on sports sponsorship by tobacco companies are in progress, led by my hon. Friend the Minister for Sport. The outcome of those discussions will be announced separately in due course.

This agreement is a considerable advance on the previous one. Not only are the public in general provided with clearer messages about the specific dangers to health from smoking, but steps are to be taken to protect particularly vulnerable groups in the population such as children and young people, especially young women in the early child-bearing years.

We attach great importance to the new health warnings. Research had shown that the old warning—had become too familiar and as a result lost much of its original impact. By replacing it with six tougher messages which include specific reference to the main diseases linked with smoking, such as lung cancer and heart disease, I believe that we shall have done much to see that the unique dangers of smoking remain in the public eye. The health warnings will be given roughly equal exposure over the course of the agreement. They should achieve considerably increased prominence, since the amount of space devoted to the health warning on posters and press advertisements is to be increased from 15 to 17½ per cent. of the available area.

"Smoking can Seriously Damage Your Health"—

The Government are deeply concerned about the number of young people who continue to be drawn to smoking. I am pleased, therefore, that the agreement contains several new provisions intended to protect the young. In particular all cigarette brand advertising on items intended to be given away or sold to children at events sponsored by tobacco companies like roadshows will cease. New rules have also been drawn up to prevent cigarette advertising near schools and other places of education used by young people. In addition, I greatly welcome the campaign suggested by the industry, and to be organised and financed by it, to encourage tobacco retailers to support the law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to children. The industry will spend £1 million a year over the course of the agreement on the campaign, which represents a very considerable effort. It will use advertising in the national media and trade press, as well as direct mailing of material for display in shops. The campaign will be far more comprehensive in its coverage of shops selling cigarettes than any previous campaign of this type.

Finally, for the first time we are setting up a mechanism to monitor the new agreement. The committee, which will represent the Departments concerned and the industry, will be under an independent chairman. The committee's task will be to ensure that the terms of the voluntary agreement are properly adhered to, to receive details of complaints about compliance, and to undertake surveys from time to time on the industry's observance of particular aspects of the agreement. The chairman will be required to report annually on the work of the committee. The establishment of this new monitoring machinery should go a long way towards ensuring public confidence in the system of controlling tobacco advertising and promotion by means of voluntary agreements.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the £1,700,000 made available in 1985 to supplementary benefit claimants for exceptionally severe weather payments was paid to claimants registered at (a) his office in Huddersfield and (b) his office in the Kirklees area as a whole; and how many claimants in the same area qualified for such benefit.

Mr. Newton: In 1985 Huddersfield local offices paid a total of £7,760 to 902 claimants in respect of extra fuel used during a period of exceptionally severe weather. The area of the Kirklees metropolitan borough council is covered by two local offices, Huddersfield and Dewsbury, which between them paid a total of £13,778 to 1,433 claimants.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was paid out in exceptionally severe weather benefits in Dulwich in 1985; and how many claims were accepted.

Mr. Newton: Information is not available in the form requested. Most of the parliamentary constituency of Dulwich is covered by two local offices, Camberwell (Blenheim grove) and Peckham (Bournemouth road). For information concerning these two offices, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 28 February at column 721. A small part of Dulwich is served by the Brixton and Crystal Palace local offices, which between them paid a total of £2,202 to 169 claimants in respect of extra fuel used during the period of exceptionally severe weather last year.

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if the current systems for making extra heating payments to supplementary pensioners during exceptionally severe weather will continue after April 1988.

Mr. Newton: We shall be considering further the provisions for exceptionally severe weather payments in the light of the experience of the revised system this winter, as well as of previous arrangements. That consideration will also take account of our broad proposals for reform in the longer term of the social security system, which of course entail the ending of the current regulated arrangements for making single payments of supplementary benefit.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress which is being made by local offices of his Department in drawing up lists of elderly people considered to be most in need of supplementary benefits payments during the present cold weather period and in case there is a recurrence of conditions qualifying for extra benefit.

Mr. Newton: Pensioners, and younger people, who are receiving supplementary benefit or housing benefit supplement can claim an "exceptionally severe weather payment" if their fuel bill is higher than normal because of the recent spell of cold weather. The availability of such payments, and the criteria governing their award, has been widely publicised—notably in an advertisement placed in the national press on 7 and 9 March. Local social security offices have been asked to give such claims priority.

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration has been given to altering the current system for making extra heating payments to supplementary pensioners during exceptionally severe weather.

Mr. Newton: We shall be considering the provision further in the light of this winter's experience.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what parts of Lambeth have been declared to be areas experiencing exceptionally severe weather for the purpose of extra payments for heating to recipients of social security supplementary benefit.

Mr. Newton: The whole of Lambeth was covered by a joint declaration by local offices in the Greater London area that the weather had been exceptionally severe last month.

Benefits

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what, for the most recent date for which information is available, were, or were estimated to be (a) the number of people in receipt of benefit, (b) the number of people in receipt of benefit who were also receiving supplementary benefit, and (c) the number of people in receipt of benefit who were also receiving standard housing benefit, in respect of each of the following: (i) retirement pension, (ii) invalidity pension, (iii) widow's pension, (iv) widow's allowance, (v) widowed mother's allowance, (vi) unemployment benefit, (vii) sickness benefit, (viii) maternity allowance, (ix) invalid care allowance, and (x) severe disablement allowance;

(2) what, for the most recent 12-month period for which information is available, was, or was estimated to be (a) the benefit expenditure, (b) the benefit expenditure, with respect to people who were also receiving supplementary benefit, and (c) the benefit expenditure with respect to those people who were also receiving standard housing benefit in relation to each of the following: (i) retirement pension, (ii) invalidity pension, (iii) widow's pension, (iv) widow's allowance, (v) widowed mother's allowance, (vi) unemployment benefit, (vii) sickness benefit, (viii) maternity allowance, (ix) invalid care allowance, and (x) severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Newton: The latest figures for numbers of people in receipts of the benefits listed, together with supplementary benefit and standard housing benefit, are as follows:

(Thousands)

	Number of Beneficiaries	Number of Beneficiaries with Supplementary Benefit	Number of Beneficiaries with Standard Housing Benefit
Retirement* Pension	9,028	1,822	2,570

• Housewives Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension and Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension were replaced by Severe Disablement Allowance in November 1984.

Benefit expenditure is not analysed in the form requested. However, the expenditure for the individual benefits listed was as follows in the financial year 1983-84:

Benefit Expenditure

	£ million
Retirement Pension	14,654
Widows' Benefit (all)	771
Sickness Benefit	265
Invalidity Benefit	1,872
Non-Contributory Invalidity Pension*	182
Maternity Allowance	141
Invalid Care Allowance	10

* including Housewives' NCIP.

For an analysis of the amount of supplementary and housing benefit paid by client group I refer the hon. Member for table 3.15.9 of the public expenditure White Paper, volume II (Cmnd. 9702-II).

Income Support

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) further to his answers of 5 February, Official Report, column 190, and 19 February, Official Report, column 205, if he will provide a breakdown of the figure for the additional expenditure consequent on fixing the income support personal allowance for single people aged 18 to 24 years at £30·60 per week;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 205, about income support, if he will publish details of how the total figure of £200 million to £250 million was arrived at.

Mr. Newton: The main element is an estimated increase of some £200 million in income support expenditure resulting from applying the higher benefit rate proposed by the hon. Member to the 573,000 single householders and non-householders aged 18 to 24 currently on benefit, together with an increase of some £3 million through paying the higher benefit rate to dependants aged 18 and over. In addition, it is estimated that housing benefit and family credit expenditure would increase by over £10 million and £2 million respectively (the latter in respect of dependants in family credit families).

Unemployment and Supplementary Benefit

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on what factors his Department calculates that approximately 16,000 people are affected by the ruling of Mr. Justice Woolf in 1984 concerning illegally deducted unemployment and supplementary benefits from claimants;

(2) what specific steps have been taken by his Department since July 1984 to attempt to trace the names of unemployment and supplementary benefit claimants found by Mr. Justice Woolf to have had their benefits illegally deducted by his Department.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my predecessor's reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 30 March 1984 at columns 350-51 which described the method used for estimating the number of cases (17,000) which were believed to be due for a refund in 1982 but had not been paid. On the basis of that estimate it was assumed that during the 18 months, including the first half of 1983, when corrective action was taken, some 25,500 claimants were underpaid. Dormant files are normally destroyed after 18 months so that records would not have been available for earlier periods. At the time the estimates were made some 9,300 refunds had been made following a search through the live files and a publicity exercise and it was estimated therefore that perhaps 16,000 cases were outstanding. All of the figures are necessarily rough estimates.

No special steps have been taken since July 1984 to identify the remaining cases but staff are under instructions to examine cases where repeat claims for benefit are made in dormant cases and to make refunds where appropriate. This has led to 420 refunds being made since 4 July 1984.

The deductions were not made illegally. Regulations require that a deduction be made if a question of voluntary unemployment arises, but for the amount withheld to be paid to the claimant if the question is decided in his favour. The underpayments in question arose from failure to make these payments at that second stage. Such deductions are made only in supplementary benefit cases.

Single Clothing Payments

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many refugees and asylum seekers have made claims for single clothing payments during the last two years; and what has been the cost for each year.

Mr. Newton: I regret the information requested is not available.

Urgent Needs Payments

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library the following guidance issued to staff in local offices of his Department: (a) code AX concerning the recovery of urgent needs payments and (b) code LR concerning the recovery of moneys from liable relatives.

Mr. Major: It would not be in the public interest to do so.

Benefits (Young Claimants)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies he intends to initiate in the west midlands region to look into the number of young claimants under the age of 26 years who stay on at the same address when their entitlement to board and lodging assistance runs out, the number who stop claiming supplementary benefit and the proportion of these who find work, the number who go back to their parents and the number who go to stay with friends or relatives.

Mr. Newton: As part of their programme of work regional survey staff are looking at new and repeat claims for supplementary benefit from younger boarders in a small number of offices in the west midlands.

Single Payments

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consideration is given in assessing applications for single payments of supplementary benefit in respect of children who have outgrown rather than worn out footwear and clothing.

Mr. Newton: Regulation 27 of the Supplementary Benefit (Single Payments) Regulations provides that no payment for either clothing or footwear needs can be made where the need has arisen either through normal wear and tear or in the normal course of events; for example, where an item of clothing or footwear is outgrown.

Such claims can be considered only under the provisions of regulation 30 of the regulations where a single payment would be the only means of preventing serious damage or serious risk to the health or safety of a member of the claimant's assessment unit. Guidance on this provision in relation to children's clothing and footwear needs has been issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer at paragraphs 7545-7547 and 7566-7569 of the S manual, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will correlate the numbers of single payment awards made in each Department of Health and Social Security office with the number of claimants in each of those offices; and if he will place the information in the Library.

Mr. Major: The information requested is already available in the Library.

State Pension (Interest Payments)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to seek to pay interest to pensioners who receive their state pension in arrears on either a four weekly or quarterly basis for that period between the pension being due and the pension being paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I have no such plans.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are currently receiving (a) supplementary benefit and (b) supplementary pensions, in the Norfolk, North constituency area.

Mr. Major: The constitueny of Norfolk, North is covered for social security purposes by three local offices, Norwich (Chantry), Great Yarmouth and Kings Lynn, but their boundaries are not conterminous.

On 11 February 1986 (the latest date for which information is available) there were 27,328 people receiving supplementary allowance and 18,492 receiving supplementary pension from those offices.

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of claimants in receipt of supplementary benefit in the Greater Manchester area, by constituency; of these, how many are pensioners, families with children, and young people under the age of 25 years; and of each of these three categories, what information he has regarding additional requirements which are included in their supplementary benefit assessment, by type and average amount of additional requirements.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Dental Charges

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the answer of 17 December 1985, Official Report, column 147, why the detailed calculations underlying the recommendations of the dental rates study group are not published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The dental rates study group agrees each year to make available to individuals or organisations on request information that is submitted to it. It has decided, however, not to make available certain information, including its detailed calculations, when to do so might prejucice its ability to carry out its functions effectively.

Mr. Whitfield asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy that students in full-time education should be exempted from dental charges during temporary employment in vacations.

Mr. Hayhoe: Students under 19 in full-time education are exempt from dental charges. Older students have to pay charges, whether or not they are in temporary employment, though they can obtain help with charges if they have a low income. I have no plans to change these arrangements.

National Insurance Credits

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many unemployed people in Great Britain were claiming national insurance credits but were not receiving either unemployment benefit or supplementary allowance, at November 1985; and how many of these people (a) had been unemployed for over one year and exhausted their entitlement to unemployment benefit, (b) had claimed unemployment benefit but had their claims disallowed or (c) were ineligible for other reasons.

Mr. Major: At May 1985, the most recent date for which figures are available, there were 429,200 unemployed claimants who were in receipt of neither unemployment nor supplementary benefit. 207,800 had exhausted their entitlement to unemployment benefit, and of these 151,600 had been unemployed for over a year during the current spell of unemployment. There were 102,100 people whose claims for unemployment benefit were disallowed of whom 11,000 would not be entitled to national insurance credits because, for example, they left their jobs voluntarily, and 119,300 whose entitlement had not yet been determined or who were serving the three waiting days for unemployment benefit.

Hospital Laboratories (Crown Immunity)

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to remove Crown immunity from hospital laboratories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. The Government's decision about the removal of Crown immunity was announced by my right hon. Friend on 6 February at column 211, and the necessary legislation will be introduced soon. No further legislation is planned.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each year since 1979 the total number of appointments of junior hospital doctors from the Commonwealth.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. The number of junior doctors in post (not appointments) born outside the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland is given in the table.

Hospital junior doctors born outside the United Kingdom and Republic of Ireland in post at 30 September each year England

	All junior doctors
1979	8,461
1980	8,342
1981	8,230
1982	7,950
1983	7,539
1984	7,184
1985	7,059

Orthopaedic Operations

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many appointments for orthopaedic operations have been cancelled in the South East Staffordshire health district due to the shortage of junior hospital doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of South-East Staffordshire health authority.

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the longest time a patient now waits for an orthopaedic operation; and what is the average time in the South West Thames regional health authority area.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NHS (Property Disposal)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide details of the planned disposal over the next two years of residential National Health Service accommodation by district health authority and provide for each health authority (a) the number of present houses, flats, single units, (b) the number of future houses, flats, single units, (c) the present numbers of staff housed, (d) the future number of staff to be housed and (e) the estimated income from property disposal.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will provide a summary of districts' plans when they have been approved by the Department, which will contain much of the information requested. Authorities have not, however, been asked to provide a breakdown of current and proposed provision between flats, houses and single units.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if it is intended that the claim of speech therapists for equal pay for work of equal value shall be reviewed in time for the 1986 pay round; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: This is a matter for the management side of the Scientific and Professional Staffs Council which is due to meet the staff side representatives of speech therapists today to listen to their amplification of a written proposal about the pay of speech therapists.

Medroxyprogesterone Acetate

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many girls, and of what age, in the care of local authorities are being prescribed medroxyprogesterone acetate; and if he will give data for the previous five years;

(2) what information he has of prescriptions for medroxyprogesterone acetate being made for girls aged under 16 years.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that such information is not collected centrally.

Health Authorities

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many district health authorities serve two or more metropolitan district councils within their geographical area.

Mr. Whitney: One. The metropolitan boroughs of Knowsley and St. Helens both lie within the boundaries of St. Helens and Knowsley district health authority.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many general hospitals have accident and emergency departments without having the back-up facility of an intensive care unit within the hospital.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. I shall let the hon. Member have the available information concerning all hospitals with accident and emergency departments as soon as possible.

General Hospitals

Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the district health authorities which have within their district more than one general hospital.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. General hospitals are not explicitly defined in the statistics collected centrally.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many pensioner households lost all housing benefit as a result of the changes which came into effect in November 1985; and, of these, how many were tenants and how many owner-occupiers.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1986, c. 439]: It is estimated that about 210,000 fewer pensioner households received housing benefit as a result of the increase in the rate rebate taper above the needs allowance, offset where appropriate by the real improvement in the dependent child addition to the needs allowance in November 1985. About three-quarters of these were owner-occupiers, the remainder tenants.

NHS (Private Contractors)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will publish the latest information he has about the number of (a) laundry, (b) domestic and (c) cleaning contracts submitted for competitive tender by health authorities, the proportion of each awarded "in-house" and to outside companies and the savings resulting therefrom.

(2) what were the cumulative savings at the end of 1985 made by health authorities as a result of submitting laundry, domestic and cleaning services to competitive tender.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1986, c. 132]: The estimated savings at 31 December 1985 on 519 tendering excercises reported by health authorities were £41·9 million a year. The details are as follows:

Savings

	£ million
221 domestic awarded in house	15·9
97 domestic awarded to private contractors	16·5
119 catering awarded in house	4·6
7 catering awarded to private contractors	0·6
56 laundry awarded in house	3·2
19 laundry awarded to private contractors	1·1

DHAs (Chairmanships)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which individuals or organisations outside his Department have been consulted or have had sight of the current nominees for district health authority chairmanships; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1986, c. 131]: The Secretary of State is not required to consult anyone in making these appointments. Account, however, has been taken of nominations and views from various sources including those from hon. Members, National and local organisations and individuals.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Covenanted Donations

38. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate he has of the financial benefit to the arts from covenanted donations.

Mr. Moore: No separate information is available for the arts, but in the year to 30 September 1985 tax repayments to all charities in respect of deeds of covenant totalled £130 million. The arts will also benefit from the proposals my right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced in the Budget for further tax relief for charitable giving.

Small Businesses

Mr. Nicholls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the fiscal measures implemented since 1979 which have been designed to benefit small businesses either directly or indirectly.

Mr. Moore: I have written to my hon. Friend listing these measures and have arranged for a copy of the letter to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Taxpayers

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers fall into the following categories: (a) single, (b) married couple, husband only working, (c) married couple, wife only working, (d) married couple, both earning, (e) single pensioners and (f) married couple pensioners.

Mr. Moore: The latest estimates for 1985-86 are as follows:

	Taxpayers (thousands)
Age under 65
Single	7,900
Married couple:
Husband only working	4,200
Wife only working	350
Both working	5,200
Total under 65	17,650
Age 65 or over
Single	1,350
Married couple*	1,300
Total over 65	2,650
Total	20,300

* Where either spouse is aged 65 or over.

Oil Price (Effects)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the saving to consumers of oil in each of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries as a result of the fall in the price of oil to the present level, expressed at an annual rate; and how much of this saving is at the expense of overseas suppliers.

Mr. MacGregor: In each of the OECD countries savings to consumers of oil from lower crude oil prices will depend on the extent to which companies pass on the lower cost of oil, how Governments react, for example with regard to fuel taxes, and the extent to which oil consumption changes. It would be impracticable to attempt to estimate these effects.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the balance of payments effect on the exchange rate for the pound sterling against the deutschmark, the dollar and the yen of the fall in the price of oil to the current level compared with the averages for 1985, all other things being equal.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The precise relationship between changes in the oil price, the exchange rate, and the balance of payments is complex and any estimate of the effect of recent changes would be highly speculative.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing such information as is available to him on the current account surplus/deficit for the United Kingdom, the United States, Germany and Japan for the latest available period of 12 months covering (a) visibles and invisibles, (b) visibles and (c) trade in manufactures, measured in terms of local currency; and if he will also include his estimate of the balance of payments gain or loss which would accrue in each case if the price of oil remained at the present level and consumption remained unchanged.

Mr. MacGregor: The following figures are for 1985 except where otherwise indicated:

	Visibles and invisibles	Visibles	*Trade in manufactures
United Kingdom (£ billion)	3·3	−2·3	−2·9
United States of America ($ billion)	−117·7	−124·3	†−56·2
Germany (DM billion	36·3	74·1	†56·0
Japan (Y trillion)	11·8	13·4	†8·4

* SITC categories 5, 6, 7 and 9.

† Figures for twelve months to November 1985.

Sources: OECD Monthly Statistics of Foreign Trade (February 1986); Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics, Department of Trade and Industry (February 1986), national sources for individual countries.

The balance of payments gain or loss from a fall in oil prices depends on how the change in oil price affects other prices, economic activity, exchange rates and so on. There is considerable uncertainty about the magnitude of these effects.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on wholesale and retail prices of the fall in the price of oil to the present level, all other things being equal; what effect the resultant increase in purchasing power is likely to have on the rate of inflation; if he will describe the effect that the increase in purchasing power will have on the rate of growth; and how this differs in its effect from other ways of reflating the economy.

Mr. MacGregor: Estimates of the effects on inflation and purchasing power of the fall in oil prices are inevitably very uncertain. Treasury working paper No. 34 by S. Powell and G. Horton, "The Economic Effects of Lower Oil Prices", published a year ago, gave some estimates. Different results are shown in studies published by independent commentators.

Base Lending Rate

Mr. Maxton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a table on all movements of the base lending rate of the Bank of England from January 1970 to the present time.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The banking department of the Bank of England has a base rate for lending to its private customers, but this has no significance for monetary policy and is not published.

Page 194 of the 1986 Economic Trends annual supplement gives the bank's minimum lending rate to the market, in the form of the bank rate up to 1972 and the minimum lending rate from then up to 1981. Since 1981 a minimum lending rate has not been posted on a continuous basis by the Bank of England.

London clearing banks' short-term money rates from 1971 are shown on page 195 of the Economic Trends annual supplement and updated in the monthly Economic Trends. Before 1971, the rates of interest charged by London clearing banks were related to the bank rate.

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advantages and disadvantages for (a) United Kingdom industry and (b) the United Kingdom monetary system are being taken into account by the Government in considering whether to join the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government take all relevant factors into account.

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will list, giving the relevant references in the Official Report, those occasions on which the amounts of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied by the acceptance of objects or land in respect of individual cases have been specified in written answers dealing with such acceptances subsequent to those listed comprehensively in annex 2 to the memorandum by Her Majesty's Treasury dated 31 August 1977, published in the third report from the Expenditure Committee, House of Commons Paper 280 of Session 1977-78, pages 6-12, until those detailed in the written answers to the hon. Member for Warley, East on 1 May 1980, Official Report, column 597, listed acceptances during the last financial year prior to the responsibility for such answers being transferred from Her Majesty's Treasury to the Office of Arts and Libraries and the Department of the Environment;

(2) whether he will specify, giving the relevant references in the Official Report, the occasions when it has been stated to the House on behalf of Her Majesty's Treasury that the amounts of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied by the acceptance of objects or land is confidential in respect of individual cases during the period between the initiation of the system to the transfer of responsibility in 1980.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Customs and Excise (Job Sharing)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the requests from the Civil and Public Services Association to initiate job-sharing schemes in the Customs and Excise department in Merseyside have been refused.

Mr. Brooke: Requests from the Civil and Public Services Association to initiate job-sharing schemes in the customs and excise department in Merseyside have not been refused. A local circular has been issued inviting applications; a number have been received and these are now under consideration. Centrally, a draft circular has been put to the trade union side with a view to distribution throughout the department in the near future.

Private Schools

Mr. Freud asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the implications of the changes announced in the Budget in respect of charities for private schools with charitable status.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

THE ARTS

Films

30. Mr. Dormand asked the Minister for the Arts what support he gives from the arts budget to films and their preservation.

Mr. Luce: In the current year I have allocated some £9·2 million from the arts budget for film purposes, of which some £2·3 million has been allocated for film preservation.

Tyne and Wear

32. Mr. Beith asked the Minister for the Arts what assessment he has made of the likely impact on arts expenditure in rural areas in Northumberland of the new arrangements in connection with the replacement of arts funding within Tyne and Wear previously provided by Tyne and Wear county council.

Mr. Luce: A satisfactory settlement has been reached with the successor authorities in Tyne and Wear, and no Arts Council or Regional Arts Association funds will be diverted from rural to urban areas.

Victoria and Albert Museum

33. Mr. Chapman asked the Minister for the Arts what information he has about the recent level and trend of attendances at the Victoria and Albert museum.

Mr. Luce: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) on 22 January this year which showed that attendances at the Victoria and Albert museum during 1985 were 0·6 per cent. lower than in the previous year. In the period November 1985 to February 1986, the first four months of the voluntary donations scheme, there were 310,397 recorded visitors to the museum's main collection in South Kensington compared with 499,429 in the same period a year ago.

Works of Art (International Trading)

34. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Minister for the Arts if he has received any representations from the Spanish Government about the forthcoming auction of Goya's Marquesa de Santa Cruz, in the context of the 1984 code of practice for the correct international trading in works of art; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I have received a letter on this subject from the Spanish Government and I am considering it. I cannot, however, comment on this particular case which may be the subject of a future court action. In the matter of the code of practice for the control of international trading in works of art, to which my hon. Friend refers, I naturally attach great importance to the continuing high reputation of the art trade in this country, which is reflected in the existence of this voluntary code of good practice.

Public Libraries and Museums Act 1984

35. Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts if he has any plans to change the form of the report laid before Parliament under section 17 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964 on the exercise of his functions under the Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The form of my recent report under section 17 of the Public Libraries and Museums Act was similar to that used in recent years. I have no plans for a change.

East Midlands

36. Mr. Janner asked the Minister for Arts what representations he has received concerning the provision of funding for the arts in the east midlands.

Mr. Luce: I have had very few representations. The Arts Council will be announcing its allocation to east midlands arts shortly.

Metropolitan Counties (Allocation)

37. Mr. Fisher asked the Minister for the Arts if all arts organisations in the metropolitan counties have now been informed of their grant allocations from the Arts Council for the next financial year.

Mr. Luce: It is expected that grants will be announced over the next few weeks, when local commitments have been clarified.

South Bank

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if South Bank board members are allowed to charge the cost of travelling from abroad to attend board meetings or business; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The question has not arisen.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts (1) what part South Bank board members play in respect of bookings for artists on the South Bank; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what guidelines are given to South Bank board members who may wish to engage artists for paid employment on the South Bank and with whom they have a personal or professional connection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Bookings for artists will continue to be made by the concert halls' planning department which will on 1 April 1986 come under the supervision of the general director (arts).

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he will take steps to prevent South Bank board members receiving fees for performances on the South Bank organised or originated by the board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if, pursuant to his reply of 17 March, Official Report, column 87, he will provide a breakdown of the travel costs paid by the Arts Council for the fact-finding visits to the United States of America, Canada and Australia by Mr. Pulford and Mr. Grierson according to (a) journey, (b) mode and class of travel and (c) a breakdown of subsistence according to (i) hotel costs and (ii) per diem subsistence allowances; and how long the visits lasted.

Mr. Luce: All subsistence paid to Mr. Grierson and Mr. Pulford was at Civil Service per diem rates.

Mr. Grierson's travel as far as Los Angeles, and the greater part of his expenses in North America, were not paid for by the Arts Council. Where Mr. Grierson's fares were charged to the Arts Council, they were charged at club class rates. Mr. Pulford's round-the-world ticket was the standard club-class excursion fare. Mr. Grierson's visit lasted 16 days, and Mr. Pulford's 19 days.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his reply of 17 March, Official Report, column 87, when he expects the contract of employment between the general director (administration) and the South Bank board to be issued.

Mr. Luce: The contract will be issued shortly.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his reply of 17 March, Official Report, column 88, which contractors for which services have been accepted by the South Bank board.

Mr. Luce: The information is as follows:

	Contractor
Security contract	Argus Shield
Cleaning contract (internal)	Blue Arrow Company
Cleaning contract (external)	Pall Mall
Maintenance contract	Matthew Hall

Jubilee Gardens

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what are the intentions of the South Bank board in respect of existing staff in Jubilee Gardens.

Mr. Luce: Some of the duties of these staff will be undertaken by staff appointed by the South Bank Board, and all such appointments will be made under the guidance laid down by the London and Metropolitan Staff Commission.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what are the terms agreed for a lease between the London Residuary Body and the South Bank board in respect of Jubilee Gardens.

Mr. Luce: The terms of the proposed agency agreement have not yet been agreed.

Arts Council Members (Payments)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what is the policy in respect of the Arts Council members receiving payments or fees for artistic work commissioned or organised by the Arts Council.

Mr. Luce: The policy is contained in the Arts Council's terms of appointment for advisory panels and committee members, and is as follows:

"Members of the Council's advisory panels, committees and sub-committees are ineligible to receive awards and bursaries direct from the Council even if such awards are recommended by a panel, committee or sub-committee other than the one to which the member belongs. However, members are permitted to accept payments offered by third parties from funds made available by the Council.

From time to time advisers, including panel and committee members, may be asked to carry out specific tasks for the Council which panel and committee members would not be expected to do within the terms of their appointment as advisers or committee members. In such cases fees may be paid as appropriate."

National Heritage Act 1980

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts if he has anything to add to his answer of 14 March, in relation to the number of statements laid before Parliament covering the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 inclusive in compliance with section 9(6) of the National Heritage Act 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts if he has anything to add to his answer to the hon. Member for Warley, East of 14 March, Official Report, columns 609-10 in relation to the number of references in written answers during the financial years 1980-81 to 1984-85 specifying particulars of estate duty or capital transfer tax satisfied in individual cases of acceptances in lieu of such taxes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

ENERGY

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the proposed expansion of nuclear reprocessing at Dounreay complies with articles 37, 40 and 41 of the Euratom treaty.

Mr. Goodlad: The UKAEA and BNFL's application for outline planning consent for the construction of a European fast reactor demonstration reprocessing plant is to be the subject of a public local inquiry starting on 7 April. It is therefore not yet appropriate to provide the relevant information about the project to the Commission under articles 37 and 41 of the Euratom treaty. This will be provided in due course should the project go ahead. Action under article 40 is for the Commission.

Oil Rigs (Visits)

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on how long it takes to arrange offshore visits to oil rigs in the North sea on requests from trade unions and other similar organisations; and if he will make a statement on the right of access by such organisations.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: In all licensing rounds from the fifth onwards, a published criterion taken into account in judging applications has been whether the prospective licensee subscribed to the memorandum on trade union access to offshore installations. The memorandum provides that operators will take appropriate action to ensure trade union officials are granted reasonable access to offshore installations. The timing of such visits is a matter to be resolved between the unions and companies concerned, having regard to operational circumstances. ACAS is available to assist employers and unions faced with any particular difficulties.

Coal

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the countries that are importing coal from Great Britain, giving the annual tonnages over each of the past five years.

Mr. David Hunt: Exports of coal from the United Kingdom have been as follows:

United Kingdom coal exports ('000 tonnes)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has made within the councils of the European Economic Community and the European Coal and Steel Community about the dumping of third country coal into western Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: None. The European Communities apply the GATT anti-dumping and subsidy codes which cover dumped and subsidised imports; responsibility to implement those codes rests with the European Commission, to whom any well-founded allegations would be made.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy what have been the contracts established between the Central Electricity Generating Board and the National Coal Board and the tonnages of coal sold to the Central Electricity Generating Board by the National Coal Board in each of the last five years.

Mr. Goodlad: Details of the commercial arrangements between the Central Electricity Generating Board and the National Coal Board on coal supply are a matter for the two boards. According to the CEGB's annual reports and accounts, in the last five years the NCB has delivered the following tonnages to it:

	Million tonnes
1980-81	75
1981-82	74
1982-83	79
1983-84	70
1984-85	29

Electricity Supply

Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Energy what contingency plans exist to ensure the generation and distribution of electrical energy in the event of a major dispute in the electricity supply industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The electricity supply industry has contingency plans to deal with the possible effects of any major dispute in the industry. It would not be appropriate for me to give details of such plans.

Sellafield

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy why the insurance cover for the Sellafield reprocessing plant is due to be shifted from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to the commercial market as from 1 April.

Mr. Goodlad: Because of the establishment of the trading fund arrangements for the Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the Sellafield reprocessing plant is due to be insured against, among other things, earthquakes as from 1 April.

Mr. Goodlad: Sellafield reprocessing plant has always been insured against earthquakes, and this continues under the new commercial arrangements.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the underwriters from commercial insurance houses who will take on the insurance for the Sellafield reprocessing plant as from 1 April have been excluded from the meetings where the risks of accidents at Sellafield are assessed and safety measures discussed.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by British Nuclear Fuels that the underwriters have met it to discuss risks and safety in relation to insurance, and that BNF has fully met each and every request by the underwriters for information.

Low-income Households

Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for Energy how his Department values the creation of extra warmth in the homes of low-income households for the purpose of cost-benefit analysis of different heating systems and insulation standards.

Mr. David Hunt: The objective of the Government's energy efficiency campaign is to tackle barriers impeding the take-up of cost-effective energy efficiency measures. It is entirely up to the householder whether to take the benefit of those measures in the form of extra warmth rather than lower bills. My Department has, however, provided practical support for low-income households through its assistance to the voluntary sector insulation projects which have insulated over 130,000 households since my right hon. Friend launched the energy efficiency initiative in 1983.

Mr. Rost asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will define his Department's responsibility with regard to the efficient use of energy in the existing heating systems in low-income households.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department's energy efficiency campaign informs all consumers of the benefits of efficient heating systems and controls, which include lower heating bills and greater warmth. It has also supported the voluntary sector insulation projects which provide practical assistance to low-income households and which have expanded sixfold since my right hon. Friend launched the energy efficiency campaign.

Hot Dry Rocks

Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish the report prepared for his Department on the economics of energy extraction from hot dry rocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The report on the economics of energy extraction from hot rocks is in draft and is being discussed with those involved with the hot rock project. I expect to publish the report when it is available as is the normal custom for the renewable energy programme.

St. Fergus Terminal

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Energy if it is the policy of his Department to ensure that local contractors and operators are employed on any contracts at the St. Fergus gas and oil terminal which are being paid for by Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many firms operating in the Banff and Buchan constituency have been invited to tender for the special contract under the management of British Gas at the St. Fergus gas and oil terminal which is being paid for by Her Majesty's Government;

(3) if he will have discussions with the chairman of British Gas on the methods used to prepare a tender list for the special project at the oil and gas terminal at St. Fergus which is being paid for by Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what steps are being taken to ensure that once the special contract at the St. Fergus gas and oil terminal is awarded by British Gas as managing agent for his Department, locally based persons will be given priority in obtaining employment;

(5) if he has issued any instructions to British Gas as managing agent for a proposed contract at the St. Fergus gas and oil terminal regarding an approved list of contractors who will be invited to tender for the work which is being paid for by Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: My Department is negotiating a contract of the kind described with British Gas, and is being consulted by the corporation on the selection of tenderers for the main construction contract. My Department's approach to the selection process is consistent with general Government purchasing policy. I understand that the corporation employs local suppliers for its own projects wherever possible, subject to their technical and financial standing and their competitiveness, and that it intends to apply that policy in this case.

DEFENCE

Visiting Military Aircraft

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by country and type the number of visiting aircraft to the Royal Air Force base on Ascension Island in the last five years.

Mr. Stanley: This information is not held by the Ministry of Defence as Wideawake airfield on Ascension Island is operated by the United States Air Force.

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list by country and type the number of visiting aircraft to the Royal Air Force base in Cyprus in the last five years;

(2) if he will list by country and type the number of visiting aircraft to the Royal Air Force base in West Germany in the last five years;

(3) if he will list by country and type the number of visiting aircraft to the Royal Air Force base in Gibraltar in the last five years;

(4) if he will list by country and type the number of visiting aircraft to the Royal Air Force base in Belize in the last five years.

Mr. Stanley: Information on some operational movements of military aircraft is classified. As far as non-classified movements are concerned, the information requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost in each case.

Military Bands

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of the military bands of each branch of the armed services during the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lee: The estimated cost of the service bands in the current financial year (1985-86) is as follows:

	£ million
Royal Marines	9·79
Army	28·28
Royal Air Force	4·05

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, in the light of his recent meeting with representatives of interested organisations and companies, he will make a further statement on the extent to which United Kingdom companies awarded strategic defence initiative contracts will be subject to United States export controls on technology in the exploitation of the knowledge they have acquired under such contracts.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend, the then Secretary of State for Defence told the House on 9 December 1985, at column 623.

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, in the light of his recent meeting with representatives of interested organisations and companies, he will make a further statement on the ownership of the industrial property rights arising from strategic defence initiative contracts awarded to United Kingdom companies.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) on 11 March 1986, at column 423.

Tanks

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 12 February, Official Report, column 101, what percentage of the total number of tanks is presently used for training.

Mr. Lee: All tanks in units are used regularly for training in peacetime; the tanks currently allocated to the various training organisations represent some 18 per cent. of the operational tank fleet.

Home Base Defence

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made in the light of Exercise Brave Defender of the adequacy of the United Kingdom's armed reserves for the defence of the home base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The success of Exercise Brave Defender has confirmed our ability to discharge successfully our crucial military home defence role. The continuing build-up in the strength and capabilities of the reserve forces, as set out in paragraphs 446-451 of last year's "Statement on the Defence Estimates" (Cmnd. 9430-1), is a clear indication of the importance which we place on home defence and of the vital contribution made by our reserve forces.

Airbus Frame

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will institute a study into whether the Airbus airframe might be suitable as part of an advanced airborne early-warning and communications system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No. We are, however, evaluating airborne early warning systems which could meet the needs of the Royal Air Force. If we were offered a system which used the A300 Airbus as the air vehicle it would be assessed along with other options.

FV438 (Anti-tank Weapons)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 12 February, Official Report, column 184, if any replacement is to be provided for the long-range anti-tank weapons, currently mounted on the FV438 vehicle, which are to be withdrawn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lamont: There will be no immediate replacement for the Swingfire missile mounted on the FV438 vehicle. We shall have the option of replacing it with the long range TRIGAT missile when it becomes available in the mid-1990s, but it is too early to say what the precise deployment of LR TRIGAT will be.

Royal Navy Target-Towing Contract

Mr. Churchill asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what advice his Department received from the Civil Aviation Authority about the extent to which the passenger and cargo section of the tender document issued in respect of the Royal Navy's target-towing contract would require a public transport operation, within the terms of the air navigation orders; and what is his policy towards the letting of such long-term contracts on the basis of foreign-registered aircraft;

(2) if, before letting the Royal Navy target-towing contract, he will take steps to satisfy himself that the chosen contractor meets all Civil Aviation Authority requirements and that in the light of the proposed amendments to the air navigation orders prohibiting the use of foreign-registered aircraft for such United Kingdom-based contracts, there will be no cost to the taxpayer in subsequently transferring to the United Kingdom register any foreign-registered aircraft which may be involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Support will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Uranium Ore Imports

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total amount of uranium ore concentrates imported into Britain during 1985, including all material imported for processing for eventual export to foreign customers; and how much came into Britain from (a) Canada, (b) Australia, (c) the United States of America, (d) South Africa and (e) Namibia, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is not available.

Competition Policy

Mr. Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in view of the decision not to refer the second Guinness bid for Distillers to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission and the opportunity this opens for bidding companies to negotiate with the Office of Fair Trading the divestment of parts of its business or make other arrangements to avoid a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, he will make a statement about the implications of this decision on competition policy and the future conduct of the competition authorities in dealing with mergers.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Import Substitution

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he takes to promote import substitution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: I and my colleagues encourage all buyers — companies, individual consumers and the public sector —to look carefully at the advantages of buying British goods which are well designed, well-made and competitively priced. Much of my Department's work helps British manufacturers meet these requirements. In addition, we are looking at what further steps can be taken in this field.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

A-level Grading System

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will announce his decision on the Secondary Examination's Council's recommendations for reform of the A-level grading system.

Sir Keith Joseph: I have written today to Sir Wilfred Cockcroft, the chairman of the Secondary Examinations Council, informing him that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have considered the SEC's recommendations, together with the responses to a further round of consultations which we undertook in the autumn, and that we have decided that, with effect from the summer 1987 A-level examinations, the following A-level grading system should be adopted:

Nomenclature

(i) the 5 A-level pass grades A to E should be retained;

(ii) the present O-grade should be replaced with grade N, denoting a narrow failure, which should be certificated and defined on those certificates;

(iii) an unclassified performance should be identified by the letter U but not certificated.

Grading standards

(i) the A/B grade borderline should be established on the basis of boards' existing practice, including examiners' judgments of quality;

(ii) the B/C and E/N grade borderlines should be established by reference to examiners' judgments of quality and using methods to ensure fairness and reliability at these crucial points;

(iii) the mark range within the B/C and E/N grade borderlines should be divided into three equal intervals and these assigned respectively to grades C, D and E, with the same interval also assigned to grade N.

We consider that these revisions will resolve the long-standing problem of the narrow mark range of grade C. The new system should be both fair and practicable and should stand the test of some years.

We have taken the decision now so that the GCE boards and the HE institutions will have ample time to adjust their procedures for the summer 1987 examinations and autumn 1987 HE admissions respectively. We will be considering with SEC how those who use certificates can best be informed of the nature and significance of these changes.

My right hon. Friend and I are grateful for the SEC's work on this complex problem and for the views of those who were consulted.

Schools (Lunchtime Supervision)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those education authorities which have not yet submitted acceptable schemes for lunchtime supervision.

Mr. Dunn: Forty-four local education authorities have yet to submit a scheme for lunchtime supervision. Of these, several have indicated informally that they expect to do so but have not as yet been able to finalise their schemes. Authorities wishing to submit proposals in respect of financial year 1986-87 have until 15 April 1986 to do so.

Following is a list of authorities in England which have not yet submitted bids for either 1985-86 or 1986-87.

Scientific Research

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what effect he expects the tax proposals in the current Budget to have on the flow of private funds into scientific research in universities and elsewhere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend and I welcome the Budget proposals designed to encourage charitable giving by companies and individuals. We expect the flow of private funds to universities and other bodies for scientific research and other purposes to increase as a result of them and we hope that all concerned will take full advantage of the opportunities they offer.

Educational Advisers

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the number of advisers on special educational provision for each local authority, and for England as a whole, in the last year for which data are available.

Mr. Dunn: The Department does collect this information.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much public expenditure has been devoted to education in each of the last five years (a) by way of teachers' pay, (b) by way of capital expenditure, and (c) by way of text books.

Sir Keith Joseph: Local education authorities in England have spent the following total amounts in respect of the maintained sector of education.

	Teachers' salaries £ million (cash)	Capital expenditure £ million (cash)	Text and library books £ million (cash)
1980-81	4,830	472	70
1981-82	5,379	362	76
1982-83	5,720	413	86
1983-84	5,998	424	86
1984-85*	6,256	390	86

* Provisional.

School Building

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many new schools have been built since 1979.

Mr. Dunn: Information in the form requested is not held centrally. However, since the start of the 1979-80 financial year approval has been given to 463 major building projects for the provision of new or replacement maintained schools.

Council for National Academic Awards

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the discussions which have been taking place between officials of his Department and representatives of the Council for National Academic Awards about establishing targets for reducing the latter's staff of 160 and annual expenditure of £5 million.

Mr. Walden: Only informal discussions have so far taken place. The matter is now being pursued more formally in the light of the Government's response to the Lindop report announced by my right hon. Friend on 17 March, at columns 1 and 2, which envisages a significant devolution of the council's responsibilities to institutions.

Modern Languages

Mr. Radice asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he now expects the national policy for the teaching of modern languages, referred to in "Better Schools" to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: A statement of policy on foreign languages in the school curriculum is to be the next in a series of statements of broadly agreed objectives for different subjects taught in schools: our intention is to issue it in draft in the near future.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Kennedy asked the Paymaster General when he expects to receive and publish the next labour force survey.

Mr. Lang: The preliminary results from the 1985 labour force survey are currently being prepared by our officials. It is a little premature to fix a firm publication date, but we intend to publish the information as soon as possible.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many people in Great Britain who were registered as unemployed on 6 February had never had a job since leaving school; and how many of them were aged under 19 years.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. On 6 February 1986 there were 298,480 unemployed claimants in Great Britain who had never had a job since leaving school, of whom 150,432 were aged under 19 years.

Retail Food Industry

Mr. Skinner asked the Paymaster General (1) how many workers were made redundant in the retail food industry in 1983, 1984 and 1985;

(2) how many workers have been made redundant in the retail food industry in (a) the south-east, (b) the south-west, (c) the east midlands, (d) the west midlands, (e) the north-east and (f) the north-west in the last 12 months.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available. The confirmed redundancies statistics do not separately identify industry groups within the retail distribution sector.

Mr. Skinner asked the Paymaster General how many workers are employed in the retail food industry at the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: In December 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 634,000 employees in employment in the retail distribution of food in Great Britain.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many young people have now completed a YTS and gone into full-time employment aided by the young workers scheme; and what proportion of them are aged under 18 years.

Mr. Lang: Information is not held in the form requested. It is estimated that over 170,000 young people joining the young workers scheme since January 1982 will have had previous experience of YTS or the youth opportunities programme. All employees under the young workers scheme must be under 18 when first employed by the employer making the application.

Local Enterprise Week

Mr. Cash asked the Paymaster General whether he proposes to hold a Local Enterprise Week during 1986.

Mr. Trippier: The Local Enterprise Weeks held in 1984 and 1985 proved highly successful in spreading the "Enterprise" message. As 1986 has been designated Industry Year, during which many events will be taking place to drive home the Industry Year theme, the opportunity presents itself to put over our own "Enterprise" message in a different but equally effective way. As a result of our encouragement, Ambassador Rail Exhibitions Ltd. is running an Enterprise Express to mark Industry Year. The train will constitute a mobile exhibition on the theme of "Enterprise" and will bring together my Department's small firms service together with exhibitors from the Department of Trade and Industry, the Manpower Services Commission, Business in the Community, British Steel Industries Ltd., NCB (Enterprise) Ltd., the Natural Environmental Research Council and BBC Radio 4. I am to launch the train at Euston station on Monday 14 April, following which the train will tour the country for two weeks to carry the message of "Enterprise" to as many people as possible. A number of ministerial colleagues hope to visit the train at some of its stops.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

EC (Parliamentary Sessions and Members' Salaries)

Mr. Deakins asked the Lord Privy Seal what information he has as to the average length of a parliamentary Session in each of the EEC states; and what is the annual salary of the respective Members of Parliament expressed in terms of an amount for each week in the Session.

Mr. Biffen: The table gives the average length of Session over the last five years for a number of European Parliaments. The figures have been compiled by the IPU. In comparing the figures it is important to note that different countries have different systems of Government which place varying emphasis on the role of their Parliament. Furthermore, the activity of a Parliament is not necessarily reflected by the number of days on which it meets, as it may conduct its activities through Committees. It is also important to note that these figures do not give any reflection of the length of the daily sittings.

	Average length
Austria
Federal Council	13
National Council	40
Belgium
Senate	62
Chamber of Representatives	70
Cyprus	40
Czechoslovakia	123
Denmark	106
France
Senate	121
National Assembly	149
Hungary	12
Netherlands
1st Chamber	40
2nd Chamber	100
United Kingdom
Lords	147
Commons	170

The latest available figures on parliamentary salaries which have been compiled on a comparable basis are given in the 20th report of the Review Body on Top Salaries (May 1983). I refer the hon. Gentleman to table 3 in section 5A of volume 2 of that report.

PRIME MINISTER

Women's Rights

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister whether she will now consider establishing a Ministry for women's rights; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

European Council

Q18. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will propose at the next meeting of the European Council that the Council should meet monthly; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. As I told the House on 5 December, the Government believe that two European Councils a year are sufficient.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Q49. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with President Reagan about the visit of Mr. Clarence Robinson in relation to strategic defence initiative research; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None.

Research

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Prime Minister how much was spent by each Government Department in each of the last two years on (a) internal research and (b) external research, including the research councils; and what proportion each figure represents of the total spending of each Department.

The Prime Minister: The information requested is set out in the two tables:

Notes:

(i) The DES also supports expenditure on R and D by the research councils and other bodies through the science budget. The Research Council element of the science budget amounted to £499 millions in 1983-84.

(ii) Additionally the DES funds research activity in the universities from the block grants of the UGC. It is estimated that this amounted to £511 million in 1983-84.

(iii) The UKAEA intramural and extramural expenditure amounted to £363·1 million and £31·6 million, of which approximately half was funded by the Department of Energy.

(iv) Data on Government funded R and D are contained in the "Annual Review of Government Funded Research and Development", published by the Cabinet Office.

Seabirds (South Shields)

Dr. David Clark asked the Prime Minister if, in the light of the refusal of the wildlife incident unit to perform autopsies on seabirds found dead for no apparent reason on the beaches of South Shields recently, she will make a statement on the respective responsibilities of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of the Environment in providing this service.

The Prime Minister: Under the wildlife incident investigation scheme the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is responsible for investigating reports of casualties involving wildlife, bees and in some cases domestic animals alleged to involve agricultural chemicals. The Department of the Environment has no formal responsibilities under this scheme, but the two Departments are in touch in appropriate circumstances. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials have undertaken autopsies on a number of seabirds found dead at South Shields, but these examinations have not identified any unnatural cause of death.

Inner City Initiative (Manchester)

Mr. Kaufman asked the Prime Minister which Minister is responsible for leading the inner city initiative task force for Manchester, Moss Side.

The Prime Minister: The Manchester Moss Side task force is part of the Government's inner cities initiative, for which my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment has overall responsibility. The day-to-day management of the initiative is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Paymaster General and Minister for Employment.

Council of Europe

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Prime Minister if she will announce the composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe.

The Prime Minister: I have appointed 18 delegates from the Parliament of the United Kingdom. The delegation this year will consist of 12 members of the Conservative party, five members of the Labour party and one member of the Liberal party. I have also appointed a number of substitute delegates.

The appointments of representatives and substitutes have been made on the basis of nominations by the leaders of those parties concerned.

The same delegation will be representing the United Kingdom Parliament at the Assembly of Western European Union.

Representatives from the Government Benches will be:
The right hon. Member for Torbay (Sir F. Bennett), who will act as leader.
The hon. Members for:
Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg).
Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant).
Norfolk, South-West (Sir P. Hawkins).
Southampton, Test (Mr. Hill).
Twickenham (Mr. Jessel).
Birmingham, Edgbaston (Dame J. Knight).
Sheffield, Hallam (Sir J. Osborn).
Harrow, West (Sir J. Page).
Warwick and Leamington (Sir D. Smith).

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 March.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 March.

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 25 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

ENERGY

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest estimate of the range of costs involved in the EDRP facility proposed for Dounreay, for the cost of associated waste management facilities and for the cost of railheads serving the site and the port of entry.

Mr. Goodlad: BNFL and the UKAEA advise an indicative cost for the European fast reactor demonstration reprocessing plant of around £300 million, about one-quarter of this being for radioactive waste management facilities. This estimate is based on preliminary design work. Should the project so ahead, it may need to be refined in discussion with the licensing and authorising departments and the partners in the European collaboration.

Cost of the transport infrastructure would depend on the routes selected; no decision has yet been taken.

Departmental Suppliers

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Peter Walker: Most of my Department's suppliers of day-to-day requirements seek payment in 30 days net. Subject to confirmation that the goods and services received and the payments sought are in accordance with contract, payments are generally authorised and made within that time scale.

My Department also places a variety of contracts to meet more specialised requirements, for example in the case of research and development projects, for which suitably commercial payment terms are negotiated individually.

Miners (Reinstatement)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has held any discussions with the chairman of the National Coal Board about the reinstatement of miners who were dismissed in North Staffordshire during the national coal strike.

Mr. David Hunt: The dismissal and re-employment of its employees are matters for the National Coal Board.

Onshore Exploration

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has completed his consideration of the applications for onshore exploration licences.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I have today announced the conditional award of 74 new-style exploration licences for blocks in England, Scotland and Wales. The new style exploration licence allows companies to search and drill for petroleum. However, these rights are not automatic; operator's plans are subject to planning controls and my consent is needed to drill any well. That consent will not be given unless planning permission has been obtained and I am satisfied about the detailed engineering of the well.

Details of the awards, which include the interim awards announced on 12 December 1985, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Industries

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has reached any conclusions on the future of prison industries.

Mr. Hurd: My predecessor announced on 12 July 1985 that he had asked the Prisons Board to examine how the present network of industrial workshops in England and Wales could be rationalised, while retaining the existing level of work and related activity for inmates.

The number of industrial hours worked in prisons has fallen by more than 50 per cent. since the early '70s and one in three workshop places for inmates is now unfilled. Over the last two years steps have been taken to improve the control, management and policies of prison industries, to find new outlets for their products and to develop existing markets, especially within prison department itself. Despite these and other measures which are being taken to improve performance, I have accepted the Prisons Board's conclusion that prison industries in their present form do not provide value for money and that part of the considerable resources devoted to them could be deployed to better effect.

I have therefore also accepted the board's recommendation that some 600 inmates now employed in 29 workshops for an average of 13 hours a week should be re-allocated to other workshops, to other forms of employment within prisons or to educational or other training courses. When firm alternative plans for worthwhile activity for these inmates have been drawn up, those workshops will close. A further 25 workshops which have not been open for a number of months will also close, and there will be a reduction in instructor posts in 14 others. A further 31 workshops which have been subject to review will remain open provided that a current or promised improved performance can be sustained. It is expected at this stage that nearly all of the 81 staff in post affected by the changes will be offered alternative posts. Staff and their trade unions have been consulted widely during the process of the review, and there will be further consultations during implementation.

Prison industries have a good deal of unrealised potential and will continue to play an important part in prison regimes. The object of this review has been to enhance their role for the future. The reduction in underused capacity will provide them with a firmer base from which they can deliver a more efficient service and better value for money. The Prisons Board will shortly be setting firm financial and other management targets for prison industries. It is also essential that they should be managed with the right blend of commercial skills and business acumen. There are now a number of senior staff in key positions who can draw on previous commercial experience. In addition, the Board of Management for Prison Service Industries and Farms includes two non-executive members appointed to bring business skills to the management of this part of the prison service. I am asking the non-executive members to give me their recommendations for the further development of the best business practice within prison industries by the end of the year.

I am placing in the Library a summary of the Prisons Board recommendations for rationalisation.

Women (Church of England)

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to "What Women are Doing in the Church of England" to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Mellor: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 5 May to 9 May 1986.

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passengers refused leave to enter the United Kingdom in 1985 were granted temporary admission.

Mr. Waddington: About 8,500 passengers are estimated to have been granted temporary admission to the United Kingdom in 1985 following an initial refusal of leave to enter.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers and immigration officers and of what rank were involved in the operation at Liberty's department store on 30 January; how many people, and of what nationalities, were (a) interviewed and (b) detained in the operation, for how long and where; what was the immigration status of the 10 people who were arrested and not charged; for how long they were under arrest; and how many people were charged with theft as a result of the police investigations.

Mr. Waddington: The numbers and ranks of police and immigration officers who visited Liberty's on 30 January 1986 were:

Police
1 Sergeant
3 Constables
5 further constables deployed for security purposes outside the Store.

Immigration Service
1 Chief Immigration Officer
1 Immigration Officer
3 further Immigration Officers subsequently used to pursue enquiries in relation to those arrested.

A total of 19 people (6 Ghanaians, 6 Nigerians, 5 Moroccans, 1 Gambian and 1 Ugandan) were interviewed. They were all arrested.

The immigration status of those not found to be in breach of the immigration laws was as follows: 4 were found to be settled in the United Kingdom; 2 had limited leave to enter or remain; 3 had applications for extension of leave pending; and 1 had formerly enjoyed exemption from control as a result of diplomatic status and now required leave to remain.

The periods spent in custody at West End central police station were:

Less than 6 hours: 5
Over 6 but under 8 hours: 3
Over 8 but under 11 hours: 2

Nobody was charged with theft as a result of the investigation at Liberty's on 30 January 1986, but one person had been so charged as a result of a separate but related inquiry the previous week.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the nature of the investigation on 14 March at British Telecom plc, 81 Newgate street, London EC1; how many police officers and immigration officers and of what rank, were involved; how many people and of what nationalities were (a) interviewed and (b) detained in the operation, for how long and where; and with regard to what alleged breaches of immigration control these people were interviewed or charged.

Mr. Waddington: This was a major joint operation specifically planned to investigate suspected offences under the immigration laws. The numbers and ranks of police and immigration officers who visited the British Telecom plc building were:

Police
1 Superintendent
1 Inspector
1 Sergeant
19 Constables

Immigration Service
1 Deputy Chief Inspector
1 Inspector
2 Chief Immigration Officers
10 Immigration Officers
1 further Chief Immigration Officer and
5 further Immigration Officers subsequently used to pursue enquiries in relation to those arrested.

A total of 24 people were interviewed. Nineteen people were arrested with the following results:

Nine were judged to be illegal entrants (3 Ghanaians, 3 Portuguese, 2 Nigerians and 1 Colombian); one (a Ghanaian) was charged as an overstayer; seven were charged with working in breach of conditions (5 Nigerians, 1 Ghanaian and 1 Portuguese); and 2 (both Ghanaians) were formally cautioned for working in breach of conditions. Of the other five who were not arrested, one, a Nigerian, was an overstayer who was served with a notice of intention that he should be deported and with a restriction order; and 4 (2 Ghananians and 2 Nigerians) were found not to be in breach of the immigration laws.

Five of the illegal entrants detected at the British Telecom plc building were taken initially to Wood street police station but were subsequently transferred to Latchmere House remand centre, where they are still detained, pending removal from the United Kingdom. In the other cases the periods spent in custody, in Wood street police station, were:

4 hours or less	4
Over 4 but under 6 hours	5
Over 6 but under 9 hours	2
Over 9 but under 14 hours	3

This operation was conducted in accordance with the recommendations of Home Office circular 131-1980, of which a copy was placed in the Library in December 1980.

Coal Industry Dispute

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences and, where relevant, the Acts, under which north Staffordshire miners were charged following the national coal dispute.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Information in the form requested is not available. In Staffordshire as a whole 280 people were charged with a total of 401 offences during and in connection with the NUM dispute. Two hundred and seventy-two of those charged gave their occupation as miner, but information about places of work is not readily available. Of the 401 charges, 159 related to alleged offences under section 5 of the Public Order Act 1964, 80 to alleged offences of obstructing a police officer under section 51 of the Police Act 1964, and 72 to alleged offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971. The remaining 90 charges relate to a wide range of offences extending from riot (nine charges) to offences under the House to House Collections Act.

"The Sentence of the Court"

Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to publish a new edition of the handbook "The Sentence of the Court".

Mr. Hurd: I am glad to say that a new edition is published today and is being distributed to all judges and magistrates. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Library.

Fraud

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) of the cases of fraud reported to the Metropolitan police company fraud department since 1979 (i) how many in each year were subsequently reported to the Department of Trade and Industry and (ii) of the cases subsequently reported to the Department of Trade and Industry how many in each year resulted in prosecutions by the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department; and how many were successful in each instance;

(2) of the cases of fraud reported to the Metropolitan police company fraud department since 1979 (i) how many cases in each year were subsequently reported to the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department and (ii) of the cases subsequently reported to the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department, how many in each year resulted in prosecutions conducted by that department; and how many were successful in each instance;

(3) of the cases of fraud reported to the Metropolitan police company fraud department in each year since 1979 (i) how many cases in each year were subsequently reported to the Director of Public Prosecutions and (ii) of the cases subsequently reported to the Director of Public Prosecutions how many in each year resulted in prosecutions conducted by the Director of Public Prosecutions; and how many were successful in each instance;

(4) of the cases of fraud reported to the Metropolitan police company fraud department since 1979 (i) how many cases were referred to them by the Department of Trade and Industry and (ii) how many cases in each year were referred to it by the Director of Public Prosecutions;

(5) how many cases of fraud were reported to the Metropolitan police company fraud department in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 3 March, columns 47-48]: I am informed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that information more detailed than that provided in the report of the Fraud Trials Committee (page 245) could be provided only at disproportionate cost, because such information is recorded only on the case files, which would need to be examined individually.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department of the cases of fraud reported to the City of London police fraud squad since 1979 (i) how many cases in each year were referred to it by the Department of Trade and Industry and (ii) how many cases in each year were referred to them by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1986, c. 48]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the City of London that this information is not available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

USA (Visas)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations with the United States Administration on proposals to end the requirement for all United Kingdom citizens to obtain a visa to enter the United States of America.

Mr. Eggar: An Immigration Bill, which includes a provision for the establishment of a pilot programme to waive the non-immigrant visa requirement, is under consideration in the United States Congress. We expect that if a pilot programme were to be adopted, the United Kingdom would be one of the countries covered by it.

Iran-Iraq War (Chemical Weapons)

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent report of the United Nations Secretary-General's mission to investigate allegations of the use of chemical weapons in the conflict between Iran and Iraq.

Mr. Renton: We unreservedly support the statement made by the President of the Security Council on 21 March on the recent report of the United Nations Secretary-General's mission to investigate chemical weapons use in the Iran-Iraq conflict. That report unanimously concluded that chemical weapons had been used by Iraqi forces against Iranian forces. We greatly regret that Iraq has been clearly shown to have been in violation of the Geneva protocol of 1925, which prohibits the use of such weapons. At the same time, we fully share the concern expressed in the statement about the risk of an extension of the conflict and fully endorse the call for respect for the territorial integrity of neighbouring states. We also fully support the call for an immediate cessation of hostilities, which would open the way to a negotiated and comprehensive settlement to this tragic conflict.

This further instance of chemical weapons use emphasises the need for a comprehensive ban on this horrible class of weapons. We trust that the other participants in the negotiations in Geneva, which are currently being chaired by the United Kingdom representative to the conference on disarmament, will join us in a renewed effort to bring them to a successful conclusion.

SCOTLAND

Justice of the Peace Courts

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends in the near future to review the powers of justice of the peace courts.

Mr. John MacKay: Justice of the peace courts were replaced in 1975 by district courts. The Government have no plans to undertake a specific review of the powers of the district courts in the near future; but their powers and jurisdiction are kept under review and have been increased or extended in recent years under the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1980, the Transport Act 1982 and the Increase of Criminal Penalties etc. (Scotland) Order 1984.

Fisheries Offences

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration has been given by the Scottish Courts Administration to the recommendation by the Scottish Affairs Committee in its second report, HC 237, 1985-86, that fisheries offences should be treated more seriously.

Mr. John MacKay: The Government are satisfied that the maximum penalties are adequate. The fine or other penalty to be imposed in any individual case is a matter for the court; the Scottish Home and Health Department has drawn the Committee's views to the attention of the Sheriffs Association.

Children and Young Persons

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many orders have been made under subsection 2 of section 18 of the Children and Young Persons (Scotland) Act 1937 in each of the past four years.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is not held centrally.

Electorate Statistics

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish regions in order of percentage growth in electorate since 1980; and what has been the percentage growth and actual figures in each case.

Mr. John MacKay: The information for the Scottish regions and islands areas for the period 1980-86 is set out in the table.

Regions and Islands areas	Actual increase	Percentage increase
Grampian	32,063	9·1
Highland	10,779	7·8
Dumfries and Galloway	6,428	6·0
Orkney	809	5·7
Shetland	873	5·7
Fife	13,683	5·4
Central	9,327	4·5
Lothian	21,485	3·7
Borders	2,904	3·7
Western Isles	633	2·8
Tayside	7,458	2·5
Strathclyde	19,954	1·1

Departmental Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Payment is generally made within 28 days of the date of receipt of an account or, where applicable, within the period stipulated in the contract.

Housing (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of people on new town waiting lists in Scotland at 31 March in each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Information about numbers on waiting lists maintained by new town development corporations over the period in question is not compiled on a uniform basis and does not enable me to give a meaningful reply.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of people on Housing Association waiting lists in Scotland at 31 March in each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hypothermia

Sir Hector Monro asked the Secretary of State for Scotland in which of the last 10 years the highest number of hypothermia deaths has been recorded in Scotland; in which month of the last 10 years the highest monthly figure has been recorded; and if he will give the respective figures.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given to the questions by the hon. Member for Dundee East (Mr. Wilson) on 29 January 1986, at column 550, 10 February 1986, at columns 343-44, and 18 March 1986, at columns 138-42.

The highest number of deaths mentioning hypothermia occurred in 1979, when there were 259 deaths. The table shows the highest monthly figure in each of the last 10 years.

Deaths mentioning Hypothermia
Month in which highest number of deaths occurred and Number of deaths in that month

	Number
December 1976	56
January 1977	39
February 1978	68
January 1979	86
January 1980	44

	Number
December 1981	85
January 1982	70
February 1983	38
January 1984	53
January 1985	65

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dundee, East, 10 March, Official Report, column 374, he can now give provisional figures to show the number of deaths in Scotland in February with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate.

Mr. John MacKay: The provisional figure for February 1986 is 27.

Joint Liaison Committees

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland in reference to Scottish Office NHS circular No. 1985 of 24 April 1985, paragraph 7, whether it is his practice for papers relating to meetings of the relevant committees to be made available to all organisations which ask for them.

Mr. Rifkind: The right hon. Member presumably intended to refer to NHS circular No. 1985(GEN)18. Paragraph 7 of this circular advised that papers relating to the meetings of joint liaison committees set up for the purposes of joint planning should be made available to all organisations which ask for them. Information on the practices of individual committees is not collected centrally.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to make any further changes to his Department's cash limits for 1985-86.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. I intend to make reductions, totalling £5·01 million, to five of the cash limits within my responsibility. The details are as follows:

£000

	Present cash limit	New cash limit	Reduction
XV:3 Regional and General Industrial Support, Scotland	131,600	131,200	400
XV:6 Roads, Transport and Environmental Services, Scotland	151,001	150,501	500
XV:14 Prisons, Hospitals and Community Health Services etc.	1,523,678	1,523,278	400
XV:15 Education, Arts, Libraries and Social Work, Scotland	149,386	149,176	210
SO/LA2 Capital Expenditure (mainly housing)	428,316	424,816	3,500

The reductions will partly offset increased expenditure of £18·748 million on vote XV:5 (Regional Assistance, Scotland) and £20·5 million on vote XV:8 (Housing Support Grant). Neither of these Votes is cash limited and the necessary Supplementary Estimates have been approved.

Teacher Training

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has reached decisions on the arrangements for intake to teacher training courses at Scottish colleges of education in 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Provisional arrangements suggested in a discussion paper issued by my Department have been the subject of consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, the General Teaching Council for Scotland and the Joint Committee of Colleges of Education in Scotland. In the light of views expressed by these bodies, comments from individual colleges of education and other organisations, and education authorities' estimates of their future secondary school staffing requirements, I have now decided that the total numbers of students to be admitted to pre-service teacher training courses in session 1986-87 should be 600 to the four-year primary BEd degree course, 300 to the one-year primary postgraduate course and 600 to secondary courses (on the basis that this last figure may be exceeded, if necessary, in order to admit any additional suitable applicants in mathematics, physics and business studies).

I am seeking the comments of the governing body of each college on the following proposed quotas within the overall levels mentioned above:

College	Primary Intake		Secondary Intake
	Proposed BEd Degree Course Quotas	Proposed Postgraduate Course Quotas	Proposed Quotas
Aberdeen	95	45	75
Craigie	70	30	—
Dundee	50	30	55
Dunfermline	—	—	40
Jordanhill	150	75	250
Moray House	120	68	95
St. Andrew's	115	52	85
Total	600	300	600

In regard to secondary intake, I am advising the college to give priority in session 1986-87 to students applying for admission to courses leading to a Teaching Qualification (Secondary Education) in business studies, mathematics, physics, chemistry, computing and religious education; and in regard to mathematics, physics and business studies in particular I am asking the colleges concerned to admit within their quotas the same numbers as in the current Session (for business studies the 1984-85 Session) and advising them that thereafter any additional numbers admitted will be over and above their quotas. I am also reminding each college of the need to consult the education authorities which it mainly serves in order to ensure that the numbers admitted both in individual priority subjects and in other subjects appropriately reflect regional needs.

These arrangements are without prejudice to any decisions about the structure of the college of education sector which I may in due course taking following my consultations on the report by the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council on a future strategy for higher education in Scotland (Cmnd. 9676).

Forestry Commission Sales

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the name, location, including county and map reference, size, purchaser, and price received, in respect of each of those forest estates sold to date by the Forestry Commission throughout Great Britain.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1986, c. 484.]: As the information requested, covering the period from the operative date of the Forestry Act 1981 to 10 March 1986 is lengthy, I am arranging for the details to be placed in the Library of the House. As far as the information regarding name of purchaser and price is concerned, arising from a recommendation contained in the 13th report (Session 1984-85) of the Committee of Public Accounts, the Forestry Commission seeks the agreement of purchasers of forestry land to the public disclosure of information about the transaction. This applies to sales completed after 12 June 1985 (the date of the PAC report). These details are not made public where a purchaser has not agreed to disclosure.

TRANSPORT

United Automobile Services

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many routes currently operated by United Automobile Services within the Berwick-upon-Tweed constituency are currently registered with the traffic commissioners.

Mr. David Mitchell: I do not have information on existing routes or on local service registrations at constituency level.

Public Transport (Ipswich)

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many route miles have been registered with the traffic commissioners in accordance with the requirements of the Transport Act 1985 in the area served by the Ipswich borough transport authority.

Mr. David Mitchell: Information on the routes of all services registered during January and February 1986 will be published by each of the traffic commissioners at the end of March, and the relevant issues of notices and proceedings will be available in the House of Commons Library. However, operators were not required to provide information about route miles.

Ferry Ports (Roads)

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is taking steps to seek to ensure that ferry ports are provided with road connections equal in quality to those provided for the proposed Channel fixed link.

Mr. David Mitchell: The need for new or improved national roads, including those to ferry ports, and priorities for expenditure are kept under regular review according to the level of usage. Allocation of resources for new local authority roads is, similarly, based on the needs of traffic.

Compulsory Purchase

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of times, in each of the last five years, that his Department has acquired the main residence of an individual by a compulsory purchase order, the number of cases, in each of the last five years, referred to the Lands Tribunal and the average length of time taken to complete an acquisition.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Dock Workers (Redundancies)

Mr. Moate asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many personnel have been released on redundancy terms from the Port of London Authority since 1 October 1983 up to the present date; and what is the total money paid by Her Majesty's Government towards the cost of those redundancies.

Mr. Ridley: The number of registered dock workers and others employed by the Port of London Authority who have taken voluntary severance since 1 October 1983 is 1,398; the Government have contributed £26·5 million towards the cost of those severances.

Mr. Moate asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many personnel have been released on redundancy terms from the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company since 1 October 1983 up to the present date; and what is the total money paid by Her Majesty's Government towards the cost of those redundancies.

Mr. Ridley: The number of registered dock workers and others employed by the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company who have taken voluntary severance since 1 October 1983 is 724; the Government has contributed £18·3 million towards the cost of those severances.

Cycling Accidents

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will take immediate steps to facilitate the co-ordination by local authorities, police and hospitals of their databases regarding cycling accidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A common reporting system (Stats 19) is used for all road accidents involving personal injury by police, local authorities, and central Government, who have access to a common database.

Hospital databases are the responsibility of area health authorities and these identify patients who are road accident victims. Hospital in-patient records contain confidential personal information and therefore cannot be made generally available. Suitably anonymised data have been extracted from these records and matched with accident circumstances recorded on Stats 19. Work on this is proceeding at the Transport and Road Research Laboratory.

Cycle accidents, particularly those involving no other vehicle, tend to be under-reported on Stats 19. Where cyclists are detained as inpatients following an accident, this will be recorded by the local health authority.

Air Services

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department received concerning the amount of fifth and sixth freedom traffic carried by Air Canada on its services from Canada to Singapore via the United Kingdom; what representations were made to the Canadian Government on this matter at the recent air services agreement meeting; and what response was received.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Airways has expressed concern about the amount of fifth freedom traffic carried between London and Singapore by Air Canada. My Department has concluded that the amount of this traffic is excessive under the terms of the United Kingdom-Canada air services agreement and has raised the matter with the Canadian Government. Further bilateral discussions on this and other United Kingdom-Canada aviation matters are expected towards the end of April.

Westminster Bridge

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions there have been between the Greater London council and his Department regarding the narrowing of Westminster bridge; and what the effect will be on the traffic flows once incorporated.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None. I understand that the GLC is installing cycle facilities on the eastern approach to the bridge and a road safety scheme on the western approach. It has been for it to consider the effects on traffic flows. On 1 April responsiblity for the schemes will pass to Lambeth and Westminster respectively.

Vehicle Tests

Mr. Peter Brunivels asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many Ministry of Transport tests have been undertaken in each of the past 10 years and in the current year to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information for the years to 1984 is published in "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1974-84", a copy of which is in the Library. Figures for 1985 and 1986 to date are not yet available.

Coaches (Parking and Access)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish his report on the review of parking and access for coaches in London.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The report "Tourist Coaches in London" was published last Thursday. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Automatic Level Crossing (South Woodham Ferrers)

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the installation of a barrier-less automatic level crossing in South Woodham Ferrers, Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Chelmsford borough council made a statutory representation on the application by the British Railways Board for authority to install an automatic open level crossing (locally monitored) at South Woodham Ferrers. In addition, I have received a number of letters from local residents objecting to the board's proposals. All these representations were carefully considered before the decision was made to grant the board's application, which complied fully with the Department's published requirements.

ENVIRONMENT

Sewage Disposal

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much finance has been provided by his Department for research and development into disposal methods of sewage sludge by methods other than sea deposition;

(2) how much finance has been provided by his Department on research and development into methods of sea disposal of sewage sludge, treated and untreated, in each year since 1980.

Mr. John Patten: Since 1980 my Department has financed research into the environmental and public health aspects of methods of disposing of sewage sludge as follows:

(£'000)

	Sea disposal	Other methods
1980-81	60	160
1981-82	70	216
1982-83	112	280
1983-84	140	395
1984-85	120	377
*1985-86	100	340

* Estimated

The research on sea disposal does not distinguish between treated and untreated sludge.

Water Pollution

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the number of water pollution incidents recorded by each water authority in each year since 1980-81; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the number of prosecutions for water pollution offences taken by each water authority in each year since 1980-81; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The number of reported water pollution incidents and the number of prosecutions for water pollution offences taken by each English water authority in each year since 1980-81 are:

Reported Pollution Incidents

Many incidents are minor and it is often difficult to obtain firm evidence as to the source of the pollution. In any case, water authorities will often prefer to act by discussion and persuasion rather than mount formal action.

In July last year the Government completed the introduction of all the main provisions of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974. These provide a comprehensive framework for the protection of the water environment and include the extension of controls to cover all coastal, esturial and inland waters. The Government are also considering whether to implement fully and extend the powers under which areas can be designated within which certain activities liable to cause pollution can be prohibited or controlled.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of effluent discharges by each water authority which were not in compliance with their consent conditions in each year since 1980-81; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Routine information on compliance by the English water authorities with their consents for the discharge of effluents has not been held by my Department. However, following the implementation of section 34 of the Control of Pollution Act, water authorities are now required, as a condition of discharge consents, to report annually on those works which fail to comply with the terms of their consents. The first reports, for the year ended 31 December 1986, are due to be submitted early in 1987.

Copies of consents, together with the results of analyses of effluent samples are contained in registers maintained by authorities and these are now open to public inspection.

New Towns Commission

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to publicise the powers of the New Town Commission in new towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The powers of the Commission for the New Towns are set out in part II of the New Towns Act 1981 as amended by the New Towns and Urban Development Corporations Act 1985. In addition, the legislation consolidated in the Housing Act 1985 provides that the commission's residential tenants are secure tenants, as are tenants of development corporations. This means that the position of such tenants is unaffected by the transfer of a development corporation's rented housing to the commission. In towns where the development corporation was wound up and its assets transferred to the commission after 15 November 1985, the commission has powers to carry out or authorise the development of new town land in accordance with proposals for development approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State under section 7(1) of the 1981 Act before the date of transfer of assets. Certain of the commission's powers may not be exercised without the authority of my right hon. Friend. In carrying out its functions in respect of any new town, the commission must have regard, among other things, to the convenience and welfare of people living, working or carrying on business there.

Basildon

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from Basildon council about the future of the development corporation over the last four years.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received no representations in this period other than in response to the statutory consultations initiated in July last year as a preliminary to the making of an order under section 41 of the New Towns Act 1981 winding up the corporation. The council expressed the view that the life of the development corporation should be prolonged beyond the proposed wind-up date, now confirmed, of 1 April 1986. The council expressed concern over employment generation, housing and roads. The Commission for the New Towns will carry forward the new town road programme and pursue the question of housing transfer. The commission will also promote employment generation, as it does in respect of all the towns where it has taken over the assets of a development corporation.

Lead Shot

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he now has to introduce regulations to control the sale and import of lead shot for fishing purposes from 1 January 1987, following his predecessor's statement on 17 July 1985 about voluntary measures to switch to non-toxic alternatives to lead shot and thereby to avoid swan deaths.

Mr. Waldegrave: Progress towards the voluntary withdrawal of lead fishing weights has been closely monitored during the fishing season which ended recently, and the evidence is currently being analysed. I shall be considering the results very carefully and hope to be in a position to announce the outcome in early summer.

In the meantime, we shall shortly be initiating consultations on regulations under section 100 of the Control of Pollution Act so that if necessary they may be brought into effect on 1 January 1987.

Greater London Enterprise Board

Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received seeking the continuation of the Greater London Enterprise Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Various representations have been received regarding the Greater London Enterprise Board. The future of the board rests with those London borough councils which are taking up membership of the board.

Wildlife Inspectorate

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to his answer of 19 February, Official Report, column 214, he will identify the appropriate enforcement agency or agencies to which the Wildlife Inspectorate provides expert advice.

Mr. Waldegrave: The enforcement agencies to which the Wildlife Inspectorate may, when requested, provide expert advice concerning possible offences under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 can be any police force, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, and the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. In the case of legislation governing trade in endangered species the enforcement agencies to which the Wildlife Inspectorate may provide expert advice can be any police force, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise or official agencies in other countries.

Bloodstock Breeders

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from representatives of bloodstock breeders calling for the introduction of legislation to reverse the Whitsbury Manor stud decision in advance of a hearing before the Court of Appeal since the reply by the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State the hon. Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave) of 7 May 1985 to the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham), Official Report, column 307; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have received 130 letters from representatives of bloodstock breeders since 1 May 1985. The decision of the Court of Appeal, which is still awaited in this case, remains central to consideration of what action, if any, should be taken.

Webbers Yard, Dartington

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, he will give details of the steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to urge the European Commission to make an early decision on the application for a grant for a new road at Webbers Yard, Dartington; and if he will estimate the likely timing of a decision.

Mr. Tracey: Since my answer of 18 March the European Commission has given the Department of Trade and Industry, which leads on European regional development fund matters, its view on the standing of schemes submitted for grant-aid under the transitional arrangements in relation to descheduled areas. The Commission considers that because these areas lost their assisted area status 15 months ago, it is not appropriate to reassess in the context of the 1986 bid any projects submitted under the transitional arrangements which were not considered to be of sufficient priority to merit ERDF aid in 1985.

The final decision on ERDF assistance rests with the European Commission. The Webbers Yard will not therefore receive ERDF grant-aid. Officials are writing to all applicants affected by the decision.

Water Authorities (Land Disposal)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will discuss with the chairman of the Countryside Commission assistance to non-governmental organisations attempting to purchase land to be disposed of by water authorities following his circular requesting them to sell such land.

Mr. Waldegrave: Water authorities have already been given guidance on the need to bear in mind environmental considerations when considering the disposal of land. I am of course happy to receive representations from the chairman of the Countryside Commission or others on any particular problems.

Limited Companies

Mr. Dover asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department collects about the limited companies that have been set up by local authorities in England and Wales over the last 10 years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department does not collect information in any systematic way on limited companies set up by local authorities. If my hon. Friend cares to write to me about any particular concern, I will consider it carefully.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to provide that the rate support grant for 1986-87 will be paid to local authorities at the level corresponding to the estimated expenditure resolved upon by its members, rather than at the level corresponding to official returns to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Block grant payments are made from the beginning of each financial year on the basis of budgeted total expenditure certified by each authority's chief financial officer. Eventually they are adjusted in the light of outturn expenditure, certified by both the chief financial officer and the authority's auditor. My right hon. Friend has no immediate proposals to introduce legislation to change these arrangements.

Councillors (Surcharge or Disqualification)

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to remove any liability for surcharge or disqualification from a councillor who has attempted, but failed, to persuade his authority to conform with the balanced budget requirements of section 2 of the General Rate Act 1967; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am not persuaded that further legislation is needed. The existing procedures for repayment of moneys and disqualification, in sections 19 and 20 of the Local Government Finance Act 1982, are aimed only at those who are responsible for incurring or authorising unlawful expenditure or who are responsible for a loss or deficiency caused by their own wilful misconduct.

Victoria and Albert Museum

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement about the recent flood at the Victoria and Albert museum.

Sir George Young: On the night of 21-22 March a joint on a temporary water main at the Victoria and Albert museum failed, causing serious flooding of the basement area.

As I understand at the present, the leak was discovered by the museum's warding staff on a routine patrol at about 6.30 am on 22 March. The water main was immediately turned off by the warding staff, and flood water was pumped from the building with the assistance of the fire brigade. The PSA site control officer, and other engineering staff, were also called out and took immediate steps to ensure the safety of electrical supply services, and of heating and air conditioning plant in the building. Water supplies have now been restored and made safe.

As part of a planned programme of renewal and maintenance of the buildings at the museum, PSA's contractors are laying a new main drain to the east of the main museum building. To avoid possible damage to pipes by contractors' machinery, a new temporary water supply main has been laid to avoid these works. I understand that a connection was made from this temporary main to the museum's supply system at 4.15 pm on 21 March. This was the third connection of this kind to have been made during the course of these works. The new connection was monitored for two hours, and was working satisfactorily when the contractor left the site at about 6.15 pm.

I deeply regret the damage that has been caused to the Victoria and Albert's collection as a result of this unfortunate accident. The immediate concern must be to rescue and restore the damaged artefacts and if there is any way in which my Department can help, for example by providing accommodation, we shall do whatever we can. Meanwhile, in consultation with my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts, I have ordered a full independent investigation into the accident. I shall publish the report.

New Town Development Corporations

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider as part of the arrangements for the winding-up of new town development corporations the transfer of their housing stock to bodies other than local authorities.

Mr. Tracey: Yes. One of the Government's key objectives is to diversify the ownership and management of public sector housing stock and to give tenants more say in the running of their estates. The process of finding permanent landlords for the 60,000 rented dwellings still in new town ownership may well provide valuable opportunities to further that objective. When the time comes in each new town to consider transfer of the housing provided by the development corporation we would be prepared to consider any proposals for an alternative to a transfer scheme under part III of the New Towns Act 1981 put forward by a corporation which it believes would be in the best long term interests of its tenants and which in our view would further the objectives of diversification and better management. Clearly there are a number of important considerations we would wish to bear in mind in considering such proposals, including the protection of tenants' rights and the financial terms proposed for transfer. We shall also have regard to the views of the tenants themselves, the local authorities and other interested bodies including representatives of the staff who may be affected by transfer.

We are of course not excluding in any case consideration of the option of a transfer to a local authority under part III. We will take all the possibilities into account in each case.

Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England

Dr. John Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the arrangements at the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England for ensuring the public funds are properly accounted for and spent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1986, c. 678]: As I indicated in my answer on 27 February, I was seriously concerned about the recent reports of weaknesses in the marketing division of the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission, discovered by their internal audit team. The chairman and chief executive of the commission shared my concern.

My Department's responsibility is to ensure that the conditions attached to the commission's grant-in-aid conform to the terms of the Vote and that the controls applied by the commission conform with the requirements both of propriety and of good financial management. It was the commission's own financial monitoring which identified the weaknesses in marketing division spending procedures. Part of the Department's control process is that the commission should have an effective internal audit unit. It was this internal audit unit which provided a detailed report and recommendations which have been or are in the process of being implemented. The unit has conducted 12 audits in the commission; it found significant weaknesses only in the marketing division.

Accordingly, the commission's chief executive was able to send my Department an immediate interim report on the issues raised. My noble Friend the Minister of State has since discussed this with the commission's chairman. I am satisfied that the commission has taken steps to improve its procedures in relation to its marketing division, is strengthening those procedures further and is continuing to monitor the situation closely. My noble Friend has asked for a further report on the corrective action being taken. He is also asking the external auditors of the commission to work closely with them on the implications. My Department's own internal audit unit will itself follow up the effectiveness of the action being taken by the commission.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Interest Rate

Mr. Maxton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a table on movements in the average building society mortgage interest rate to home buyers from January 1970 to the present time.

Mr. Ian Stewart: There is no information available on the average building society mortgage interest rate to home buyers prior to 1984. Such information for 1984 and 1985 is shown in "Financial Statistics" table 13.12. However, data on the Building Societies Association's recommended and advised level of mortgage rates on new mortgages back to 1970 is available in "A Compendium of Building Society Statistics", published by the Building Societies Association.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the changes announced in the Budget in the value added tax treatment of charities and appliances for the disabled will apply to those people with foot abnormalities who have to buy two pairs of shoes in order to have two shoes which fit.

Mr. Brooke: No. The VAT reliefs for aids for the handicapped cover surgical footwear designed solely for the relief of severe abnormality or severe injury, but do not extend to ordinary shoes.

Tax Allowances (Farmers)

Mr. Chope asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the tax allowances available to farmers in the financial year 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: Tax allowances available to farmers comprise the normal range of personal and business allowances and deductions; and there are also special provisions which enable them in certain circumstances to obtain relief when their profits fluctuate from year to year. In addition, persons engaged in husbandry may claim relief under the system of agricultural buildings allowances for the capital costs of constructing agricultural buildings and works.

Income Tax

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the cost of reducing the standard rate of income tax to 25 per cent. and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will estimate the cost of raising personal tax allowances by 10 per cent., 20 per cent. and 30 per cent., respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Drugs

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the percentage of passengers at airports and seaports in the British Isles who are checked on a random basis for the possession of drugs;

(2) if he will review the level of customs and excise manpower available at airports and seaports to carry out drug searches and seizures in the British Isles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Taxation

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the comparison between the yield in real terms in 1978-79 and what he is now proposing for 1986-87 in (a) direct taxes including national insurance and (b) indirect taxes.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 307-8]: The figures are as follows:

£ billion

	1978-79	1986-87	1986-87 prices change*
(a) Direct taxes	55·5	68·4	+12·9
of which

(c) Total taxes, royalties and national insurance and other contributions	114·0	143·8	+29·8

* deflated using the GDP deflator.

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated yield from all sources of taxation including excise and other duties for 1986-87; what was the comparable yield for 1978-79 revalued at 1986-87 prices; and if he will publish a breakdown by categories of the real increase in taxes between 1978-79 and 1986-87 similar to that in his answer of 29 March 1985, Official Report, column 370.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 307-8]: The estimated total yield from all sources of taxation, including local authority rates and national insurance contributions, is £144 billion in 1986-87; the yield in 1978-79 revalued at 1986-87 prices using the GDP deflator is £114 billion. The other information requested is in the table.

District Valuers Office, Port Talbot

Mr. John Morris asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will reconsider the proposal to close the district valuers office at Port Talbot.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to the reply, 21 March 1986, c. 308]: No. The proposal to close the Port Talbot office is part of a rationalisation of the valuation office network throughout England and Wales in which it is planned to reduce the number of local offices from 160 to 119 over the next three years. The changes to be made follow a detailed assessment of the work to be undertaken in the future and take account of the need to provide an effective and efficient service.

Charities

Mr. Freud asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the implications of the changes announced in the Budget in respect of charities for private schools with charitable status.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: Charitable status is not affected by the Budget proposals on tax reliefs for charities, which will apply to all charities, including educational institutions that are charities.

THE ARTS

Acceptances in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Minister for the Arts whether Her Majesty's Government have accepted any items in lieu of tax in accordance with the arrangements announced by his predecessor on 26 July 1985.

Mr. Luce: I announced on 13 February, in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames), at column 502, that I proposed to increase the 1985-86 cash limit on class V, vote 10 by £520,000 with a resulting call on the reserve. The relevant Supplementary Estimate was approved by Parliament on 18 March. I am pleased to say that the enhanced total provision on vote 10 has allowed the acceptance of a very important archive of papers of the Dukes of Portland and Newcastle. The amount satisfied in lieu of tax remains confidential to the estate concerned.

NORTHERN IRELAND

School Meals

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision will be made for school lunches in the light of the South Eastern Education and Library Board's £400,000 budget cut in milk and meals for 1986-87.

Dr. Mawhinney: The board is still considering how its financial allocation for 1986-87 is to be spent and has not yet submitted its financial scheme to the Department of Education for Northern Ireland. It is intended, however, that school meals will continue to be available and that existing arrangements to provide school meals free of charge to those eligible to receive them will not be affected.

IRA (Funding)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has about sources of funding to the Irish Republican Army.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. member to the answer I gave to a question by him on 30 January 1986 at column 596.

Republic of Ireland (Tricolour)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to be in a position to announce a decision on proposals to facilitate the flying of the tricolour of the Republic of Ireland (a) within Northern Ireland generally and (b) on public and Government buildings in Northern Ireland, specifically.

Mr. Scott: No such proposals are under consideration. The question of the Flags and Emblems (Display) Act (NI) 1954 will, along with other public order issues, be addressed later this year in the light of forthcoming changes in Great Britain public order law. The effect of the Act is to give a privileged status to displays of the union flag: it does not prohibit the flying of the tricolour in peaceful circumstances.

Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Dr. Boyson: The average time taken to pay suppliers of goods and services from the receipt of the invoice ranges from 48 hours to six weeks as the time taken to validate the invoice varies according to the goods and services supplied.

Gosford Castle Hotel

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants were given to assist the operation of a hotel in Gosford Castle, Markethill; if Gosford Castle hotel is still operational; and whether arrangements will be made to require repayment of these grants in circumstances of the closure of this hotel.

Dr. Boyson: No grants were given to assist the operation of a hotel in Gosford Castle, Markethill. I understand the hotel ceased to operate in May 1985.

Armagh Prison

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the closing of Her Majesty's prison Armagh, the transfer of prisoners from there, and the future of the premises.

Mr. Scott: The 31 women inmates from Her Majesty's prison, Armagh, were transferred to the new women's prison at Maghaberry on 18 March. This has accommodation and facilities of a very high standard and replaces Armagh which has been closed. The de-commissioning of the premises at Armagh is now under way. The final disposal of the property has not yet been determined.

Secretary of State (Irish Club Speech)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library the text of his St. Patrick's night speech at the Irish Club.

Mr. Tom King: The speech I gave on 17 March was drawn from notes and is not therefore available. However, I did release a section to the press and the press notice was placed in the Library.

Community and Voluntary Groups (Belfast)

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will make a statement outlining his assessment of the situation facing community and voluntary groups who are normally dependent on grant aid received through Belfast city council, detailing the number of jobs and the type of projects which are now at risk;

(2) if he will consider giving direct grant aid under the Community Relations (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1975 to those community and voluntary organisations whose funding through local authorities is presently under threat;

(3) what consideration has been given to giving direct grants for the new financial year to those community and voluntary organisations who normally receive grant aid through Belfast city council and deducting the amount paid in such grants from any funds which might be forwarded to Belfast city council.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government consider it regrettable that the actions taken by Belfast city council have created serious problems for community and voluntary groups. I understand that 37 full-time and 10 part-time jobs are directly affected. Projects and services involved include community associations, community resource centres, citizens' advice bureaux, and play organisations, serving a wide range of client groups in local communities.

I am anxious that support from local councils for such organisations should continue beyond 31 March 1986. The funding of these groups remains, however, a matter for the local councils.

Wines, Spirits, Beer and Tobacco

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many workers were employed in the wines and spirits industry in Northern Ireland in June 1979, and how many at the latest available date.

Dr. Boyson [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1986, c. 438-9]: The number of employees in the wines and spirits industry is as follows:

June 1979: 183
December 1985: 161

These figures relate to producers with more than 25 employees. It is not possible to identify employees involved in the distribution of these goods.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many workers were employed in the brewing industry in Northern Ireland in June 1979; and how many at the latest available date.

Dr. Boyson [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1986, c. 438-9]: The number of employees in the brewing industry is as follows:

June 1979: 547
December 1985: 501

These figures relate to producers with more than 25 employees. It is not possible to identify employees involved in the distribution of these goods.

Divis Flats

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the total numbers of (a) families, (b) single parent families, (c) single households and (d) people of pensionable age or over living in the Divis flats at present; and what were the respective annual totals in each category from 1968 for the years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The information is as follows:

(a) 251 families
(b) 108 single parent families
(c) 133 single households
(d) 158 heads of households of pensionable age or over

These figures are based on a 71 per cent. response to a 1980 survey by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive of the 700 households in the 12 deck access blocks in Divis. Figures for other years since 1968 are not available.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's estimates for the Divis flats of (a) the total cost of refurbishing the whole complex, (b) the total cost of the combination of refurbishment and demolition currently proposed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and (c) the average cost per dwelling, including loan and interest charges, for refurbishment, given a 30-year estimated life span.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: (a) £5 million (estimated) excluding Pound and St. Brendans due for demolition, (b) Milford block pilot refurbishment £800,000 (estimated). Demolition of Pound and St. Brendans—up to date figure not yet available, (c) £11,000-£12,000 (estimated) per dwelling.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents in the Divis flats have been subject to action under the Payments for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) in each year from 1968 to the present.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: During the 12 months up to 21 March 1986, 195 residents were subject to action under the Act. Figures for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the current levels of arrears and the number of tenants in arrears in payments for (a) rents, (b) rates and (c) heating by type in the Divis complex and the annual averages from 1968 for the years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The available information is as follows:

(a) and (b) Current rent and rates arrears £127,502—327 debtors.

(c) Current district heating arrears £140,463—145 debtors.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers of (a) illegal tenancies and (b) tenancies for which the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has issued use and occupation books in the Divis complex at the present time; and what are the annual averages of each from 1968 for the years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The available information is as follows:

(a) There were 19 illegal occupants at 21 March 1986.

(b) Nineteen.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the figures for the number of dwellings in the Divis complex (a) occupied, (b) under-occupied, (c) overcrowded and (d) vacant at the present time; and what was the annual average in each category from 1968 for the years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The available information is as follows:

(a) 562

(b) 61

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the average annual costs from 1968 for the years for which figures are available of (a) repairs, *(b)*maintenance and (c) services for the Divis flats, each according to (i) total, (ii) emergency work, (iii) normal work, A list and (iv) planned work, B list.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents of the Divis flats have received (a) certificated housing benefit, (b) housing benefit supplement and (c) standard housing benefit since November 1983; and what are the total amounts in each category paid to Divis residents since the introduction of housing benefit.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The available information is as follows:

(a) 415 residents are in receipt of certificated housing benefit.

(b) 36 residents of Divis are in receipt of housing benefit supplement.

(c) 135 residents are in receipt of standard housing benefit.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's estimates of (a) total costs and (b) the breakdown of costs for (i) the total demolition of the Divis flats, (ii) the demolition of the two blocks currently under consideration and (iii) the building of two storey houses to replace the existing flats, including any land, consultant and other significant costs.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: (a) The Northern Ireland Housing Executive does not consider total demolition of all the deck access blocks at Divis an appropriate solution — no costs for total demolition or replacement housing are available.

(b) Up-to-date figures for the demolition of Pound and St. Brendans are not available.

New Dwellings

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are (a) the average costs by type, including architect and other fees, of building new dwellings in Belfast and (b) the estimated costs by type, including building costs, fees, interest, maintenance and management charges over a 60-year period of new dwellings in Belfast.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: (a) Based on tenders received during 1985, the average cost of new houses, including fees, were as follows:

Size	2 person	3 person	4 person	5 person	6 person	7 person	8 person
House	14,128	17,683	17,103	18,759	20,080	32,644	34,878
External works	2,729	2,729	2,729	2,729	2,729	2,729	2,729
Site development works	2,982	2,982	2,982	2,982	2,982	2,982	2,982
	19,839	23,394	22,814	24,470	25,791	38,355	40,589
Fees	1,786	2,105	2,053	2,202	2,321	3,452	3,653
	£21,625	25,499	24,867	26,672	28,112	41,807	44,242

(b) The information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unfit Dwellings

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many statutorily unfit dwellings there are in (a) the catchment area for Divis residents and (b) west Belfast as a whole.

Mr. Needham [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: Information in the form requested is not readily available. However, the 1984 house condition survey established that 7 per cent. (or 1,262 dwellings) of dwellings in west Belfast were unfit for human habitation.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations were received from the Government of the Republic of Ireland during the course of negotiations on the Anglo-Irish agreement as to the role to be played in such negotiations by the representatives of the Unionist population.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The negotiations leading up to the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement were between the United Kingdom and Irish Governments and it was understood that no political parties would participate.

WALES

Derelict Land

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what total acreage of reclaimed derelict land in Wales in 1975 and 1985 is attributable to coal mining activities.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Land reclamation schemes often involve works in more than one year. The following information is therefore provided on the basis of schemes approved to start in the years in question.

In 1975 the Welsh Office approved schemes to reclaim 1,020 acres of derelict land attributable to coal mining activities. In 1985 the Welsh Development Agency approved schemes for the reclamation of 260 acres of derelict land attributable to coal mining activities.

The decline in the reclamation of coal mining related land between 1975 and 1985 reflected the very considerable reclamation programme of colliery and tip complexes which had already been undertaken.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total acreage of derelict land in Wales in 1975 and 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I refer the hon. Lady to my answer of 6 February 1986 at column 245.

Reclaimed Land

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what acreage of land was reclaimed in Wales in 1975 and 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Land reclamation schemes often involve works in more than one year. The following information is therefore provided on the basis of schemes approved to start in the years in question.

In 1975 the Welsh Office approved schemes to reclaim 1,322 acres of derelict land. In 1985 the Welsh Development Agency approved schemes for the reclamation of 662 acres of derelict land.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent by (a) the Welsh Development Agency, (b) local authorities and (c) other public bodies in Wales on land reclamation in 1974-75 and 1984-85; and how much is planned for 1986-87.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In 1974-75 the Welsh Office provided 85 per cent. grant aid to local authorities for approved expenditure on land reclamation. In that year the Welsh Office provided grant aid of £2 million for land reclamation work undertaken by local authorities costing £2·35 million.

The Welsh Development Agency now gives 100 per cent. grant aid to local authorities for approved expenditure on land reclamation. In 1984-85 the agency provided grant aid of £9·8 million for local authority land reclamation schemes.

The agency plans to spend £12 million on land reclamation in 1986-87. We have no record of expenditure on land reclamation by other public bodies.

Electorate Statistics

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the Welsh counties in order of percentage growth in electorate since 1980; and which has been the percentage growth and actual figures in each case.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is given in the following table:

Growth in local government electorate by county, since 1980

	Electorate		Change 1980 to 1986
	1980	1986	Number	Per cent.
Powys	83,000	88,779	5,779	7·0
Clwyd	292,339	309,389	17,050	5·8
Gwynedd	174,122	182,689	8,565	4·9
Dyfed	252,946	261,985	9,039	3·6
Gwent	325,431	335,489	10,058	3·1
West Glamorgan	281,099	286,508	5,409	1·9
Mid Glamorgan	401,495	404,975	3,480	0·9
South Glamorgan	288,149	289,573	1,424	0·5

GCSE

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received on the matter of introducing the curriculum for the general certificate of secondary education in September; and how many such representations requested postponement for a year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Thirty-two, up to and including 18 March 1986, all requesting postponement.

Beef

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the effect of the European farm prices package on beef production in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have received a number of representations about the Commission's price proposals as they affect the beef sector and particularly about the proposed changes in beef support arrangements. We shall seek to ensure that any revised arrangements do not discriminate against beef producers in the United Kingdom and will continue to stress the benefit that the beef variable premium scheme gives to producers and consumers.

Hospital Beds

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of new beds provided in each of the health authorities in Wales since May 1979 and the number of approved closures in each authority between May 1979 and the present time.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Since May 1979, 395 new beds have been provided in Clwyd health authority, 529 in Gwynedd health authority and 497 in Mid Glamorgan health authority. These are mainly as a result of the commissioning of new district general hospitals in Rhyl, Bangor and Bridgend.

The number of approved hospital closures in each authority is given in the table, together with changes in the bed complement.

Health authority	Number of Approved hospital closures since 1979	Overall change in bed complement since 1979
Clwyd	3	- 152
Gwynedd	4	+ 60
Powys	1	- 230
East Dyfed	1	- 325
Pembrokeshire	—	nil
West Glamorgan	—	- 82
Mid Glamorgan	6	- 359
South Glamorgan	—	- 197
Gwent	1	- 356

Most of these reductions are in mental illness and mental handicap beds, largely due to my right hon. Friend's policy that more patients should be cared for in the community.

Singleton Casualty Unit

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department had any objection to the Swansea and Iliw Valley community health council having a copy of the Welsh Office letter to the West Glamorgan health authority authorising the reopening of the Singleton casualty unit; and if he will investigate why the health authority only gave the press a version of the letter which excluded reference to the desirability of a 24-hour service.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A copy of the letter was sent to the Community Health Council by the Department and the text was available to the media. Statements by the authority are a matter for it.

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales what scope there is for appointment of hospital doctors to man the Singleton casualty unit within the current establishment of the West Glamorgan health authority; what consultation has taken place or is planned between his Department and the health authority about establishing a 24-hour service; and what constraints have been identified.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Subject to the standard arrangements whereby certain new posts require the approval of our Department, the levels and deployment of staff are operational matters for the health authority. The authority was asked to keep the opening hours of the unit under review and to continue to consult the Community Health Council.

Cash Limits

Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make any changes to his Department's cash limits in the current year.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Yes. The cash limit on class XVI, vote 1, is being reduced by £14,790,000 from £186,459,000 to £171,669,000. This reduction reflects the fact that spending on the trunk road programme has fallen below the available provision, mainly on account of a lower rate of spend than forecast on schemes under construction.

Also, the cash limit on class XVI, vote 5, is being reduced by £7,227,000 from £46,610,000 to £39,383,000. This reduction largely relates to provision for the Welsh Development Agency and reflects the agency's success in achieving higher than estimated income, which has allowed it to carry out its programmes at a lower net cost to the Government.

Finally, the cash limit on class XVI, vote 7, is being reduced by £500,000 from £33,031,000 to £32,531,000. This reduction reflects mainly the slippage of expenditure in respect of the purchase of a main frame computer.

These savings are being used to offset most of the increased expenditure arising from spring supplementary increases in class XVI, votes 2, 3 and 8.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Horses and Mares

Mr. Latham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association proposing that horses and mares should be officially classified as agricultural animals; and what response he has made.

Mrs. Fenner: I have received a number of representations from the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association. In reply I have pointed out that under present legislation horses and mares used in the farming of the land are recognised as agricultural animals while those kept for breeding or riding are not.

North-east Drift Net Fishery

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will now ask all those who supplied him with commercially confidential information during his inquiry into the effect of the north-east drift net fishery whether they have any objection to its publication;

(2) where, and in what form, the statistics used in his inquiry into the effect on salmon stocks of the north-east drift net fishery have already been published, where these are not commerically confidential.

Mr. Gummer: The basic statistical information used in the internal report is catch data which has appeared in tabular form in a number of publications, in particular the booklet "Taking Stock" published in 1974 by the Association of River Authorities—a copy of which is being placed in the Library of the House—the annual reports published by the Northumbrian and Yorkshire water authorities, the booklet "Scottish Salmon Catch Statistics 1952-1981," produced by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, and subsequent statistical reports produced by the same Department, all of which are available in the Library of the House.

The internal report also drew on statistical data appearing in "Fisheries Research Technical Report No. 67", published by my Department in 1982, on the effects of the English north-east salmon fisheries on Scottish salmon catches. A copy of this report has already been placed in the Library of the House.

Other information appearing in the report was provided on the clear understanding that it would remain confidential. Moreover, the report involves internal advice to Ministers of a kind which it is not the normal practice to publish.

Farmers (Springfields)

Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list in the Official Report amounts of compensation paid to local farmers by British Nuclear Fuels Limited, Springfields in respect of sickness to their cattle.

Mrs. Fenner: I understand from British Nuclear Fuels plc that no such payments have been made.

Seabirds (South Shields)

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) why his wildlife incident unit, having collected on 10 March seabirds found dead for no apparent reason on the seashore at South Shields, informed the hon. Member for South Shields on 12 March that autopsies were not possible on account of the delay since their collection;

(2) why his wildlife incident unit, having collected seabirds, which were found dead for no apparent reason, on the seashore of South Shields, refused to perform autopsies;

(3) why the seabirds found dead for no apparent reason on 8 March on the shore at South Shields and collected by his Department's wildlife incident unit on 10 March, were not autopsied at the Lasswade laboratories.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Wildlife Incident Unit

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what instructions he has issued to his wildlife incident unit changing its remit, since this was announced by his hon. Friend the Member for Medway (Mrs. Fenner) during the passage of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Refugees

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he gives to refugees from the Horn of Africa to undergo training and then return to their home country.

Mr. Raison: We provide funds for the work of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, which includes training refugees from this area, and we are continuing to give support to the World University Service for training Ethiopian refugees. In general we are finding increasingly that refugees are not allowed to return to their home countries after training.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the current level of support through the World University Service for the scholarship programme for Ethiopian refugees; what this will be in 1986-87; and what proposals he has for future funding.

Mr. Raison: In the present financial year our level of support is £375,000. In 1986-87 we expect to give £280,000. The World University Service is aware that I have not yet decided on later allocations but that our planning figure for 1987-88 is £135,000 and that I expect our support to cease in or about 1988-89.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will consider a shared funding scholarship scheme for refugees in which his Department would match support with that provided by educational institutions and voluntary agencies.

Mr. Raison: I do not think that support for a general shared funding scholarship scheme for refugees would be the best use of aid funds. If we decided on the merits of a particular case to assist the training of a group of refugees, we would be ready to consider sharing the cost with others.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what priority his Department gives to refugees within his policy for overseas students.

Mr. Raison: Support for refugee students is considered on a case by case basis and the priority accorded to any particular group depends on the extent to which they are likely to assist the economic and social development of overseas countries. An important factor is the likelihood of their early return home or to a neighbouring developing country.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department gives to refugees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: In the financial year 1985-86 the ODA expects to spend £35 million on refugee assistance—an increase of £13 million over the previous year. Of this total, £20 million has been allocated to relief programmes in Africa.

Most of this assistance is being channelled through international organisations; about half is through the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

The Government will continue to ensure that Britain plays its full part in assisting refugees.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the level of funding in constant terms for scholarship schemes for refugees for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Raison: Figures are as follows adjusted to the prices of the first year shown:

	£000
A. Through World University Services (calendar year)
1976	1,086
1977	2,126
1978	1,381

Ethiopia

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what long-term assistance he proposes for Ethiopia.

Mr. Raison: Our technical co-operation and training programme, which is expected to cost about £1 million a year, will bring long-term benefit, especially through health education and English language training. Ethiopia is the largest recipient of aid from the European development fund, with 230 million ecu (about £154 million) available for commitment between 1986 and 1990. Of this, the British share will be some £26 million.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to Ethiopian needs for vehicles and spare parts for the purposes of famine relief; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: The United Nations co-ordinator in Addis Ababa has estimated that an additional 556 vehicles, to a value of $20 million, and spare parts to a value of $30·5 million are required for the distribution of relief supplies in Ethiopia.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the availability of medical supplies and equipment in Ethiopia and the Sudan.

Mr. Raison: We do not have reliable information on the supplies available. However, the United Nations office for emergency operations in Africa estimates the cost of relief requirements for the health sector in 1986 at $17·45 million for Ethiopia and $14·43 million for Sudan.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what amounts of supplementary foods have been pledged to Ethiopia for 1986 to date; what has actually arrived; and what is the estimated net supplementary food need.

Mr. Raison: The World Food Programme reported on 18 March the following figures for food aid for Ethiopia in 1986 (in metric tonnes):

	Skimmed Milk Powder	Edible Oil	Other supplementary foods
Pledges	18,474	21,680	5,124
Deliveries	4,068	9,439	766

The figures for the estimated net supplementary food needs for Ethiopia in 1986 were included in my reply to the hon. Member on 17 February at column 23.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about air transport facilities currently provided by donor countries to Ethiopia for the purposes of famine relief; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: The United Nations office for emergency operations in Africa reported on 1 February that German Luftwaffe and Red Cross aircraft were assisting famine relief operations in northern Ethiopia. I understand that Polish army helicopters are also helping with famine relief.

South Africa

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for increasing support for multi-racial educational and training programmes within South Africa.

Mr. Raison: I am considering how we can increase our support for such programmes and my chief education adviser will visit South Africa next month to advise on this.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support he gives through voluntary agencies for educational and training programmes for refugees from South Africa.

Mr. Raison: Our support for education and training for South African refugees is channeled not through voluntary agencies but through the United Nations educational training programme for Southern Africa (£50,000 this financial year) and the Commonwealth fund for technical co-operation (£60,000).

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans for increasing educational provision for refugees from South Africa.

Mr. Raison: We are in discussion with the Commonwealth secretariat on the scope of a new Commonwealth training scheme, which might include some awards for refugee students.

Africa (Conservation)

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration he has given to the European Commission document "Conservation of Natural Resources and Countering Desertification in Africa", COM 86/16; and what policy he intends to adopt towards each of the recommendations contained in the document's summary and conclusions at the Council of Ministers meeting on 17 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: My views were set out in an explanatory memorandum sent to the Select Committee on European Legislation on 5 March. I broadly endorse the conclusions of the Commission document. The precise way in which they will affect the implementation of the aid programmes of the Community and its member states will need to be worked out in discussions with Governments of the affected countries.

SOCIAL SERVICES

General Medical Council

12. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he next plans to meet the chairman of the General Medical Council.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have no such present plans.

Severe Weather Payments

13. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has made any estimate of the numbers of households likely to be eligible for exceptionally severe weather payments following the cold February weather; and if he will estimate the likely total cost of the payments.

Mr. Major: It is not possible to make a reliable estimate at this stage. Information about numbers and costs will be collected when the period during which payments are likely to arise is over.

25. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the estimate of the total expenditure on exceptionally severe weather payments in the winters of 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Newton: The cost of single payments for extra fuel used during exceptionally severe weather was approximately £1·7 million in 1984-85. Information on payments made for this winter is not yet available. When the period during which payments are likely to arise is over, local offices will be asked to make a return so that the total number of payments made and the cost can be calculated.

31. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate the total amount of benefit paid out as exceptionally severe weather allowance during the last few months.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 24 February at column 470.

44. Mr. Marland asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the outcome of his review of the operation in the current year of exceptionally severe weather payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Coventry, North-East (Mr. Park) on 24 March.

Embryo Experimentation

14. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he now plans to introduce legislation on embryo experimentation.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Government are aware of the strongly held views of many hon. Members about this issue. As my predecessor and I have indicated to the House, the Government intend to introduce legislation on this and other matters dealt with in the Warnock report on human fertilisation and embryology as soon as practicable.

Anti-Heroin Campaign

15. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's contribution to Her Majesty's Government's media anti-heroin campaign.

Mr. Whitney: Our campaign of education and information on the misuse of heroin is being independently evaluated. So far, the evaluation has indicated that the campaign for young people has been widely noticed and has conveyed factual information about the effects of heroin misuse. There are also indications that it may have had a favourable impact on young people's attitudes to heroin. The campaign for parents was less widely noticed.

Ambulance Services

16. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received regarding reductions in the provision of ambulance services.

Mr. Whitney: As I advised the hon. Member in my answer of 25 February at column 522 the Department has received a number of representations about various aspects of the ambulance service. Some of those have been concerned with the effects of local reorganisation. Others have been concerned with the application of the correct criteria of transport by the ambulance service, which is that it should be provided only when the patient has medical need for it.

Residential Homes

17. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to seek to change the requirements for registering residential homes for the elderly and nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: As I said in my reply of 28 January at col. 487, improved arrangements for registering and inspecting residential care and nursing homes came into force as recently as 1 January 1985. It is far too soon to assess what, if any, changes are needed. When the Department's social services inspectorate has completed its two-year study of the effects of the new arrangements, we shall be better able to judge the position.

Dental Treatment

18. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will institute a review into the extent to which dental treatment is dictated by the assessment of the patient's ability to pay rather than by the dentist's clinical judgment.

Mr. Hayhoe: No.

Nurses (Residential Accommodation)

19. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will consider compensating nurses who have been required to leave their nurses' homes as a result of Her Majesty's Government's policy of disposing of National Health Service property.

Mr. Hayhoe: Nurses who live in NHS accommodation do so at the discretion of the health authority concerned.

There can be no question of compensating any staff who are no longer to be offered accommodation, though some will have the opportunity to buy their home at discounts of between 32 and 60 per cent. off the current value, assuming vacant possession.

Under-fives (Leyton)

20. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many children under five years old there are in Leyton; and how many nursery places there are.

Mr. Whitney: The number of children under five for the parliamentary constituency of Leyton in 1981 is estimated as 5,600. Data on nursery places are held centrally by social service authority. In the London borough of Waltham Forest, which includes Leyton, there were 450 day nursery places at 31 March 1985, equivalent to 30 places per thousand children under five.

Disabled People (Liverpool)

21. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many registered disabled people there are in Liverpool.

Mr. Newton: The latest figures available centrally indicate that there are 23,153 disabled persons registered with the city of Liverpool social services department, excluding those whose sole disability is a mental disorder.

District Health Authorities

22. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many chairmen of district health authorities have not been re-appointed from 31 March; and what criteria were used in deciding not to re-appoint an incumbent chairman.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 17 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory).

Social Workers

23. Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has issued guidance to local authorities on the questions arising from violence against social workers by their clients.

Mr. Whitney: We have not issued general guidance to local authorities on this subject but in 1981 we sent them copies of the report of the working party on control and discipline in community homes which included consideration of violence in that type of home and how it might be avoided. It is for employing authorities to assess the level of risk to their staff and to take the necessary action. The nature of a social worker's job is such that risks of this kind are inherent especially when it brings him or her into contact with emotionally disturbed or mentally disordered clients.

Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee

24. Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now take steps to implement the pharmaceutical services negotiating committee contract.

Mr. Hayhoe: Legislation which would allow the introduction, in full, of the new contract agreed between the Government and the representatives of community pharmacists is being introduced today.

War Pensioners

26. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the present number of war pensioners; and if he has any plans to increase the disregard from the current level of £4.

Mr. Major: It is estimated that 206,400 war disablement pensions, 61,350 war widows pensions and 5,290 other war pensions were being paid in the United Kingdom at the end of December 1985. We have no current plans to increase the supplementary benefit disregard of £4 week.

Board and Lodging Payments

27. Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on work his Department has carried out or had commissioned on board and lodging payments for people in residential care and nursing homes since April 1985.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 17 March at columns 63-64.

60. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what progress has been made in his review of the operation of the board and lodging regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We are currently carrying out the review of the financial limits for all types of supplementary benefit board and lodging allowances and, as I indicated to my hon. Friend in my reply to him on 28 January at column 782, it is our aim to reach conclusions in time for any changes to be made with the July uprating.

Infertility

28. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money his Department has spent in each of the last three years as a contribution towards research into the causes of infertility amongst couples.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has not sponsored any research in this field in the last three years. The Medical Research Council is supporting research at a number of its centres, from its grant-in-aid under the science budget of the Department of Education and Science.

Welfare Food Scheme

29. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were affected by the change in the operation of the welfare food scheme announced in Health Notice (85) 36 of January 1986.

Mr. Whitney: The notice which made no substantive change to the welfare food scheme, relates to some 130,000 children under the age of one.

Retired People (Sheffield)

30. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage change in the number of people in Sheffield over the age of retirement in the last 20 years.

Mr. Major: The information available is given in the table. Comparable figures for 1964 and for the percentage change between 1964 and 1984 are not available.

Metropolitan District of Sheffield

Mid-year	*Resident population over retirement age
Estimated number
1961	81,000
1981	109,500
1984	108,000
Percentage change
1961-81	35
1961-84	33

* Age 65 for males and 60 for females.

36. Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people there were in Sheffield over the age of retirement in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Major: The information available is given in the table. Figures for 1985 will be published in June in Table 2 of OPCS Monitor PP1 86/2.

Metropolitan District of Sheffield

*Estimated resident population over retirement age
Mid-year	Number
1979	106,500
1984	108,000

* Age 65 for males and age 60 for females.

Hypothermia

32. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many reported cases of hypothermia there were among the elderly people in the Greater London area in the recent exceptionally cold spell since 1 February; if he will have consultations with the relevant authorities to seek to counteract such cases in future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Information on the incidence of morbidity due to hypothermia is not available centrally. The provisional figure for the number of deaths with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate registered in the Greater London area for persons aged 65 and over for the period 1-21 February inclusive is 15.

We have taken steps to see that elderly people and those caring for them get advice on how to minimise the effects of cold. A comprehensive pack of training materials and information on this subject for those in contact with elderly people is being developed by the Health Education Council. In the meantime, "Warmth in Winter", a leaflet published by the council, contains simple, practical advice for elderly people on keeping warm. A number of health and local authorities and voluntary organisations have produced similar material. We have also made arrangements to publicise the availability of supplementary benefit single payments for extra fuel used during periods of exceptionally severe weather.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give provisional figures to show the number of deaths in February 1986 with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate in (a) England and (b) Wales.

Mr. Whitney: The provisional numbers of deaths registered in (a) England and (b) Wales during February 1986 with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it did or did not appear as the underlying cause of death, are 161 and 13 respectively.

Informal Carers

33. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he plans to issue guidance to local authorities on support for informal carers.

Mr. Whitney: We shall draw on experience gained from the relevant elements of the helping the community to care programme in deciding how best to develop our policies on support for informal carers. While a circular of guidance for local authorities will be among the methods of making use of that experience we shall wish to consider it is not possible to determine this at present.

Elderly People (Hammersmith and Fulham)

34. Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the manner in which Hammersmith and Fulham council is discharging its statutory duties to provide residential care places for the elderly.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that an issue related to the provision of residential care for elderly people by Hammersmith and Fulham council is shortly to come before the High Court. In the light of that, it would be inappropriate for me to comment further on the matter.

Prescriptions

35. Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the latest statistics for the percentage of prescriptions which are supplied free of charge.

Mr. Hayhoe: In the period January to August 1985 (the latest period for which figures are available) 212·4 million NHS prescription items were issued of which 74·4 per cent. were supplied free of charge. A further 5·4 per cent. of items were issued without charge to holders of prescription pre-payment certificates.

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received following his statement on prescription charges.

39. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representation he has received opposing further increases in prescription charges.

Mr. Hayhoe: Since my statement to the House on 10 March about 30 letters concerning the scope and level of prescription charges have been received.

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of claims for exemption from prescription charges have been found to be false over the last period for which figures are available.

Mr. Hayhoe: In October 1984 (the latest date for which figures are available) 11·5 million prescription forms had signed declarations that the patient was exempt from National Health Service prescription charges. A sample check of these declarations showed that an estimated 0·9 per cent. were incorrect.

Private Nursing Homes

37. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the maximum moneys available from his Department per week to assist elderly residents in private nursing homes.

Mr. Newton: The maximum amounts of supplementary benefit payable to people in private nursing homes are laid down in schedule 1 to the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Miscellaneous Provisions (No. 2) Regulation 1985 (SI 1985 No 1835).

Sunderland (Informal Carers)

38. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the number of informal carers in Sunderland.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has made no estimate of the number of people involved in providing such care.

Self-propelled Wheelchairs

40. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet reached a conclusion on that section of the McColl report which deals with self-propelled wheelchairs for the chronically disabled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We do not expect to reach conclusions on any part of the report before the completion of current consultations with a wide range of interests and initial work being carried out under the direction of the National Health Service Management Board. As an interim measure, and to ensure that this work is taken forward without delay, we have appointed a new general manager of disablement services who is accountable to the board for the operation of the artificial limb and wheelchair services, for collating responses to consultation, and for the detailed and urgent examination of issues raised by the report.

Housing Benefit

41. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received on the new method of assessment of housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: Over 2,000 submissions were received on the housing benefit proposals contained in the Green Paper "Reform of Social Security" (Cmnd. 9517). A number of further representations have been made following publication of the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691) and the Social Security Bill.

57. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much he expects to save as a result of his planned changes to students' entitlement to housing benefit.

Mr. Newton: Of the proposals for change referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations on 7 January which would reduce students' entitlement to benefits, those relating to housing benefit account for about 90 per cent. of the gross savings of some £40 million-£45 million. However the savings will be partly offset by the cost of compensatory changes amounting to approximately £20 million-£25 million, of which about half will be distributed through the housing benefits scheme through new income disregards.

Supplementary Benefit

42. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the numbers of people in receipt of supplementary benefit who are of working age, are not disabled and are not actively seeking work.

Mr. Major: This information is not collected by the Department.

58. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what consequences he anticipates from the abolition in the current year of a number of single payments to supplementary benefit claimants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) on 24 February 1986 at columns 476-78; we estimate that the proposals to amend the single payments regulations, currently being consdered by the Social Security Advisory Committee, would bring back expenditure to about the 1984 level.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many households in the London borough of Newham receive supplementary benefit; what were the numbers in each of the last six years; and what percentage of the total number of such households the latest figure represents.

Mr. Major: The London borough of Newham is covered by three of the Departments offices, Canning Town, Plaistow and Woodgrange park, but their boundaries are not conterminous.

Information about the number of households receiving supplementary benefit is not available. The following figures show the total number of people claiming supplementary benefit from those offices at 11 February 1986 and at comparable dates for the last six years. There will in some circumstances be more than one claimant in a household.

Years	Numbers
1980	17,113
1981	19,643
1982	23,853
1983	26,788
1984	28,127
1985	30,552
1986	31,897

This Department has no information on the total number of households in Newham.

Ambulance Service (Pay)

43. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on plans for a new national salaries structure for ambulancemen.

Mr. Whitney: A salaried structure for ambulancemen was introduced on 1 March 1986 following agreement reached in the Ambulance Whitley council.

Family Practitioner Services

45. Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to publish his consultation paper on family practitioner services.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Government expect to publish the consultative document on primary health care shortly.

Wrightington Hospital (Children's Ward)

46. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the consultation procedures being adopted prior to the revised submission to him in connection with the proposed closure of the children's ward at Wrightington hospital.

Mr. Whitney: I am confident that the North-Western regional health authority has ensured full consultations, in accordance with established procedures.

Hospital for Tropical Diseases

47. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received representations seeking to secure future provision for clinical tropical medicine and diagnostic parasitology at the Hospital for Tropical Diseases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Several representations have been received. Bloomsbury health authority is responsible for the management of the Hospital for Tropical Diseases. The authority has no plans to close the hospital but is considering possible relocation of the hospital within the district. The authority is at present undertaking a review of the range, scope and location of the services it must provide to best meet the future needs of patients and medical teaching and research and development. Any formal strategic proposals suggesting major changes to the Hospital for Tropical Diseases arising from this exercise would be subject to full public consultation under standard National Health Service procedures.

My hon. Friend may care to contact the health authority chairman direct for any further information.

Junior Doctors

48. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the average hours worked per week by junior doctors in the National Health Service for the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, and 1985.

Mr. Hayhoe: The following table shows the average hours of duty of junior doctors. Information is not routinely collected on the number of hours actually worked, but an independent survey commissioned by the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration indicated a weekly average, in 1981, of 55·3. A further survey has been commissioned, but the results are not yet available.

Permanent paid whole-time junior hospital doctors: average weekly contracted hours, at 30 September (England and Wales)

	Hours
1980	90·7
1981	90·1
1982	89·6
1983	88·6
1984	87·3
1985	86·5

Medical Education

49. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to increase the patient care content of medical education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Under the Medical Act 1983, the promotion, co-ordination and oversight of medical education are functions of the General Medical Council in which I have no power to intervene.

Social Security Bill

50. Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has had any recent discussions with the National Association of Pension Funds with regard to the Social Security Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Ministers have not met the National Association of Pension Funds since publication of the Bill, but it keeps us fully informed of its views about the Bill in correspondence and through its contacts with the Department's officials. We shall continue to give careful consideration to all points put to us by the association.

Cadaver Organs

52. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received in support of proposals to oblige doctors to seek permission to remove kidneys and other organs from patients whenever a life support machine is switched off; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: My right hon. Friend has received two letters from members of the public supporting this proposal, and three hon. Members have forwarded similar letters from their constituents. I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Eccles (Mr. Carter-Jones) on 4 March at columns 123-24.

NHS (Griffiths Report)

53. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will report further progress on the implementation of the Griffiths proposals on the management of the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: Implementation is progressing well. All regional and district general manager appointments have been made; and more than four fifths of the 600-plus unit general manager posts have already been filled.

Budget

54. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about the effect of the Budget on his Department's functions.

Mr. Whitney: None so far.

Mental Care (Finance Schemes)

55. Mr. Meadowdcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received on the operation of joint health and social services finance schemes for the case of the mentally handicapped and mentally ill in the community.

Mr. Whitney: Since the publication in November 1985 of the Government response to the report of the Social Services Committee on community care, representations from some 25 bodies, for the most part local branches of MENCAP, have been received about the funding of community care. Representations have also been made by the local authority associations and the National Association of Health Authorities. In addition the North-West Association of Social Services Authorities has written to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State seeking a meeting about funding of community care.

Childbirth

56. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards choice for women in methods of childbirth.

Mr. Whitney: In general mothers should be able to give birth to their baby in whatever way they choose, so long as it is compatible with safety. Health authorities must decide in the light of staff and resources available, what special facilities can and should be provided to meet mothers' preferences for care during childbirth. The Maternity Services Advisory Committee offered advice on aspects of this care in its second report, which was published in January 1984.

NHS (Patient Statistics)

59. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many in and outpatients, respectively, were treated in National Health Service hospitals during the last 12 months for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with previous years.

Mr. Whitney: In 1984, the latest year for which information is available centrally, National Health Service hospitals treated 6·2 million inpatient cases and dealt with 37 million outpatients attendances, including 8·5 million new outpatient attendances. A comparison with previous years is given by the following extract from table 1 of DHSS Statistical Bulletin 5/85, a copy of which is in the Library.

NHS Hospitals in England

Index, 1974=100

Year	In-patient cases (discharges and deaths)	Out-patients
		New	Total attendances
1974	100·0	100·0	100·0
*1975	96·2	88·5	92·8
1976	101·6	95·8	97·1
1977	103·4	97·3	99·8

1983	116·4	106·2	109·5
1984	119·4	108·7	111·1

* Industrial action in these years restricted the number of cases treated.

Student Benefits

61. Sir William van Straubenzee asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to have received the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee on the proposed changes in student benefit entitlement.

Mr. Newton: Shortly.

Pensions

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect he expects the proposed 2 per cent. incentive payment to those who establish new contracted-out pension plans will have on established occupational schemes.

Mr. Newton: Apart from its main effect of encouraging the expansion of occupational and personal pension schemes, we expect the incentive payment will also encourage existing occupational pension schemes which are not contracted-out to become so. We do not expect that the payment of the incentive to personal pension holders will undermine existing occupational schemes, as has been suggested by some pensions interests.

"Reform of Social Security"

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what benefit uprating was assumed in the production of the "A" series of tables in the technical annex which accompanied the Government's White Paper "Reform of Social Security," Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton: The assumptions are stated at paragraph 2.11 of the technical annex.

Disablement Benefit

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, for each quarter since January 1980 and for each Department of Health and Social Security region, how many people in receipt of disablement benefit have had their cases reviewed; and how many such reviews resulted in the payment of disablement benefit being reduced.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind, perhaps he would write to me.

Dental Service

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the cost to the National Health Service of extractions of teeth carried out by the dental service for the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available; and what was the real cost for the same period 10 years previously.

Mr. Hayhoe: The cost of extractions, other than extractions of special difficulty, carried out in the general dental service in England in 1984 was £10·4 million. The cost in 1974 was £14·6 million at 1984 prices.

Medical Care (Private Investment)

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what effect he expects the tax proposals in the current Budget to have on the flow of private funds into medical care and relief; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I share the hope of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer that his proposals will have the desired effect of increasing charitable giving for these purposes, thus adding to the benefits of the VAT change which will enable charities to retain slightly more of what they already get.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the estimated cost to the Exchequer in 1986-87 of a reduction in national insurance contributions for employees of 1 per cent. of relevant earnings.

Mr. Major: On the basis of the assumptions set out in his report on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1985, the Government Actuary estimates that a reduction of 1 per cent. in the primary contribution rates would produce a loss of revenue amounting to £1,290 million in 1986-87.

Visually Handicapped Children

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if all visually handicapped children who are prescribed spectacles, including those with complex lenses, will get them free after the introduction of the Government's proposed voucher system; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if all visually handicapped children who are prescribed spectacles can get them free; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: All visually handicapped and other children are at present entitled to free National Health Service spectacles either under the general ophthalmic services or the hospital eye service. Under the proposed voucher system they will receive vouchers to permit their spectacles to be obtained from the much wider choice available on the private market.

Whooping Cough Vaccine

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many children have received the whooping cough vaccine since it was introduced by the National Health Service;

(2) how many children were recorded as completing primary courses of vaccination against whooping cough (a) between 1958 and 1982, (b) in 1983, (c) in 1984 and (d) in 1985.

Mr. Whitney: Whooping cough vaccination was first recommended as part of the childhood immunisation programme in 1957, and central collection of statistics of the number of children vaccinated against whooping cough started in 1958. The available information is given in the table.

Children completing primary courses of vaccination against whooping cough

England and Wales

Years	Thousands
1958-82	12,514
1983	425
1984	410
*1958-84	13,348

* The total does not equal the sum of the parts due to rounding.

Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many awards have been made under the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979; and what was (a) the highest payment, (b) the lowest payment and (c) the average payment.

Mr. Whitney: Up to 25 February, the latest date for which information is available, 822 awards of a vaccine damage payment have been made. Payment was £10,000 on successful claims made before 18 June 1985 and £20,000 on claims made on or after that date.

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what further payments he proposes making under the terms of the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 to (a) whooping cough vaccine damaged children and (b) other victims of vaccine damage.

Mr. Whitney: We have no plans to make any further changes to the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 following the doubling of the payment to £20,000 last year.

Subacute Sclerosis Parencephalitis

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what study his Department has made, or commissioned, of the cause, incidence and treatment of subacute sclerosing parencephalitis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has not commissioned a specific study in this field. However, I understand that the public health laboratory service communicable disease surveillance centre, London, is continuing surveillance of the number of cases arising. I am told that the association with the measles virus is established and vaccination against measles is the only known method of reducing the incidence of the disease.

Diet

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his policy towards the health aspects of diet in the light of the British Medical Association report "Diet, Nutrition and Health," a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Whitney: The Government are committed to promoting healthy eating and look to the Chief Medical Officer's Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy for advice on diet and health. COMA takes into account all relevant medical and scientific reports and publications.

Crown Copyright

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why he has arranged for the footnote © crown copyright to appear on certain recent circulars from his Department; and whether this illustrates a general change of policy.

Mr. Major: This inclusion of the © Crown copyright legend on circulars issued by the Department of Health and Social Security follows recent correspondence from HMSO which acted as a reminder that all material published by Government is Crown copyright.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many district health authorities have, within their district, more than one general hospital;

(2) how many district health authorities serve two or more metropolitan district councils within their geographical area.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans) on 24 March.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hospitals have accident and emergency departments without the back-up of an intensive care unit on the same site.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks in precisely the form requested. I shall let the hon. Member have the available relevant information as soon as possible.

Community Care

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with progress in the co-ordination of services for the mentally handicapped between local authorities and district health authorities in the light of the policy for care in the community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: We are encouraged by the knowledge that throughout the country many innovative schemes for community care are being initiated, involving extensive co-operation between local authorities and health authorities. A joint working group on joint planning, comprising officials of the local authority associations, the National Association of Health Authorities and the Department, has now reported and has made many positive proposals for promoting joint planning. The Department has issued for consultation a draft guidance circular drawing upon the working group's report. In scrutinising plans, we look for evidence of consultation and collaboration between authorities at all levels.

Purchasing Policy

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied that the industry support aims of the Government's public purchasing policy are adequately taken into account by health authorities; and whether the National Health Service will be represented at the "Better Made in Britain" exhibition.

Mr. Whitney: National Health Service authorities are generally sensitive in their purchasing decisions to the aims of the public purchasing policy initiated by the Government in 1981 to use purchasing power to strengthen suppliers' competitiveness.

Nevertheless my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I believe the scope for improvements should be reviewed. Accordingly he has asked me, with the help of a small group of regional health authority chairmen and officials, to consider what further action might usefully be taken to help support the development and maintenance of a strong, internationally competitive health care industry. The group has commenced its review. It is aware of the study being undertaken by an advisory council for applied research and development working party into the international competitiveness of the United Kingdom medical equipment industry and looks forward to the working party's report. NHS authorities spend nearly £2 billion annually on a wide variety of supplies; it is important for the service, for our economy, and for employment opportunities, that British industry is able to compete effectively over as broad a range of these supplies as possible.

In response to an invitation the NHS and the Department's Procurement Directorate will be contributing to the "Better Made in Britain" exhibition on 25 and 26 March. We plan to follow this up later in the year with the launch of a "Design" competition for a number of products bought by the National Health Service. Good design and high quality, as well as keen prices, are key factors in successful competition.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report tables similar to tables 8A, 8B, 17A and 17B in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691 showing the average change in disposable income by family status under the proposals in the Social Security Bill.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1986, c. 157-58]: The information requested is shown in the tables.

The average gain across all groups in Table 1 (£2·20) differs from the figure shown in Table 8A of the technical annex (shown as £2·10) owing to a printing error in the technical annex.

Cold Weather (Deaths)

51. Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the numbers of people who died as a result of the cold weather in January and February.

Mr. Whitney: It is not possible to make an accurate assessment of the number of deaths due solely or primarily to this period of cold weather. I am, however, studying the results of the study of hypothermia statistics which I announced in my reply to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 19 December 1985 at column 321.

DEFENCE

Brigade of Guards (Ethnic Make-up)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Brigade of Guards are black; and what steps his Department is taking to increase recruitment from ethnic minorities.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not held. The armed forces operate a policy of non-discrimination and integration in employment. Recruitment into the armed forces is by merit alone.

British Nuclear Tests

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the study which is being carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board on the health of British nuclear test participants.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The study on the health of British nuclear test participants is making progress, but it has proved to be more difficult than was expected when the National Radiological Protection Board issued its protocol in 1983. I am now advised that the results cannot be expected until spring next year. There are a number of reasons for the delay.

The first reason is that the study includes a much higher proportion of participants, about 20,000, rather than the 12,000 of whom details were available at the outset. This increase has required a corresponding increase in the size of the control group. The NRPB holds firmly to the view that this improves the study's validity and epidemiological acceptability enormously. NRPB, of course, has to be satisfied that it can fully justify the inclusion of each person.

Secondly, the operation of searching service records, which were not designed for the purpose of identifying all individuals present at or near the test locations between certain precisely defined dates, has proved to be much more time consuming than was expected.

Thirdly, and most important, the various field records identifying participants often only include a surname. Very considerable search of service records is therefore needed to identify the individual, confirm his participation and obtain the details needed to find him in the National Health Service central register. Even now some 2,000 names are still being investigated.

I am satisfied that these difficulties have been tackled vigorously and extra resources have been applied to try and maintain the momentum of the study. The study will be a better one as a result, but I am afraid that it will take longer to complete.

Radar Systems (Research)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence what research and development is currently being carried out in his Department on the Blue Yeoman radar system; and what research and development is currently being carried out in his Department on the RABIES radar system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Blue Yeoman radar is an experimental facility at Royal Signals and Radar Establishment at Malvern, which has undergone a major improvement programme over the last two years. It is being used to carry out research into a number of topics relating to advanced radar techniques and systems which will be applicable to future long-range air defence.

The RABIES equipment is being used in conjunction with the Blue Yeoman radar for research into bistatic radar, where the transmitter and receiver are some distance apart. A successful start has recently been made to a trials programme involving aircraft targets.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence why it is necessary for the United Kingdom embassy in Washington to employ American standards and procedures in vetting the security clearance of those United Kingdom nationals who have been invited to attend the strategic defence initiative office seminar on 25 March.

Mr. Norman Lamont: United Kingdom nationals who are to receive classified United States information, and United States nationals who are to receive United Kingdom classified information are cleared to do so under parallel and reciprocal security procedures agreed between the United States and United Kingdom Governments.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence why United Kingdom nationals must agree to sign an undertaking that they will refrain from discussing any information which they collect from the strategic defence initiative office seminar on 25 March.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is normal to make suitable arrangements for the protection of classified information. That said, I am not aware that any requirement for such a written undertaking exists for this symposium but if, in the event, it does, United States nationals present will also be required to comply.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Council of Agriculture Ministers

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the outcome of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting on 24 and 25 March.

Mr. Jopling: At the meeting of the Agriculture Council on 24-25 March I represented the United Kingdom together with my right hon. Friend the Minister of State.

The Council had an extensive discussion of the Commission's proposals for agricultural prices and related measures. I continued to press the case for a tough price policy as a central element in the arrangements to be adopted together with non-discriminatory measures to secure the changes needed in the CAP. The Council will resume its discussion of these proposals when it next meets on 21 April. Meanwhile, the Council agreed to extend the marketing years for beef and milk together with the beef variable premium, calf subsidy and arrangemens for dried fodder until 27 April. The suspension of inward processing in the milk sector was also extended to the same date.

In order to help finance the disposal of intervention stocks the Council agreed to amend the rules providing for the depreciation of intervention stocks and the Commission undertook to make under its powers adjustments to the arrangements for financing of intervention to achieve economies to the extent possible within its own powers.

The Council adopted a directive providing for the welfare standards for hens kept in battery cages. The United Kingdom voted against the measure. As a measure concerning the approximation of national laws we considered that the legal base should have included article 100. The measure provides for a minimum space allowance of 450 sq cm per bird to apply for new cages from two years after its adoption and for existing cages after nine years. I made it clear that, while this was the best measure which was negotiable at the present time, it did not go far enougn to protect the welfare of hens in battery cages and that the results of further studies should be presented for discussion along with proposals for action, if possible before the formal review dates in the directive. I am pleased to say that I was fully supported in seeking further improvements by Denmark, Germany and the Netherlands.

The Council agreed a revised mandate for negotiations with the ACP states on the 1985-86 raw sugar price. It involves a slightly improved offer to the ACP states, while taking account of the interests of Community refiners.

Seabirds (South Shields)

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) why his wildlife incident unit, having collected on 10 March seabirds found dead for no apparent reason on the seashore at South Shields, informed the hon. Member for South Shields on 12 March that autopsies were not possible on account of the delay since their collection;

(2) why his wildlife incident unit, having collected seabirds, which were found dead for no apparent reason, on the seashore of South Shields, refused to perform autopsies;

(3) why the seabirds found dead for no apparent reason on 8 March on the shore at South Shields and collected by his Department's wildlife incident unit on 10 March, were not autopsied at the Lasswade Laboratories.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986]: In accordance with normal procedures an autopsy was carried out at the Veterinary Investigation Centre, Longbenton, Newcastle upon Tyne on the sea birds found dead on the sea shore at South Shields. From the visual inspection there was nothing to indicate the cause of death. No useful bacteriological or biochemical examination was possible because of post-mortem changes in the internal organs.

Wildlife Incident Unit

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what instructions he has issued to his wildlife incident unit changing its remit, since this was announced by his hon. Friend the Member for Medway (Mrs. Fenner) during the passage of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 25 March 1986]: The remit of the wildlife incident investigation scheme has not changed. Agricultural development and advisory officers will continue to operate the scheme to provide post-registration surveillance of problems arising from the use of agricultural pesticides.

Wheat

Mr. Chope asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to which countries Britain exported wheat in the last five financial years; and what was the total quantity and value per country in each year.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 345]: The detail requested is not readily available on a financial basis. Data on a calendar year basis are as follows:

Intervention Board (Headquarters)

Mr. Alton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider relocating the United Kingdom headquarters of the European Economic Community intervention board to Liverpool.

Mr. Jopling: I would refer the hon. Member to my reply on 24 March 1986 to my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Silvester), at column 345.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Suppliers

Mr. Ottaway asked the Attorney-General what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

The Attorney-General: The Treasury Solicitor, who is responsible for funding the Law Officers' Department, has calculated that in a sample of four separate weekly periods in 1985-86 the time lapse between receipt of a bill and payment was 29·6 days.

Crown Prosecutors

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the extent and basis of his involvement in the preparation of the code for Crown prosecutors to be issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

The Attorney-General: The Director of Public Prosecutions yesterday submitted a draft code for my consideration. By virtue of section 3(1) of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 the Director discharges all his statutory responsibilities, including the duty imposed by section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, under my superintendence.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Statistics

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of (a) sex offences, (b) burglary, (c) theft and (d) criminal damage in the London borough of Wandsworth in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the figures for recorded offences in Wandsworth in 1981 and 1982 are as given in the following table. Figures for subsequent years have been placed in the Library in accordance with the undertaking given to the hon. Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) on 8 May 1985, at columns 410-11.

Offences recorded by the police in the borough of Wandsworth (Police District "W")

Number

	1981	1982
Sexual offences	144	150
Burglary	6,161	7,016
Theft and handling stolen goods	14,197	15,588
Criminal damage	4,077	4,399

Prisoners

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report of the Chief Inspector of Prisons on the preparation of prisoners for release will be published.

Mr. Mellor: The report and my right hon. Friend's response to it will be published when it has been fully studied.

Attendance Centres

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the extent of the expansion of (a) senior attendance centres and (b) junior attendance centres since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: Since May 1979, 17 new senior centres and 34 junior centres have been opened. These include two junior centres which have been created by dividing existing centres.

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many senior and junior attendance centres are available to males, females and both sexes respectively.

Mr. Mellor: There are 130 attendance centres in England and Wales: 19 senior centres for males aged 17-20 years; 91 junior boys' centres (10 to 16 years); seven junior girls' centres and 13 junior mixed centres.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why, in view of the level of unemployment in London, the Metropolitan police are advertising directly for traffic wardens; and what use is being made of jobcentres for this purpose.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner informs me that direct recruitment advertising for traffic wardens is generally the most cost-effective method of attracting suitable applicants, but the Metropolitan police also advertise through jobcentres in areas where there are particular shortages of traffic wardens.

Prison Rules

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the report of the Chief Inspector of Prisons on rule 43 was submitted to him by the Chief Inspector of Prisons;

(2) when the report of the Chief Inspector of Prisons on rule 43 will be published.

Mr. Mellor: We shall shortly be publishing the report, which was submitted on 6 August 1985.

Prisons (Suicides Report)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report of the working group on suicide and prisons.

Mr. Mellor: We intend to publish the conclusions of the working group which was set up to examine the issues raised by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prison's report, "Suicide in Prison". We will consider whether it would be useful to publish the report in full.

Police (Traffic Duties)

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the total number of police employed on traffic duties in 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 in (a) the south-east, (b) the east midlands and (c) the west midlands.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The following estimated numbers of police officers were allocated to specialised traffic divisions in these regions from 1982 to 1985. Comparable information for 1981 is not readily available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Allocation of police officers to traffic divisions on 31 December

Region (Police Forces)	1982	1983	1984	1985
SOUTH EAST (Bedfordshire, Essex, Hampshire, Hertfordshire, Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Thames Valley, Metropolitan Police)	2,941	2,871	3,113	2,676
EAST MIDLANDS (Cambridgeshire, Derbyshire, Leicester, Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Northamptonshire, Nottinghamshire, Suffolk)	1,262	1,153	1,103	992
WEST MIDLANDS (Cheshire, Staffordshire, Warwickshire, West Mercia, West Midlands)	1,246	1,256	1,175	1,267

Fire Precautions Act

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, further to the hon. Member for Westminster, North's question of 22 January, Official Report, column 216, he can report progress on the consultation exercise on the review of the Fire Precautions Act and the designation of further classes of premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Home Secretary will be reporting the outcome of the consultative exercise in a further document to be published later in the spring. Pending the outcome of the review no designation of new classes of premises under fire precautions legislation is contemplated.

Handicapped People

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mentally handicapped people were admitted to prison, remand centres or custodial care in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: Information is not held centrally as to the number of prisoners received into custody who could be deemed mentally handicapped. However, the following table shows the number of inmates in prison custody in England and Wales on the dates shown whose disorder, in the opinion of the Medical Officer, was of a nature or degree which would make it appropriate for them to be detained in hospital under the terms of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Marriage Guidance Council

Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the increase in the work load of the National Marriage Guidance Council since 1980 and the increase in grant to the council since 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Home Office grant to the National Marriage Guidance Council is given to support the council in its work of selecting and training lay counsellors. Between 1980-81 and 1984-85 (the latest year for which information is available), the numbers of counsellors selected and trained increased by 57 per cent. and 55 per cent. respectively, and the number of training courses provided by 38 per cent. In the same period the Home Office grant increased by 49 per cent. My right hon. Friend is considering the longer-term level of the Home Office grants to marriage guidance bodies, including that to the council.

West Midlands Police

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the number of officers in his constabulary who are under the age of 25 years; and what this number represents as a percentage of the total West Midlands police manpower.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable that on 31 December 1985, 943 police officers in the West Midlands police were under 25 years of age, representing 14·4 per cent. of the strength of the force of 6,555 on that date.

Mrs Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the areas of duties undertaken by his officers which permit flexibility of hours and in which uniforms are not worn and the numbers of requests which have been submitted during the last 12 months for transfers by police officers doing street duties.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands police that there is a range of duties undertaken by police officers in the force which permit flexibility of hours and in which uniforms are not worn. Most of these duties are in the criminal investigation department, and there are others in such areas of scenes of crime, warrants, community services, firearms training, coroners' officers, complaints and discipline, and in the regional crime squad.

I understand that requests are regularly received from uniformed officers in the force for transfer to attachment to specialist departments, mainly in the interests of gaining further experience or career development. Precise figures are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Immigration

Mrs Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors from the Indian sub-continent have arrived in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; what proportion of them were refused leave to enter; and how many immigration personnel have been employed to administer these entries each year during the same period.

Mr. Waddington: The number of visitors admitted and the total number of passengers refused entry in 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984 have been published by nationality in table 1 of the annual publication "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom" (Cmnd. 8533, 8944, 9246 and 9544 respectively). That statistics on refusals do not distinguish passengers seeking entry as visitors. Figures for the whole of 1985 are not yet available, but during the first six months of the year 188,000 nationals of Bangladesh, India and Pakistan were admitted, 120,000 of whom were visitors. In the same period 1,770 were removed after having been refused entry.

Individual immigration officers at ports of entry interview a wide range of passengers of various nationalities. It is consequently not possible to estimate the time taken up by the nationals of particular countries.

Irradiated Food

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the number of prosecutions in each of the last five years for selling irradiated food for human consumption; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not recorded centrally. The information available to me relates to all proceedings for offences of adulteration of food and public health offences, most of which is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" under offence classifications 89 and 101, and 91 respectively in table S1.1(A), volume 1—magistrates' courts.

Neighbourhood Watch, London

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Metropolitan police have yet received the report on neighbourhood watch in London commissioned from the Policy Studies Institute; and if copies of this report will be made available to hon. Members.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Metropolitan police have not commissioned a report on neighbourhood watch in London from the Policy Studies Institute. The Directorate of Management Services of the Metropolitan police and the Institute of Criminology, Cambridge are, however, carrying out an evaluation of neighbourhood watch in London, the results of which are expected to become available towards the end of this year. I shall ensure that any lessons to be learnt from this work are drawn to the attention of those involved in the organisation of neighbourhood watch schemes.

Police (Stop and Search)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were stopped and searched on each month since January 1984 and subsequently (a) charged and (b) not charged for each of the sub-divisions of "N" division of the Metropolitan Police area.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986, c. 10]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the readily available information is as given in the table. The table shows for 1984 the number of persons or vehicles recorded as stopped; statistics showing the number of occasions on which a search was conducted are not available. Up to 1 April 1985 the information was collated on an annual basis and figures for the first quarter of 1985 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. From 1 April 1985 the Metropolitan police introduced a new code of practice relating to stop and search procedures and the information collected, in line with section 5 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, relates only to those occasions on which persons or vehicles were searched and is collated on a divisional basis only. These figures are therefore not comparable with those for 1984. Monthly figures for such small areas are very variable and have therefore been aggregated to provide quarterly totals. Information on whether charges resulted from the arrests shown is not available.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Departmental Suppliers (Payment)

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Butcher: The information is not readily available for the Department as a whole.

BT (Privatisation)

Mr. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total cost of selling British Telecommunications plc, the actual receipts from the sale, the number of shares issued, and the price at which such shares were sold.

Mr. Butcher: 3,012 million shares in British Telecommunications plc were offered for sale at a price of £1·30 each. Following the final instalment due on 9 April 1986 gross receipts from the sale of shares are expected to amount to £3,855 million. This takes account of the employee share offers and other selling concessions.

Expenditure to date and provisions for future expenditure show the costs of the sale as £139 million for general expenses and £37·1 million for the voucher offer.

Newspaper Industry (Grants)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government grants in 1985 and 1986 have been given to the newspaper industry in (a) Scotland and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom, for the installation of high technology equipment.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Beer (Weights and Measures Act 1979)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the implications of the Brewers Society guidance notes on the dispense of draught beer by free flow and hand pumps for his decison on the possible bringing into force of section 19 of the Weights and Measures Act 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I understand that the guidance notes which are being prepared by the Brewers' Society will seek to promote the use of glasses which can more readily acommodate local preferences for the way in which beer is dispensed. To facilitate the manufacture of such glasses the Department is currently reviewing the regulations dealing with the construction and testing of beer measures.

The Government will wish to see if this joint initiative proves to be satisfactory before considering implementing section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 (formerly section 19 of the 1979 Act.)

Estate Agents Act 1979

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to review the operation of the Estate Agents Act 1979 in the light of his decision in the case involving Burling Morrison.

Mr. Howard: I have no plans to do so.

Allied Lyons (Takeover)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to be in a position to take a decision on the takeover bid of Allied Lyons by Elders XL Ltd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. and learned Friend the former Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced the reference of this merger proposal to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on 6 December 1985. The commission is due to submit its report on 5 June 1986.

As I am sure my hon. Friend appreciates, it would not be appropriate for Ministers to make a statement while the commission's investigation is in progress.

Mirror Group Newspapers

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to institute an inquiry under section 442 of the Companies Act 1985 into the ownership of Mirror Group Newspapers, and its relationship to a foreign trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: No.

Radio Regulation (Consultative Bodies)

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has yet completed the review of consultative bodies on radio regulatory matters.

Mr. Pattie: Reviews have now been carried out of the consultative arrangements applying in the fields of mobile radio and microwave fixed links.

For mobile radio I have decided that a new committee should be established with a broad base of representation, including members of associations representing manufacturers of equipment, operators of commercial radio systems and the user community. A small number of people may also be invited to attend in a personal capacity. This committee, to be called the Civil Land Mobile Radio Committee, will be able to examine and advise on strategic issues that affect the Department's regulatory policies. The committee will meet about three times a year.

A review of the membership of the Microwave Fixed Links Committee has also been concluded. This has enabled improvements to be made to the effective functioning of this committee by rationalising its membership without narrowing the spread of representation.

Unipart

Mr. Jackson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in the light of his statement to the House of 25 March, about BL, he will indicate whether it remains the Government's intention to privatise Unipart; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: I told the House on 6 February that it was the Government's intention, with the agreement of the BL board, that negotiations should be pursued for the separate privatisation of Unipart by the early placement of shares with United Kingdom institutions. Discussions for this purpose are continuing.

Construction Industry

Mr. Nelson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the report of the Director General of Fair Trading on the professions serving the construction industry.

Mr. Howard: My hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Fletcher) announced on 23 July 1985 that the Director General of Fair Trading would be conducting a programme of reviews of restrictions in the professions. I have now received a report by the director general on advertising and charging rules in the professions serving the construction industry, which is being published today, and have placed copies in the Library of the House. While finding that there is at present a considerable degree of competition in the market for these professional services, the director general makes certain recommendations intended to increase the scope for competition further. I welcome these recommendations, and have asked the director general to discuss with the bodies concerned how they intend to implement them.

British Steel Corporation

Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future funding of the British Steel Corporation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Since 1978 the British Steel Corporation has been funded by subscriptions of capital under section 18 of the Iron and Steel Acts of 1975 and 1982. The Government have decided that it would be appropriate in the light of the encouraging results BSC has recorded recently and in the knowledge that the European Commission has accepted BSC's restructuring plan as demonstrating that the corporation is on the path to sustained viability, to allow the BSC once more to resume medium and long-term borrowing from the national loans fund.

Distillers (Guinness Bid)

Mr. Fletcher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in view of the decision not to refer the second Guinness bid for Distillers to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission and the opportunity this opens for bidding companies to negotiate with the Office of Fair Trading the divestment of parts of their business or make other arrangements to avoid a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, he will make a statement about the implications of this decision on competition policy and the future conduct of the competition authorities in dealing with mergers.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986]: It is not the practice of the director general or Ministers to negotiate over references. But the Office of Fair Trading is always willing to discuss at an early stage any proposals which companies may have in mind, and to offer guidance as to whether they would be likely to be referred.

The decision not to refer the second Guinness proposal was entirely consistent with our policy of making references primarily on grounds of competition.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Solicitors (Scotland) Act

49. Mr. Kennedy asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland on how many occasions his Department has been involved in prosecutions arising from breaches of the provisions of the Solicitors (Scotland) Act.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: There have been two such prosecutions since 1980.

Ice Cream Salesmen

50. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what instructions have been given to the procurator fiscal in Glasgow for investigation and prosecution following on recent allegations of a renewal of violent disputes between ice cream salesmen.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: While I am aware of the recent allegations to which my hon. Friend refers, it would be inappropriate to reveal what instructions, if any, have been given in any individual current case.

Solicitor-General (Prosecutions)

51. Mr. Fairbairn asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how often he has prosecuted a case in the High Court in Glasgow, the sheriff court in Paisley and the sheriff court in Stirling since his appointment.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I have not prosecuted in either Paisley or Stirling sheriff courts. I have, however, made a number of appearances in the High Court in Glasgow, prosecuting several cases taking up to a total of 37 days.

Medical Accidents

52. Mr. Foulkes asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will refer to the Scottish Law Commission for its consideration the state of the law as it relates to no-fault procedures for medical accidents, and the extent to which the experience of other countries in this area may be relevant.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate, and I recently met the hon. Members for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. McKelvey) and for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes), when they expressed their concern about the law, in Scotland, on the liability to make reparation for medical accidents. I am not aware of any evidence that the law in Scotland on medical accidents is in need of review by the Scottish Law Commission. Consideration of a no-fault scheme to cover such accidents would be for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Salmon

53. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what communications the Crown Office has had with procurators fiscal about prosecution policy for alleged offences connected with salmon and salmon rivers.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Circulars are issued to the Procurator Fiscal Service from time to time. There is, however, no special policy, since the criteria applied to these cases are applied in all criminal prosecutions.

Rape

Mr. Pollock asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland whether he has any plans to seek to amend the law of evidence applicable to prosecutions for rape; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I have no plans for further change at this time. The Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Bill of last year introduced far-reaching changes to the law of evidence in sexual offence trials. The Bill is now on the statute book and section 36, brought into force on 1 January 1986, implements the recommendations of the Scottish Law Commission that complainers in sexual offence trials should be protected as far as possible from certain types of questioning and evidence.

ENERGY

British National Oil Corporation

Mr. Portillo asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has yet specified the date on which the British National Oil Corporation will be dissolved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: BNOC's final report and accounts for the 11 months ended 30 November 1985 were published earlier today, and I have placed copies in the House Libraries.

After consulting both BNOC and the Oil and Pipelines Agency in accordance with section 3(5) of the Oil and Pipelines Act 1985, I am satisfied that publication of the report and accounts completes the duties laid upon the corporation under schedule 2 to that Act. Accordingly I have made today the British National Oil Corporation (Dissolution) Order 1986 (S.I. No. 585), which specifies that the corporation will be dissolved with effect from tomorrow, 27 March. The order also has the effect of bringing into force part II of schedule 4 to the Oil and Pipelines Act 1985, which repeals a number of statutory provisions which have become unnecessary as a result of the corporation's dissolution.

On behalf of the Government, I would like to thank all those who served the corporation over the 10 years of its existence.

Oil Prices

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy what estimates he has made of future trends in oil prices.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Oil prices will be determined by the balance of supply and demand.

Petrol Prices

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Energy what plans he has to monitor the pump price of petrol in the light of the Budget statement of 18 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department continues to keep in close touch with the oil companies about petrol and other oil product prices.

Waste (Fuel Conversion)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Energy what funds he has made available, and to which local authorities, for the conversion of domestic and industrial waste into fuel.

Mr. David Hunt: Grant assistance of £3·75 million has been made available under the energy efficiency demonstration scheme, the energy efficiency office's R and D programme and the biofuels R and D programme towards the utilisation of domestic and industrial wastes as fuel. Two local authorities, Merseyside county council and Newcastle city council, have received grant assistance totalling £800,000.

Energy Ministers Council

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the meeting of the European Communities Council of Energy Ministers of 20 March.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I represented the United Kingdom at the Council of Energy Ministers on 20 March.

The Council discussed the current situation in the oil market. It agreed that the substantial fall in oil prices over the past few weeks would have beneficial effects on the economic outlook for the Community. It was further agreed that the fall in prices should not have any significant detrimental short term energy effects. There was therefore no reason to adopt new specific Community energy policy measures now.

This approach was reflected in discussion of the proposed Community energy objectives for 1995. Given the current situation in the market, it was not considered appropriate at this juncture to adopt a resolution, but further progress was made on the text.

The Council again considered the draft regulation establishing a new regime governing the payment of state aids to the coal industry. Some major differences of opinion remain to be resolved in the preparations for the June Energy Council. There was also a discussion of the contribution other solid fuels (lignite and peat) could make to diversifying Community energy supplies particularly in certain regions. The Council concluded by welcoming a recent Commission paper on new and renewable sources of energy. This is now to be considered in detail.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Lomé Convention

Mr. Faulds asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to the answer of 17 March to the hon. Member for Warley, East, he will now give the equivalent information about countries receiving aid or loans since 1979 under the first Lomé convention.

Mr. Raison: I shall write to the hon. Member with information about aid commitments by the European Community to Africa, Caribbean and Pacific countries under the first Lomé convention.

TRANSPORT

Reopened Railway Lines

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all sections of previously disused railway line that have been, or are in receipt of his approval to be, reopened in each of the last 10 years and, where appropriate, the extent of the public funding involved in each individual reopening.

Mr. David Mitchell: Those light railway orders made during each of the years in question which were concerned either wholly or partly with reopening disused railways are shown in the following table. My Department did not fund any of them, and does not collect information on funding from other sources. Information about sections of disused railway lines which have been, reopened under other statutory provisions is available only at disproportionate cost.

Public Transport (Route Mileage)

Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of route miles currently being run by the Greater Manchester public transport executive.

Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the number of route miles currently being run by the South Yorkshire passenger transport executive.

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the route miles currently being run by the West Midlands passenger transport executive.

Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the route miles currently being run by the Tyne and Wear passenger transport executive.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the route miles currently being run by the Merseyside passenger transport executive.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has of the route miles currently being run by the National Bus Company.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the route miles currently being run by the West Yorkshire passenger transport executive.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what information he has on the number of route miles currently being run by the Trent Bus Company;

(2) what information he has on the number of route miles currently being run by the East Midlands Bus Company;

(3) what information he has on the number of route miles currently being run by the Chesterfield Corporation public transport executive.

Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has of the number of route miles currently run by the Ipswich borough transport authority.

Mr. David Mitchell: The route mileage run by different operators is not held currently.

British Airports Authority

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has determined a new financial target for the British Airports Authority.

Mr. Ridley: I have agreed with the authority that the financial target for the year 1986-87 should be to achieve a minimum rate of return on average net assets of 5·5 per cent. plus one fifth of the percentage growth in the number of terminal passengers in the year. This target is related to trading profit after taking account of current cost depreciation but before any adjustments for loss on disposal of fixed assets and for monetary working capital, and before interest and tax.

The target will be supplemented by two performance aims which emphasise the importance the Government attach to the authority continuing to seek gains in productivity. The authority has agreed the two performance aims, which are:

that costs (excluding depreciation) per terminal passenger handled in 1986-87 should not exceed £4·70, minus a 2 pence adjustment for each additional 1 percentage point increase over the forecast rate of growth of traffic; and to achieve not less than 3·15 terminal passengers handled per payroll hour in 1986-87.

The targets are intended to operate for one year only.

The financial target takes into account the increases in airport charges which have been notified to the airlines by the authority. The target and performance aims complete the normal framework of financial controls which will remain in place whilst the authority or its successor company remains within the public sector.

Road Safety Programmes

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are being made by his regional offices in conjunction with successor bodies for the co-ordination of road safety programmes including accident, investigation and prevention work, after 1 April 1986 in (i) West Yorkshire, (ii) West Midlands, (iii) Greater Manchester, (iv) Tyne and Wear, (v) Merseyside, (vi) South Yorkshire; and if he will name the successor bodies in each of these metropolitan areas.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986, c. 365]: Road safety is an integral part of the responsibilities of the district councils as successor authorities. Arrangements for co-ordination are a matter for them. The Department's regional offices have distributed to the district councils advice—notably the guidance note last summer and the code of practice produced by the association of London Borough Engineers and Surveyors. Wherever possible, they have drawn attention in discussion with district councils to the need for effective arrangements for road safety, including co-ordination.

Decisions taken by the district councils are as follows:

EMPLOYMENT

Scottish "Daily Record" and "Sunday Mail"

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to the answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 315, the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service has now received any request to offer its services in negotiations to obtain a settlement in the dispute between the National Union of Journalists and Mr. Robert Maxwell in relation to the Scottish Daily Record and the Sunday Mail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I understand that no request has been made, although ACAS remains ready to assist where it can.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Paymaster General what is his policy towards employment in the Glasgow area in the light of the redundancies proposed amongst employees of Mirror Group Newspapers Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Government's economic strategy is providing the climate of low inflation and sustained growth which is the only sensible and proper way to secure real jobs both in Glasgow and elsewhere. On the Mirror Group dispute, I hope that negotiations between management and the unions involved can be pursued urgently to bring this unfortunate dispute to an end.

Advisory Panel on Deregulation

Mr. Ryder asked the Paymaster General what is the composition of the recently appointed Advisory Panel on Deregulation.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The following people have recently been invited to join the advisory panel, which has been set up to provide advice to the enterprise and deregulation unit on the impact of regulations on business:

Mr. Brian Adgey—Managing Director, James Anderson Ltd.
Mr. Brian Crack — Joint Managing Director, Merricks Sico Ltd.
Mr. Colin Dauris—Chairman and Managing Director, James Dauris and Co. Ltd.
Mr. Robert Fleeman — Director, Smaller Business Advisory Services Ltd. and Directors' and Staffs' Advisory Services.
Mr. Colin Hancock—Marketing consultant, and director of companies including one specialising in starter units.
Mr. Ewan Harper—Chairman, Harper and Tunstall Ltd.
Mr. Damon de Laszlo—Chairman, Harwin Engineering and DP Advisers Ltd.
Mr. Clive Parritt — Partner, Howard Tilly and Co., Chartered Accountants.
Mr. Phillip White — Chief Executive, WYKO Group plc.

WALES

GCSE Examinations

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will postpone the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education in Wales until September 1987.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science to my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, North (Mr. Thompson) on 13 March, at column 542.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many teachers from each of the local education authorities in Wales are expected to participate in the special training courses for the General Certificate of Secondary Education examinations being organised under the guidance of the Welsh Office; and how many teachers from each of the Welsh local education authorities, respectively, have so far been on this course.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The programme to prepare teachers for the GCSE is being undertaken by the WJEC with the co-operation of local education authorities. All secondary teachers have opportunities to attend training seminars. I understand that the level of attendance at the first series of seminars organised by the WJEC was patchy but a further series is now under way.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what date (a) the curriculum and (b) the guidelines for administration for the new general certificate of secondary education examinations were issued to each of the Welsh local education authorities.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I presume the hon. Gentleman is referring to the GCSE national criteria, copies of which were distributed to the WJEC, to local education authorities for onward transmission to secondary schools and further education establishments, and to other interested organisations, during the spring of 1985.

Blood Products

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consider providing extra finance to the University Hospital of Wales to cover the extra funds spent during the summer of 1985 to provide safe heat-treated blood products for haemophiliac patients.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Health authorities are expected to meet the costs of providing safe heat-treated blood products for haemophiliac patients. However, South Glamorgan health authority is expected to submit a case for designating the haemophiliac reference centre, at the University hospital of Wales, as a regional service. If the centre is so designated its running costs will be met by the Welsh Office.

Health Authorities

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if any health authorities or health districts in Wales have been refusing requests for training courses and study leave until April 1986 in an effort to prevent overspend for the current financial year;

(2) which health authorities and health districts in Wales are pursuing a policy of a freeze on all staff vacancies; and how many such vacancies have remained unfilled for six months in each authority or district in Wales;

(3) which health authorities and health districts in Wales are pursuing a policy of a freeze on all local appointments; and for how long such a policy has been in operation.

Mr. Mark Robinson: These are operational matters for each authority to determine: such information is not held centrally.

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales which health authorities and health districts in Wales are pursuing a policy of refraining from the bulk buying of drugs, dressings and other medical equipment; and for how long such policies have been in operation.

Mr. Mark Robinson: None, so far as I am aware. All health authorities in Wales take advantage of the contracts negotiated by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority on an all-Wales basis for the purchase of drugs, dressings and medical equipment.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received regarding reductions in the provision of Welsh ambulance services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I have received a number of representations, variously from hon. Members, local authorities, community health councils and members of the public, specifically about proposed organisational changes for the ambulance service in Gwynedd and a few inquiries about proposed changes that had been under consideration within the Pembrokeshire health authority.

Public Transport

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much money each county in Wales can expect to receive in order to provide innovatory replacement by way of public transport for those rural areas which otherwise may lose their bus services as a result of the Transport Act 1985; and if he will indicate whether he will have total responsibility for such a scheme for Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I can confirm that my right hon. Friend will have total responsibility for administering the rural transport innovation grant scheme in Wales. The grant is intended to encourage new or improved public passenger transport services for rural communities. As the scheme will be demand determined, it is not possible to forecast what share each county in Wales will receive of the total money allocated. The grant scheme is only one of a number of new measures introduced by the Transport Act 1985 to arrest the decline in rural transport services.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Public Expenditure

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what is the spending in real terms (a) at present, (b) five years ago and (c) 10 years ago on average per pupil (i) in secondary schools nationally (ii) in secondary schools in Oxfordshire, (iii) in primary schools nationally and (iv) in primary schools in Oxfordshire;

(2) how much extra money in real terms the Government have made available for education each year since 1979.

Sir Keith Joseph: As pupil numbers in the schools have fallen, spending per pupil has risen to record levels.

The figures requested for net institutional expenditure per pupil nationally and in Oxfordshire are as follows:

Net institutional expenditure per pupil (£ at 1984-85 prices)

	Primary Schools		Secondary Schools
	England £	Oxfordshire £	England £	Oxfordshire £
1974-75	641	673	1,040	1,072
1979-80	653	644	932	902
1984-85*	764	775	1,088	1,069

* Provisional

Outturn public expenditure figures on all areas which fall within the responsibility of the Department, other than expenditure on the science budget, are as follows:

Expenditure (£ million at 1984-85 prices)

	£ million
1979-80	13,112
1980-81	13,447
1981-82	13,282
1982-83	13,369
1983-84	13,471
1984-85	13,408
1985-86*	13,214

* Estimated outturn

The figures in both tables have been revalued to 1984-85 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.

Secondary Schools (Basildon)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the number of children at secondary schools in Basildon in each of the last five years and the number who went on to higher education in each of those years.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is not readily available centrally.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what local education authorities (a) increased and (b) reduced their pupil-to-teacher ratios over the last two years for which figures are available for (i) primary, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) all schools; and which local education authorities have pupil-to-teacher ratios (1) below and (2) above the national average for primary, secondary and all schools.

Mr. Dunn: Comparisons between January 1984 and 1985 of the primary, secondary and overall pupil-teacher ratios in each LEA in England are as follows. Also given is the equivalent comparisons between 1985 and the national average. In the table, plus signs indicate that pupil-teacher ratios have increased or are greater than the national average, and minus signs indicate the opposite.

Microelectronics Support Unit

Mrs. Renèe Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what kind of information support services will be provided to local education authorities by the microelectronics support unit; and how its budget for the financial year 1986-87 is to be spent.

Mr. Chris Patten: The management board of the microelectronics support unit, which met for the first time on 18 March, has yet to decide on these issues. The unit's budget of £3 million in 1986-87 will be distributed broadly over the areas of information provision, training the trainers, the development of curriculum materials, and new technology in special education.

GCSE Examinations

Mrs. Renèe Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what factors he bases the sum of £20 million as being a suitable figure for introducing the general certificate of secondary education examinations into the school curriculum later in the current year; and how many staff he expected to be able to train to aid this process within the £200,000 sum he is allocating for staff training.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend's proposal to pay education support grant up to a total of £20 million is intended to support expenditure on books and equipment for the GCSE. It is not intended to represent the total relevant expenditure, but will allow local education authorities to fund a real increase in meeting the demands brought by the new GCSE syllabuses. It is not possible to draw up precise estimates for the expenditure involved as these will vary from school to school in the light of present stocks, past provision for examination syllabuses and present choice of GCSE syllabuses.

The Government are making a contribution of over £9·5 million to the national programme of in-service training for the GCSE. The additional sum of £200,000, announced by my right hon. Friend, is intended to enable the groups to mount additional training seminars for those subject representatives who have so far failed to attend them. The action that the Government have taken, including allowing schools to close to pupils for two days in this summer term for training purposes, will allow all teachers of the GCSE to undertake GCSE in-service training.

Mentally Handicapped Students

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many mentally handicapped students aged 16 to 19 years have left special schools in each of the last five years for which figures are available;

(2) how many mentally handicapped students, and of what age, have been in mainstream schools or units attached to them in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: The information is not available centrally.

Bogus University Degrees

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about the issuing of bogus university degrees; from which bodies he has received them; and what responses he has given.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from individuals, including several hon. Members, and from the College of Preceptors. Replies have emphasised that the government deplore the trade in bogus degrees and explained that proposals for possible legislation to curtail the activities of operators in this field are under consideration. I shall be replying to the College of Preceptors in similar vein.

Cash Limits

Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of any revised cash limits for his Department's Votes in 1985-86.

Sir Keith Joseph: Cash limits for two of the Department's Votes for 1985-86 have been revised downwards to reflect estimated outturn. The adjustments are as follows:

£'000

Class	Vote	Description of expenditure	Current cash limit	Reduction	Revised cash limit
X	1	Schools, further education and other services	211,118	270	210,848
X	3	Universities, etc.	1,514,342	4,353	1,509,989

PRIME MINISTER

EC Budget

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Prime Minister what specific proposals Her Majesty's Government have made to the European Economic Community Commission for reductions in the EEC budget for 1985-86

The Prime Minister: Details of the 1985 budget as adopted are contained in the 1985 Community budget.

My hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Treasury represented the United Kingdom at the Budget Council's Second Reading of the 1986 budget on 26-27 November 1985. He argued that while it was axiomatic that the understandings on budgetary matters reached with Spain and Portugal during the accession negotiations must be fully respected, the Council should not propose special extra provision for the "cost of the past" problem, which should be solved by reducing new commitments rather than increasing payments. The proposed increase in non-obligatory expenditure represented a threat to budget discipline. The United Kingdom accordingly opposed the revised draft budget, which was adopted by qualified majority. The United Kingdom continued to press this line strongly at the third meeting of the Budget Council on 11-12 December, where we again voted against the Council's revised draft budget.

North-West

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will give details of each official visit she has made to the north-west of England since she became Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister: The details are as follows:

Shops Bill [Lords]

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister what is the latest number of representations received for and against the proposals in the Shops Bill [Lords].

The Prime Minister: The Government have received about 7,700 representations in favour of our proposals and about 45,500 representations against since the debate on the Auld report in the House of Commons in May last year.

Ministers (Share Dealings)

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister (1) if she will appoint an independent public inquiry into the share dealings by or on behalf of her since 1979;

(2). if she will make a statement regarding the purchase or sale of shares in which she has been involved since 1979.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to exchanges in the House on 25 March, at columns 781-82.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Prime Minister (1) what are the rules of conduct for Ministers governing speculation in shares in their own name and in their own account;

(2) if she will place in the Library a copy of the rules of conduct for Ministers as they affect the ownership and buying and selling of stocks and shares; and if there have been any infractions since 1979.

The Prime Minister: The then Secretary of the Cabinet submitted a memorandum to the Royal Commission on standards of conduct in public life in 1975, a copy of which is in the Library. The conventions have not changed since then.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Prime Minister if, in the light of her recent purchase and sale of shares in Broken Hill Proprietary, she will set up an inquiry into whether new rules are needed to govern the conduct of Ministers in share dealings in their own name and on their own account.

The Prime Minister: The hon. Member's question is based on a false premise.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether Her Majesty's Government were informed and their approval sought for discussion of the detailed and classified items from the memorandum of understanding by the strategic defence initiative organisation for Tuesday 25 March in Washington.

The Prime Minister: A symposium on SDI research was organised by the strategic defence initiative organisation and took place in Washington on Tuesday 25 March. The symposium's content was planned in close consultation with the United Kingdom SDI participation office and the British defence staff in Washington, both of whom provided speakers at the event.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

South-West Mechanised Letter Office

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal, pursuant to the answer of 20 March to the hon. Member for Leicester, East, Official Report, column 294, if he will initiate discussions about the installation of a House of Commons postmark facility under secure arrangements, at the south-west mechanised letter office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I shall reply as soon as possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Rates

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the total rate rise in poundage and percentage terms, at ratepayer level, in every local authority in England between 1979-80 and 1985-86, whole period, ranked from biggest increase to smallest increase, by class.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have today placed in the Library the available information covering the period 1981-82 to 1985-86 for all rating authorities, and for the period 1979-80 to 1985-86 for metropolitan districts and London boroughs. Information for shire districts for the earlier period can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Basildon

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses Basildon district council and Basildon development corporation have sold in each of the last seven years.

Sir George Young: I have today placed in the Library the latest version of the regular table showing total sales completed by local authorities in England betweeen 1 April 1979 and December 1985.

Dwelling Sales reported by Basildon district council and development corporation in each of the years 1980-81 to 1984-85 appear in the following issues of "Local Housing Statistics" which are available in the Library:

	Issue number
1980-81	62
1981-82	63
1982-83	67
1983-84 } 1984-85 }	75

Basildon district council reported sales of 28 dwellings in 1979-80 and 104 in the first nine months of 1985-86. Basildon development corporation sold 762 dwellings in the period May 1979 to March 1980 and 341 in the first nine months of 1985-86.

Natural and Man-made Heritage

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what effect he expects the tax proposals in the Budget to have on the flow of private funds into the conservation of both the natural and man-made heritage; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Charitable giving is likely to increase by at least £120 million a year as a result of the imaginative innovations in my right hon. Friend's Budget. This will be more cost-effective than equivalent state help. What share of the eventual total will go to the natural and man-made heritage will depend upon givers' preferences. I would warmly encourage as many people as possible to show their concern for the heritage in this way.

Forestry

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the basis for the claim by the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council in the latest annual report that the present overall forestry policy based on the planning of the poorer agricultural land needs to be reconsidered.

Mrs. Rumbold: This statement by the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council reflects his council's concern about extensive planting of hill land and blanket bog, mainly in the north of Scotland. The council considers that much of this land is of high value for nature conservation and that afforestation can destroy or seriously damage these open ground habitats. The Nature Conservancy Council believes that consideration should be given to encouraging the planting of other areas. It is currently engaged in a study of afforestation and nature conservation in Britain, which will be published later this year.

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the basis for the claim by the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council in the latest annual report that, in the north of Scotland, the financial regime of tax concessions and grants designed for the creation of a national asset in timber is being stretched by the wholesale planting of land.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Nature Conservancy Council calculates that 14,500 hectares of blanket bog in Sutherland and Caithness has now been planted, much of it in the last six years, and if planting continues at this rate 75 per cent. of the peatland below 250 metres will be lost over the next three or four decades. The Nature Conservancy Council takes the view that the availability of grants and tax concessions constitute the main incentive for this activity.

Royal Parks Constabulary

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the actual and authorised establishment of the Royal Parks constabulary.

Mr. Tracey: The current authorised establishment of the Royal Parks constabulary is 164, and the current strength is 146. Recruitment is in hand.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many locations are policed by the Royal Parks constabulary; and if he will list them.

Mr. Tracey: The list is as follows:

1. Central Parks
   Abingdon Street Garden
   Brompton Cemetery
   Green Park
   Grosvenor Square Garden
   Kensington Gardens
   Parliament Square Gardens
   St. James's Park
   The Natural History Museum Gardens
   The Tower of London Gardens
   Victoria Tower Gardens
2. Regent's Park
   Regent's Park
   Primrose Hill

3. Greenwich Park

4. Hampton Court
   Bushy Park
   Hampton Court Gardens
   Hampton Court Green
   Hampton Court Park

5. Richmond
   Richmond Park
   Ham House Grounds
   Osterley Park

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements are made for co-operation between the Royal Parks constabulary and local police forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The Royal Parks constabulary police areas only within Greater London and therefore day-to-day liaison is with the Metropolitan police. Close co-operartion exists between the forces, particularly in respect of ceremonial occasions, other special events and training.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the source of the recruitment of the majority of persons for the Royal Parks constabulary.

Mr. Tracey: Recruits are in the main drawn from the Greater London area and its surrounds in response to advertisements.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements there are for reporting annually in the activities and work of the Royal Parks constabulary.

Mr. Tracey: An annual report by the Chief Officer has been provided since 1982. These reports are widely circulated and copies are placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the annual budget of the Royal Parks constabulary.

Mr. Tracey: The total expenditure of the Royal Parks constabulary for the current financial year—excluding accommodation costs, which are not separately identified—is expected to be just over £2 million.

Thurrock

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much extra housing investment programme allocation has been made available to Thurrock borough council for the 1986-87 financial year to assist the owners of prefabricated reinforced concrete homes under the provisions made in the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Sir George Young: Thurrock borough council's HIP allocation for 1986-87 was increased by £606,000 (23 per cent.) over that for the current year. In making this increase, we took account of the likely need for expenditure under the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Waste (Fuel Conversion)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with, and what financial assistance he has made available to, local authorities on the conversion of domestic and industrial refuse into fuel.

Mrs. Rumbold: About £3 million has been made available to Tyne and Wear and South Yorkshire metropolitan county councils for the development of their mechanical waste sorting plants producing waste-derived fuel from domestc and trade waste. This has been augmented by funding supplied by my Department under separate research contracts for studies and development work on production of fuel from a range of waste undertaken at the Department of Trade and Industry's Warren Spring laboratory.

Our officials have held discussions on the conversion of domestic and trade waste into fuel with Humberside CC, Isle of Wight CC, East Sussex CC, West Sussex CC, and Merseyside MCC amongst others. The latter two have also received modest funding for minor studies on mechanical waste sorting.

Discussions have taken place from time to time with various bodies, including local authorities, on the recovery of energy from domestic waste as landfill gas (methane).

Rating

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will detail for the last 10 years the number of councillors and the authorities which they represent who have asked for dispensation in order to vote against proposals to rate empty property.

Mr. Waldegrave: Since February 1978, 34 applications for dispensation under section 97 of the Local Government Act 1972 on proposals to rate empty property have been received from members of Babergh, Rochester-upon-Medway, and Wirral district councils. Dispensations were granted in each case. Information on voting intentions on specific proposals is not sought by the Secretary of State in considering such applications.

Details of applications received before February 1978 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Landscape Areas Special Development Order 1950

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions the Government have reached on the proposals for extending the Landscape

Areas Special Development Order 1950 set out in the consulation paper issued by his Department and the Welsh Office on 18 April 1985.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have considered the proposals for extending the Landscape Areas Special Development Order 1950 very carefully in the light of the many helpful responses received to the consultation paper.

We proposed to introduce a new order to give all national park authorities in England and Wales discretion to require approval of the design, external appearance and siting of farm and forestry buildings and roads, where such development is carried out as permitted development under the general development order.

At present, LASDO applies to some areas not within current national park boundaries. The arrangements under the order have been working satisfactorily there since they were introduced in 1950 and the new order will apply in those areas as well.

We propose to increase from 14 to 28 days the period within which the local planning authority may require that the details of development proposals be subject to its approval. While this will mean a slight further delay before the developer may proceed without further ado, it should reduce the likelihood that the authority will require submission of details unnecessarily.

The consultation paper noted that discretionary grants under section 44 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 could be made by national park authorities as a means of recompensing farmers for disproportionately large additional costs incurred as a result of an authority's design requirements. It was put to us in the course of consultation that the payment of such discretionary grants could, however, for technical reasons, prevent the payment of farm capital grant.

We have concluded that claims for farm capital grant on the full cost of an investment should not be prejudiced by offers of grant by national park authorities towards the cost attributable to supplementary work required by them.

However, the payment of farm capital grant at the appropriate rate on the full cost of the projected investment must not bring the total amount payable on such supplementary work to more than 50 per cent. in the less favoured areas or 35 per cent. elsewhere.

We feel that the new arrangements will provide a fitting and just system of compensation for the farming community.

I am satisfied that the proposals represent a sensible approach to farm and forestry development in national parks. They allow planning authorities to require, as necessary, approval of the relevant plans, but do not impose full planning controls. The new order will provide an extra safeguard for the environment without imposing any significant burden either on the local planning authority or on farmers and foresters.

We propose to lay the new order before the House in the spring.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Hunter asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the will make a statement about his policy on the application of section 55(3) of the Local Government Act 1985 in the light of circular No. 15 from the London and Metropolitan Government Staff Commission on post-abolition recruitment procedures.

Mr. Tracey: Sir Philip Woodfield, chairman of the London and Metropolitan Government Staff Commission, wrote to my noble Friend the Minister of State on 21 March enclosing a copy of circular No. 15 and asking about the Government's policy on the application of section 55(3) of this Act as it might affect the recruitment of former employees of the GLC and the metropolitan county councils who will benefit from the commission's decision, announced in its circular, that its ring-fending procedures will remain in place for a time after the abolition of those councils.

The text of my noble Friend's reply, setting out our policy, is as follows:

Thank you for your letter of 21 March enclosing a copy of the Commission's latest Circular on post-abolition ring-fence arrangements. Whilst I would hope that the successor authorities keep up their good work of recent weeks and make timely job offers to the new staff they decide they need, I do recognise that there may unfortunately be GLC and MCC employees left redundant at abolition who will still be seeking to find new jobs elsewhere in local government. I therefore welcome the enhanced opportunities which your decision will give these people to resume careers interrupted through no fault of their own.

I think that you and your colleagues on the Commission need have no fears that the power in section 55(3) of the Local Government Act 1985 will work against this objective. As you know, this empowers—but does not require—the Secretary of State to direct a successor authority to pay to the appropriate body a sum equal to the redundancy payment and compensation paid to a former GLC/MCC employee left redundant at abolition and subsequently recruited by the authority. It was, however, never Ministers' intention to use this power simply because GLC/MCC staff who had been made redundant were subsequently re-engaged after an interval of time by a successor authority, and, indeed, section 55(4) ensures that this could not happen.

In deciding whether to issue such a direction, the Secretary of State has to consider whether or not the authority concerned could reasonably have made a timely offer of the job. Obviously this would be a matter of judgment in each case, and I cannot prejudge what view the Secretary of State might take. But it would be our general policy not to direct recovery in cases where we were satisfied that an authority had made good efforts to recruit the people concerned. And we would, in general, only direct recovery when we had good reason to conclude that the authority had not made sufficient efforts to comply with its duties under sections 55(1) and (2).

It does seem that, in general, the successor authorities have made considerable progress in discharging the duties laid on them by section 55(1) and (2)—to make early decisions on the extra staff they need, and to make timely job offers to GLC/MCC employees they wish to recruit. Accordingly, I would expect there to be very few cases in which the question of issuing a direction under section 55(3) might arise.

I hope this reassures you and your colleagues about the intended effect of this provision.

Urban Housing Renewal Unit

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on proposals submitted to his urban housing renewal unit by the city of Kingston upon Hull; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I am pleased to announce my right hon. Friend's favourable response to a proposal for a scheme in Hull which the city council has worked up in close consultation with my Department's urban housing renewal unit and our Yorkshire and Humberside regional office. We hope to reach agreement with the council on further packages in due course.

The estate which will benefit from today's decision is the Danes, part of the Orchard Park estate on the outskirts of Hull. This estate consists of 652 Wimpey "no fines" construction terraced houses, six maisonettes and 318 flats in three high-rise blocks.

My Department's priority estates project is working with the council to set up locally-based management and repairs arrangements on the estate. An accessible estate-based housing management office will be established and will provide a comprehensive housing service to residents. I regard this as an essential part of the package in order for the council to sustain the improvements which we expect to see as a result of the other steps being taken.

One such step will be a two-year community refurbishment scheme (CRS) to enable local unemployed people funded jointly by my Department's urban programme and the Government's community programme, subject to consideration and support by the Manpower Services Commission's area board, to carry out improvements to the environment and communal areas on their own estate. Resources of the order of £1,005,000 will be involved including £732,000 of urban programme funding, which I am pleased to approve in principle.

I have also agreed to an additional capital allocation of £845,500 from UHRU's targeted housing investment programme resources in 1986-87 to enable the council to carry out repairs on the fabric of the terraced dwellings and environmental and security works around the high-rise flats.

This scheme is yet another example of the type of proposals being worked up through close co-operation between a local authority, my Department's urban housing renewal unit and regional offices. I now look forward to seeing these proposals being put into action for the benefit of the residents at the Danes.

Mr. Andy Stewart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on proposals submitted to his urban housing renewal unit by the city of Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Earlier today my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction announced in Leeds my right hon. Friend's favourable response to a proposal for a scheme on part of the Gipton South estate which the council has worked up in collaboration with my Department's urban housing renewal unit and our Yorkshire and Humberside regional office. Gipton South is a large inter-war cottage estate, on which 910 dwellings are to benefit from a package of revitalisation measures. The proposals include capital improvements to the dwellings, a community refurbishment scheme (CRS) and the development of a local repairs service building on the local housing office which has already been set up on the estate.

The CRS will provide for environmental improvements and landscaping, the appointment of a tenants' support worker, and the establishment of a local repairs team. Some £784,000 will be made available over two years, of which £456,000 will fall to my Department's urban programme and £328,000 to the Government's community programme, subject to consideration and support by the Manpower Services Commission's area board. Leeds city council will be contributing some £47,000 to the CRS.

The city council has also submitted a bid for capital resources for Gipton South from UHRU's targeted housing investment programme (HIP) allocation. I have agreed in principle to an additional HIP allocation of up to £750,000 in 1986-87 to carry out work on the external fabric of the dwellings.

I welcome this package and I am glad that Leeds has joined the growing number of local authorities to benefit from the advice and resources of my Department's urban housing renewal unit. We hope to reach agreement on further proposals from Leeds in due course.

Mr. Lightbown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on proposals submitted to his urban housing renewal unit by the city of Bradford; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Earlier today my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction announced in Bradford my right hon. Friend's favourable response to a proposal for a package of measures on the Holmewood estate which the council has worked up in a close consultation with my Department's urban housing renewal unit. We hope to reach agreement with the council on further schemes in due course.

The Council is in the process of decentralising its housing management and will open a local management office at Holmewood within the next few months. This office will employ staff to deal with lettings and the management of the repair and maintenance system. Locally-based management is a key factor both in helping to establish the other proposals agreed with the urban housing renewal unit and in keeping up the momentum once they have been implemented to enable the residents to enjoy a continued improvement in their quality of life.

The part of the estate which will benefit from the package is known at Holmewood B and consists of 1,114 dwellings comprising a mixture of houses, flats, bungalows and maisonettes. Bradford metropolitan council has submitted a bid for resources from the unit's targeted housing investment programme (HIP) allocation to carry out various capital improvements. They include measures to reduce condensation and improve insulation, new windows and doors, gas central heating installation and a rewiring programme. I have agreed in principle to an additional HIP allocation of up to £1,198,400 for this programme in 1986-87.

The estate will also benefit from a community refurbishment scheme (CRS) which will enable local unemployed people to carry out environmental improvements and refurbishment of communal areas on their own estate over a two-year period. The CRS will provide more than 100 jobs and will be funded by the Government's community programme, subject to consideration and support by the Manpower Services Commission's area board, and my Department's urban programme. Resources of the order of £1,162,000 will be involved, including some £328,000 of urban programme funding, which I am pleased to approve in principle.

I welcome this package which has been developed through close co-operation between Bradford council, my Department's Yorkshire and Humberside regional office and the staff of the urban housing renewal unit.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

10. Mr. McKelvey asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Kilmarnock and Loudoun district council on the matter of local government finance.

Mr. Ancram: None recently.

18. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the guidelines set for current local authority expenditure on education and on local authorities' capital expenditure programmes on education.

Mr. Ancram: There are no guidelines set for local authority current expenditure on education. The Government's overall provision for local authority services is discussed annually with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities through the established consultative structure. On capital expenditure programmes, a number of representations have been received directly from authorities and individuals covering a variety of issues and education projects.

Farm Grants (Drainage and Re-seeding)

12. Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the National Farmers Union of Scotland to discuss the re-introduction of grants for drainage and re-seeding of farm land.

Mr. John MacKay: No. Adequate grant provision is already available for drainage and re-seeding under the agriculture improvement scheme (European Community).

Crofter Housing

13. Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will raise the level of grant and loan for crofter housing.

Mr. John MacKay: Yes. My right hon. and learned Friend is arranging for the details to be printed in the Official Report and placed in the Library of the House.

We propose increases in the order of one third. With effect from today, assistance available under the crofters building grants and loans scheme (CBGLS) will be increased as indicated in the table. The present levels are included for information.

	Present levels			Revised levels
	Grant £	Loan £	Total £	Grant £	Loan £	Total £
New house	6,500	10,000	16,500	8,700	13,500	22,200
House improvement	750	6,000	6,750	1,500	8,000	9,500
Farm building (erection or improvement)	3,750	—	3,750	5,000	—	5,000

The new levels of assistance will be available in the usual way to new applicants, to applicants whose applications are currently under consideration and to those who have had applications approved but who have not yet started work.

Coal Industry

14. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will commission an independent study into the potential contribution of the coal industry to the Scottish economy.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No. The Scottish coal industry is already being restructured in a manner that will strengthen its ability to make a continuing, positive contribution to the Scottish economy.

Agricultural Colleges

15. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement concerning transitional arrangements for the operation of the Scottish agricultural colleges between the reduction in public funding and the proposed increase in funds derived from the industry.

Mr. MacKay: It is for the management of the Scottish agricultural colleges to ensure that their operational costs are contained within the overall resources available to them, whether derived from public or private sources of income. The changes required in the management of the public funds and other resources available to the colleges are under consideration by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and the colleges.

National Union of Students

16. Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next have a meeting with officers of the Scottish National Union of Students.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I met representatives of the National Union of Students (Scotland) on 17 March about financial support for students and the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council's report on its review of higher education in Scotland. No further meeting is at present planned.

Trunk Roads

17. Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the progress of the trunk road programme in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: I am arranging for the list of major trunk road schemes started since 1 April 1985 and those expected to start by 31 March 1987 to be published in the Official Report and placed in the Library of the House.

The following schemes with estimated cost over £1 million have been started since 1 April 1985:

A7 Synton to Mossend
M74 Draffan to Millbank, stage III
A82 Auchentullich to Polnaberoch (Loch Lomond)
A82 Dubh Eas stage II
A835 Contin river bridge
A9 Alness bypass
A94 Forfar bypass

The following schemes with estimated cost over £1 million are expected to start by 31 March 1987:

A75 Anna bypass
A75 Castle Douglas bypass
A75 Ringford bypass
A82 Auchendennan to Arden (Loch Lomond)
A830 Kinsadel to Mallaig, stage I
A9 Mound bridges
A92 Murcar to Balmedie
A929 Kingsway to Powrie
A96 Auldearn bypass
A96 Bucksburn to Tyrebagger, stage I
A96 Forres bypass

Health Sevice (Privatisation)

19. Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress is being made in introducing private contractors for services in the Health Service in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Several health boards are in the process of testing the cost effectiveness of their support services by putting them out to competitive tender. The Common Services Agency, Grampian and Tayside health boards have so far let contracts with savings which range from 8 to 31 per cent. Two of these contracts have been awarded to private companies. I expect to see further progress in competitive tendering from the reports which are due to be submitted by boards at the end of March.

Licensing Laws

20. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to introduce legislation to amend the licensing laws in the light of the conclusions of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' survey on drinking habits.

Mr. John MacKay: The final results of the survey are being considered and a consultation document is being prepared with a view to discussing what, if any, changes to the law might usefully be made.

Unemployment

21. Mr. MacKenzie asked the Seretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: On 6 February 1986 the number of unemployed claimants in Scotland was 367,198—3,919 fewer than in the previous month. This gives room for encouragement but none for complacency, since the seasonally adjusted figures were virtually unchanged. Continued high unemployment remains a major problem; but the Government's economic strategy is the only sensible means of creating the steady growth on which improved employment prospects for the people of Scotland depend.

22. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to reduce unemployment in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In addition to the measures which the Government are taking generally to combat unemployment and encourage the creation of new jobs, action is being taken in Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley by the Manpower Services Commission and other agencies. The Scottish Development Agency is active in support for the local enterprise trust (CADET), in environmental and land engineering projects, and in factory building. NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. supports the enterprise trust and gives financial assistance for business projects, the conversion of premises and other measures. The Scottish Development Agency and NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. jointly commissioned last year a review of the local economy with a view to developing a further programme of action for the area. The review will be completed shortly.

29. Mr. Lambie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for alleviating unemployment in Ayrshire.

Mr. Rifkind: The best means of improving employment prospects in Ayrshire, as elsewhere in Great Britain, lies in the Government's economic strategy of keeping inflation down, offering real incentive for enterprise and restoring competitiveness to industry. The full range of the Manpower Services Commission's special employment and training measures is available in Ayrshire on a continuing basis. In addition, Scotland's first enterprise trust, launched in 1981 (the Ardrossan, Saltcoats, Stevenston enterprise trust, known as ASSET) has helped over 250 companies and created well over 1,000 jobs and training places in the area.

Urban Deprivation

23. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the urban aid programme in tackling deprivation in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: Assessement of the effectiveness of the urban programme is an ongoing exercise. A review of the criteria and priorities of the programme was undertaken in 1984. This did not alter the basic concept of the programme but led to improved effectiveness, including the tighter targeting of eligible areas to ensure that available resources are directed to the worst urban areas of multiple deprivation in Scotland.

The Scottish Development Department also undertakes an evaluation of a random sample of projects on an annual basis.

Concessionary Fares

24. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation which will allow regional authorities in Scotland to extend their concessionary fares schemes to the unemployed.

Mr. Ancram: The Government have no plans to extend eligibility in this way.

Economic Situation

25. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will assess the impact of the recent Budget statement on the economy of Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The combination of continued growth and low inflation forecast in the Budget statement is a tribute to the success of the Government's economic policy, and will have a favourable impact on the Scottish economy. I very much welcome the cuts in income tax, and beneficial consequences for the whisky industry of keeping the duty on spirits unchanged. The decisions to expand the community programme and to extend the pilot schemes for the long-term unemployed are of particular importance in the fight against unemployment in Scotland.

Schools (Parental Choice)

26. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will consider proposals to extend parental choice and control in schools.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Government have already done a great deal to extend parental choice, for example through the parents' charter and the assisted places scheme. But the subject will be kept under review.

Glasgow Eastern Area Renewal

27. Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to visit the Glasgow eastern area renewal project area of Glasgow to assess progress with the implementation of the project's objectives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to visit the GEAR area.

I shall be meeting representatives of the seven participating bodies on Monday 14 April for a meeting of the project governing committee. The evaluation of the project's achievements in terms of its objectives will be on our agenda.

Inverclyde Initiative

28. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of the Inverclyde initiative.

Mr. Allan Stewart: A priority programme of measures at a cost of up to £6 million is well under way and the Scottish Development Agency will have spent some £3·5 million by the end of this financial year. Considerable efforts are being made to identify projects which will generate investment and attract business to the area, and the initiative has recently submitted proposals for the redevelopment of the Customs house quay site in Greenock which could create 700 jobs.

Railways (Capital Expenditure)

30. Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy that funds allocated to Strathclyde for capital expenditure on transport in respect of railways should be spent with railway workshops in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: While I require Strathclyde regional council to contain its capital expenditure on roads and transport within its approved allocation, detailed decisions on priorities and on its placing of contracts are for the council itself to take. As regards decisions on contracts, the council will no doubt have in mind the need to obtain lowest prices and best value for money.

Manufacturing Industry (Strathclyde)

31. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Strathclyde regional council to discuss with it the prospects for manufacturing industry.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so at present.

Ancient Monuments

32. Mr. Fairbairn asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to visit the ancient monuments of Scotland in his charge with a view to their sale to private owners.

Mr. Rifkind: I look forward to visiting ancient monuments in my care as opportunity allows, but I see little scope for selling them to private owners.

Manufacturing Industry

33. Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many manufacturing jobs have been lost in Scotland since June 1979.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The number of employees in employment in manufacturing in Scotland is provisionally estimated to have fallen by 176,000, on a seasonally adjusted basis, between June 1979 and September 1985.

Community Councils

34. Mr. Hugh Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on the future of community councils.

Mr. Ancram: None.

Regional Policy

35. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent reassessment has been made of regional aids to industry in Scotland; what representations he has received from Fife regional council on these matters; and what reply has been made.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Basic changes in regional policy were introduced only some 16 months ago and the Government have no plans for a further review of policy at present. The operation of the current schemes of assistance is being closely monitored and the results will be taken into account in deciding what changes are desirable in the administration of the schemes.

I have agreed to meet a deputation from Fife to discuss the effects of the regional policy changes on the region.

Drugs Misuse

36. Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money the Scottish Office has made available to health boards for the specific purpose of tackling drugs misuse.

Mr. John MacKay: Services for the treatment of drug misusers are usually provided as part of the general practitioner and hospital and community-based services, and the expenditure incurred by health boards in providing treatment specifically for drug misusers cannot be separately identified. My right hon. and learned Friend has, however, already made available over £1 million to provide support for a range of local initiatives by health boards, local authorities and voluntary organisations which are specifically concerned with the treatment and rehabilitation of drug misusers. Support for these projects from the health programme in the financial year 1986-87 will amount to about £700,000 and it is planned to maintain at about this level annually the amount of resources set aside for the encouragement and assistance of drug treatment and rehabilitation services.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill

37. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the outcome of his consultation exercise in Scotland on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer to the answer which I gave to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 24 March at columns 352-53.

Dental Treatment

38. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will institute a review of the extent to which dental treatment is dictated by the assessment of the patient's ability to pay, rather than by the dentist's clinical judgment.

Mr. John MacKay: No.

Rating Reform

39. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has so far received in response to the Government's Green Paper on rating reform.

Mr. Ancram: Well in excess of 100 representations have already been received from individuals and organisations. The Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714) invited comment by a closing date of 31 July 1986 and I look forward to receiving detailed responses as soon as possible from a wide range of Scottish interests.

Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the National Federation of Self-Employed to discuss current proposals for reform of the rating system in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I met representatives of the National Federation of Self-Employed and Small Businesses Ltd. on Friday 14 March. Discussion covered the proposals for the future of non-domestic rates set out in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714). I explained to the federation representatives that our immediate proposals offered stability in the rate burdens of business ratepayers in Scotland and that in the longer term our business ratepayers need not fear the impact overall of a uniform rate poundage throughout Great Britain for non-domestic property.

Social and Employment Policies

40. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to initiate changes in social and employment policies in Scotland in the light of the conclusion of the report of Dr. Martin Plant asserting a link between unemployment and drug addiction, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: As the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs has recognised, there are many reasons for the increase in drug misuse. The conclusions in Dr. Plant's report do not establish any need to revise the Government's social and economic policies within which a high priority is attached to tackling the problem of drug misuse.

Hospitals

41. Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospitals have been closed in Scotland since 1979; and how much has been spent on hospital capital projects in the same period.

Mr. John MacKay: Since 1979, 27 hospitals have been closed. Capital expenditure on the hospital and community health services in Scotland since 1979-80 has amounted to £614 million. Of this sum, it is estimated that around £402 million has been taken up in the construction of new hospitals and in the upgrading of existing hospital buildings.

Agricultural Research and Development

42. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has had in support of the Government's proposals to make changes in the system of agricultural research and development in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Our strategy for agricultural research and development was set out in a paper issued in December 1985, following consideration of a consultative document issued in May 1985. Comments on the paper were not specifically invited, although most of the reaction reported to officials of the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland has been favourable. Only the proposals related to the new Macaulay institute have proved contentious, and most of the comments made on that have been concerned with the proposed location rather than the remit, which has been widely welcomed.

Housing (Capital Allocations)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the housing revenue account capital allocation for each local authority in Scotland for the years 1974-75 to 1985-86 inclusive, all figures at 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will provide the housing revenue account capital allocation and non-housing revenue account capital allocation for Scotland for the years 1974-75 to 1985-86 inclusive, at 1985-86 outturn prices;

(2) if he will provide the capital allocation for the Scottish Special Housing Association for the years 1974-75 to 1985-86 inclusive, all figures at 1985-86 outturn prices;

(3) if he will provide the capital allocation to the Housing Corporation in Scotland for the years 1974-75 to 1985-86 inclusive, all figures at 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Year	Housing Revenue Account £ million	Non-Housing Revenue Account £ million	Scottish Special Housing Association £ million	Housing Corporation in Scotland £ million
1974-75	n/a	n/a	n/a	15·2
1975-76	n/a	n/a	n/a	28·5
1976-77	n/a	n/a	n/a	38·8
1977-78	n/a	n/a	n/a	56·6
1978-79	408·8	94·3	n/a	59·3
1979-80	372·5	78·5	64·6	78·3
1980-81	315·0	80·7	57·1	86·3
1981-82	309·2	95·2	56·5	105·1
1982-83	323·0	123·1	57·8	125·3
1983-84	343·2	108·4	55·3	121·2
1984-85	260·6	182·4	53·0	107·4
1985-86	*287·0	*127·4	50·0	102·4

Notes:

1. All figures are expressed in constant prices by applying the GDP deflator (base year 1985-86).
2. Local authorities did not receive annual block capital allocations for the Housing Revenue Account and the non-Housing Revenue Account until 1978-79. Similarly the Scottish Special Housing Association did not receive an annual allocation until 1979-80.
3. The figures given may not correspond exactly to the public expenditure outturn for each year under these various headings because there may have been overspending or underspending of allocations.
4. Capital allocations to local authorities have, since 1982-83, been made on a net basis: the Secretary of State provides a net allocation in addition to which local authorities can spend the actual net capital receipts realised in the year in question. However, the figures for 1982-83 and subsequent years are given on a gross basis, that is, inclusive of actual net capital receipts or, for 1985-86, estimates of actual receipts. The split between the Housing Revenue Account and non Housing Revenue Account might also change in 1985-86 because local authorities have a measure of flexibility between the two blocks. The Housing Revenue Account and non-Housing Revenue Account figures for 1985-86 (marked *) are estimates for both these reasons.

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the capital allocation to the new town development corporations in Scotland for the years 1974-75 to 1985-86 inclusive, all figures at 1985-86 outturn prices.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The corporations are given two separate capital allocations: housing and other environmental services. Figures for both are given in the following table:

	£ million
	Housing	Other Environmental Services
1974-75	N/A	N/A
1975-76	N/A	N/A
1976-77	93·9	48·7
1977-78	81·2	39·0
1978-79	77·2	42·5
1979-80	63·6	24·9
1980-81	51·1	40·4
1981-82	45·2	46·4
1982-83	29·8	39·0
1983-84	22·7	38·0
1984-85	26·9	37·3
1985-86	21·1	32·0

Notes

1. Figures are given in constant prices by applying the GDP deflator base year 1985-86.
2. Figures for capital allocations to new towns in 1974-75 and 1975-76 are not available.
3. All figures are gross, ie inclusive of net receipts.

Scottish Special Housing Association

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide the total level of expenditure by the Scottish Special Housing Association from its housing revenue account on loan charges, management, repairs and maintenance and other expenditure for the years 1978-79 to 1985-86 inclusive.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

£ million

	Loan charges	Management‡	Repairs and maintenance†	Other expenditure
1978-79	33·6	3·3	15·5	1·0
1979-80	35·7	4·0	16·8	1·2

* The figures were produced by applying the GDP deflator (base year 1985-86).
† Estimate

Housing (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of people on district council housing waiting lists in each district in Scotland at 31 March in each of the years from 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Ancram: The information available centrally is neither complete nor compiled on a uniform basis. I must therefore refer the hon. Member directly to the local authorities in which he is interested.

Health Boards

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the indicative allocations of support finance to each health board for 1986-87, expressing such allocations also in terms of (a) new projects and (b) commitment to existing projects.

Mr. John MacKay: The Scottish Home and Health Department notified health boards on 7 March of the indicative levels of expenditure for support finance for 1986-87. Details for each board are shown in the table. Remaining expenditure on projects adopted on or before 30 April 1985 is met from central funds. Expenditure on projects adopted since 30 April 1985 and on new projects is met from health boards' overall allocations. The levels of expenditure notified to health boards on 7 March are considered desirable in the light of the boards' population and financial allocations. They show an increase of 4·5 per cent. over equivalent levels for 1985-86.

Prison Population

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current prison population in Scottish prisons; and how this compares with each of the past 10 years.

Mr. John MacKay: The number of inmates in Scottish penal establishments on 11 March 1986 was 5,767. Comparative figures for each of the past 10 years are as follows:

	Number
12 March 1985	5,337
13 March 1984	5,013
15 March 1983	5,324
16 March 1982	4,855
17 March 1981	4,917
17 March 1980	5,142
13 March 1979	4,477
14 March 1978	5,143
15 March 1977	4,945
16 March 1976	5,145

Manufacturing Employment

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many manufacturing jobs have been lost in Scotland in each of the past six years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The number of employees in employment in manufacturing in Scotland is estimated to have declined as shown in the table.

Fall in number of employees in employment in manufacturing

Year ended September	Number
1980	54,000
1981	48,000
1982	30,000
1983	*27,000
1984	*9,000
1985	*4,000

* Provisional.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many manufacturing jobs have been created in Scotland so far in the current year; and how many have been created in Scotland in each of the past six years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Comprehensive estimates of job creation in manufacturing industries in Scotland are not available. New jobs associated with offers of regional selective assistance (RSA) to manufacturing firms in Scotland in the current year and for each of the six past calendar years are given in the table. These are in addition to offers of RSA which have been made to safeguard existing employment in Scotland.

Year	Number of new jobs
1986*	945
1985	11,268
1984	12,615
1983	10,159
1982	9,475
1981	10,195
1980	13,487

* To end February.

Agricultural Employment

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobs in the agricultural sector have been lost in Scotland in each of the past six years.

Mr. John MacKay: The June agricultural census provides each year a count of workers on Scottish farms. The net changes in regularly employed labour for the last six years are as follows:

	Full-time regular labour	Part-time regular labour
1979-80	−784	−72
1980-81	−1,843	−309
1981-82	−39	−255
1982-83	−406	−147
1983-84	−1,040	−170
1984-85	−541	+47

Crimes of Violence

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many crimes of violence have taken place in Scotland in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Teachers (Pay and Conditions of Service)

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will now announce the names of the persons appointed to the committee of inquiry into the pay, conditions of service and management of the teaching profession in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: I have appointed the following five persons to form the committee:

Sir Peter Main (chairman), formerly chairman, The Boots Co plc, member of Scottish Development Agency

Professor Christopher Blake, Bonar professor of applied economics, University of Dundee

Sister Maire T. Gallagher, headteacher, Notre Dame high school, Dumbarton

James S. Gordon CBE, managing director, Radio Clyde

Robert G.E. Peggie CBE, chief executive (until 31 March 1986), Lothian regional council

The Committee will begin its work immediately. As I told the House on Thursday 6 March, I have asked it to report by the end of the summer.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have applied for, and how many have been granted, exceptionally severe weather payments during the current winter by each local office of his Department in the Greater London area.

Mr. Newton: Separate information is not collected on the number of claims. Information on payments awarded is not yet available, as I explained in my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 24 February at column 470.

Invalidity Pension

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each quarter since January 1980 and for each Department of Health and Social Security region, how many people in receipt of invalidity pension have had their cases reviewed; and how many such reviews resulted in the payment of invalidity pension ceasing.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind, perhaps he would write to me.

Yorkshire Health Authorities, (Chairman)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will identify the chairmen of the district health authorities in the Yorkshire regional health authorities appointed or re-appointed from April; if he will state their age on appointment; and what salary or emolument they receive annually for their duties.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authority chairmen are not paid a salary but are entitled to receive an honorarium of £10,326 a year or to claim financial loss allowance. They may also claim travel and subsistance allowances. The other information requested on those appointed or reappointed to serve as district health authority chairmen within the Yorkshire regional health authority from 1 April is as follows:

District	Chairman (age)
Airedale	D.Hanson (61)
Bradford	J. Royston-Moore (64)
Calderdale	A. Templeton (53)

District	Chairman (age)
Dewsbury	I. F. Pattison (42)
Grimsby	R. Blair (60)
Huddersfield	P. E. Wood (56)
Leeds Western	J. O. Arnold (57)
Northallerton	Very Rev. B. Omerod (49)
Pontefract	Co. R. Widdowson (50)
Scarborough	R. F. Hinton (54)
Scunthorpe	J. P. Mason (45)
Wakefield	Sir Jack Smart (65)

Mr. L. H. Hulley

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will investigate the reason why the Department of Health and Social Security records division at Newcastle upon Tyne has not yet replied to a letter dated 22 January from Mr. L. H. Hulley of 48 Burnthill Lane, Rugeley requesting details of contributions paid from April 1974 to April 1977.

Mr. Major: It is the responsibility of DHSS local office staff to deal with inquiries of this nature. The letter dated 22 January was received by DHSS records branch Newcastle on 24 January and forwarded to the DHSS local office at Cannock to answer. After inquiries were made a reply was issued on 18 March 1986.

Family Credit

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the extra cost to employers of paying family credit to their employees.

Mr. Newton: It is not practicable to estimate any extra administrative costs for employers since they will cope differently with the payments depending on their payroll arrangements, and because the number of employees involved will vary. Many employers will have no family credit recipients amongst their employees. We have undertaken to keep the payment procedures as simple as possible for employers, and thereby keep any extra work to a minimum. We shall be consulting further with employers' organisations and others about the details.

Health Authorities

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) women and (b) men serve on (i) regional health authorities and (ii) district health authorities at the latest available date.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. Some of it is not held centrally. District health authority members are appointed by the appropriate regional health authority and relevant local authorities. The hon. Member may therefore wish to seek this information from the chairman of the regional health authority concerned. Of the current regional health authority members 168 are men and 57 are women.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the numbers of district health authority chairmen and chairwomen who wished to continue in office but who were not re-appointed in each year since 1979, together with their length of service.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 13 March 1986, c. 567]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) on 17 March at columns 57-58.

Adult Training Centres

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many adult training centre places per 100,000 population were provided by each local authority during each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information available is of adult training centre places per 1,000 population aged 16 to 64 for each local authority, which is published in "Adult Training Centres for the Mentally Handicapped and Day Centres for the Mentally Ill—England", copies of which are in the Library.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many mentally handicapped people, and of what age, have attended adult training centres or social education centres for each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested has not been collected centrally since 1980. Information up to that date was published in "Adult Training Centres for the Mentally Handicapped and Day Centres for the Mentally Ill, the Elderly and the Younger Physically Handicapped — England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many mentally handicapped people have requested places in adult training centres or social education centres by region during each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not available centrally.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many mentally handicapped adults have been discharged permanently from long-stay mental handicap hospitals and units during each of the last five years for which figures are available;

(2) how many mentally handicapped children have been discharged permanently from long-stay hospitals and units during each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: Statistics of the total number of discharges (including transfers) of adults and children from mental handicap hospitals and units are available in the series of DHSS booklets "Mental Health Statistics for England", copies of which are in the Library. Discharges cannot usually be identified as permanent at the time they take place. Specialist units provide an important service for mentally handicapped people, in terms of short-term care, including planned respite care, and assessment of needs and development of programmes. The large number of short stays in such units is reflected in the figures.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many mentally handicapped children were living in local authority hostels and homes, private hostels and homes and those run by voluntary organisations during each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information available centrally relates to the numbers of mentally handicapped children who are supported by local authorities in hostels and homes run by the local authorities or by private or voluntary organisations. This information and that of number of places is published in "Homes and Hostels for the Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped—England". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for how many mentally handicapped people his Department has issued guardianship orders during each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: Guardianship orders are issued by local authority social services departments and the number of new guardianship orders issued for mentally handicapped people in England for each of the last five years for which figures are available are given in the table.

New guardianship orders during the year ending 31 March

Year	*Mentally handicapped
1981	38
1982	27
1983	24
1984	28
1985	33

* The term mental impairment has been used since 1983.

Nurses

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many qualified state enrolled nurses and state registered nurses were trained in the private sector in each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

NHS (Staff Superannuation)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each year since 1979 the total employers' contribution made towards the superannuation of (a) consultants and (b) other medical staff in the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that details of employers' superannuation contributions attributable to individual staff groups are not available centrally.

Health Authorities (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will place in the Library the returns submitted by health authorities giving their estimates of the savings made following competitive tendering exercises;

(2) what information health authorities make known to his Department about the results of competitive tendering exercises beyond the service tendered, the hospital concerned, the successful tenderer and the estimated saving, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: The quarterly reports from regional health authorities contain details of tendering exercises, including the previous annual costs and percentages saved and progress on tendering achieved by each district. It has been our practice to make available information on progress made and savings achieved, based on these reports. I am unable to agree to placing the full reports in the Library because they contain confidential management and commercial information.

Association of Carers

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what grants he is making to the Association of Carers for the financial years 1985-86 and 1987-88.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has awarded a three-year grant to the Association of Carers amounting to £25,000 for each of the three years 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 as a contribution towards its central adminstrative costs.

Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Association of Carers was informed of its grant allocation for the financial year 1985-86.

Mr. Whitney: The letter informing the Association of Carers of the award of the grant for 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 was issued on 14 March. Three interim payments of £5,000 each were made in May, September and December 1985.

Institute of Medical Laboratory Sciences

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what changes are to be made to the Whitley council regulations following the restructuring of membership grades by the Institute of Medical Laboratory Sciences.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that the Institute of Medical Laboratory Sciences has reached no decision on changes in its membership structure.

Mr. J. Edwards

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the reasons why the war pension case of Mr. J. Edwards of Stoke on Trent, which was referred to his Department in October 1985, has not yet been resolved.

Mr. Major: On 27 January 1986 Mr. Edwards and the Department made a joint application to the president of the pensions appeal tribunals for the decision of the tribunal in Mr. Edwards' case to be set aside. The president advised Mr. Edwards and the Department of his decision on 6 February 1986. There is no further action for the Department to take in this matter.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many babies have been born with cystic fibrosis in England and Wales in each of the last five years; and what research projects have been financed by his Department to detect the gene responsible for this disease.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not collected centrally on the number of sufferers from cystic fibrosis, which occurs about once in every 2,000 live births. The Department is not currently funding any research in this area. I understand that the Medical Research Council is supporting research relevant to the detection of the gene responsible for this disease.

War Pensions

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many second world war ex-service men have, during the last five years, had their pensions backdated resulting from new discoveries as to the cause of injuries suffered during their active service in 1939-45; how far they have been backdated; and how much Second World War ex-service men currently receive as a war pension for damage to eyes.

Mr. Major: The information about backdated pensions is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The amount of war pension for damage to eyes depends upon the extent of the damage. The current pension for loss of vision of one eye, without complications or disfigurement and the other being normal, is £18·75 a week. Pension for total loss of sight is £62·50 a week. Supplementary war pension allowances may be payable in addition to these amounts.

AIDS

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the Terrence Higgins Trust about the newspaper advertisements which his Department has made on acquired immune deficiency syndrome and if he intends to amend the information contained in these advertisements as a result of such representations.

Mr. Hayhoe: None.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give details of the number of staff now involved in seeing that employers are operating correctly the statutory sick pay scheme.

Mr. Major: Manpower equivalent to 741 full-time posts is currently provided within local office complements for the monitoring of the statutory sick pay scheme.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any voluntary agreement has been reached with United States Tobacco for the incorporation of a health warning on the packaging and promotional material of Skoal Bandits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No. My hon. Friend will, however, be aware that we are supporting the Bill currently passing through the House which seeks to make it illegal to sell Skoal Bandits to children under 16 years of age.

Dr. A. J. Blowers

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reappoint Dr. A. J. Blowers for a further term of office as chairman of the West Surrey and North-East Hampshire district health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986, c. 369]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amery) on 17 March at columns 57-58.

Venereal Diseases

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what statistics are available to him as to the national incidence of venereal diseases amongst persons aged between 15 and 20 years of age, and what trend do they show;

(2) what is the current trend of the nation-wide incidence of venereal diseases.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 217-18]: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member all the information that he seeks. Information by age group is collected centrally only for primary and secondary syphilis and for post-pubertal gonorrhoea, and is available for the age group 16 to 19. The information is given in the table. Trends in the numbers of new cases from 1973 to 1983 have been published in "Statistical Bulletin 3/85", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Rotherham Health Authority

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for what reasons the services of Mr. Vernon Thornes as chairman of the Rotherham health authority are being terminated.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 13 March 1986, c. 570]: It would not be proper for me to comment on individual appointments. In making such appointments, however, it is important to bring in some new people to provide fresh insights into the service. The decisions taken not to reappoint some chairmen in no way reflects on them personally or on the genuine and valuable service that they have given over the past four years.

Unemployed Persons (Benefits)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the cost of paying benefits to the unemployed and their dependents, including national insurance, supplementary benefit and housing benefit for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986, c. 229-30]: The estimated cost of benefits paid in respect of unemployment for each year since 1978-79 is as follows:

	£ million
1978-79	1,340
1979-80	1,420
1980-81	2,470
1981-82	3,960
1982-83	4,950
1983-84	5,600
1984-85	6,200
1985-86	6,650

These figures relate to unemployment benefit, supplementary benefit and certificated housing benefit. The figures do not include standard housing benefit or other benefits which can continue to be paid if the recipient finds employment.

Cancer (Aldermaston and Burghfield)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he expects either the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment or the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to produce their findings about incidences of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer among the under 25-year-olds living in Aldermaston and Burghfield by the end of 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 321]: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) expects to publish its findings from a study of cancer incidence and deaths in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales by the end of 1986. The study includes an analysis of data on the incidence of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer among the under 25-year-olds living in Bradfield rural district (includes Aldermaston and Burghfield) between 1961 and 1980.

It is too early to predict when the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment will complete its assessment, which will be dependent on the availability of the OPCS findings.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Namibian independence following the recent United Nations Security Council debate, and on the role of the Contact Group of Nations.

Mrs. Chalker: We remain committed to United Nations Security Council resolution (SCR) 435, the internationally agreed basis for a Namibia settlement, and we support the current negotiations aimed at achieving its implementation.

The Contact Group has no active role at present, but stands ready to help where this would be constructive.

Hong Kong

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent discussions between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of the People's Republic of China about progress on matters relating to Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: The third meeting of the Sino-British Joint Liaison Group took place in Hong Kong from 11 to 14 March. It was a successful meeting. I have arranged for copies of the communiqué to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had recently with the Government of the People's Republic of China about the granting of Chinese citizenship to non-ethnic Chinese citizens of Hong Kong after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: This is a matter which has been discussed with the Chinese Government in the Joint Liasion Group. They confirmed that non-Chinese who meet the legal requirements under Chinese nationality law may apply for Chinese nationality, and that such cases would be dealt with by the appropriate authorities.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mrs. Chalker: The usual forecast was deposited in the House today. At present eight formal and one informal meeting of the Council are scheduled for April 1986.

At the informal meeting of Finance Ministers on 5-6 April Ministers will be invited to take a decision on a Community mandate for discussion in the OECD consensus group of further improvements in discipline in the use of tied aid credits for developing countries.

The Research Council will meet on 8 April. Initial consideration will be given to the 1987 to 1991 framework programme for research and development in the field of science and technology. The Council will also consider the financial aspects of and future guidelines for the European Community's joint research centre. The Council will also prepare for a conciliation procedure with the European Parliament on research and development programmes in the fields of environment and materials.

The Council will consider a report by industrialists on ESPRIT (European Strategic Programme for Research and Development in Information Technology). This follows the requirement of a Council decision of February 1984 that a report of ESPRIT should be submitted to the Council at the halfway stage.

The Internal Market Council, also meeting on 8 April, will continue its work on the action programme for completion of the common market. The Consumer Affairs Council will meet on the same day. It will consider a resolution on the future orientation of EC policy for the protection and promotion of the interests of consumers and take note of progress in discussions on the consumer credit directive which seeks to achieve minimum standards of protection for consumers in credit transactions.

The Council will be invited to take note of progress made to date on the Commission's 1984 proposal to extend price indications and to discuss the future direction of work. The Council is expected to adopt a Community system of information on accidents involving consumer products.

The Development Council on 17 April will consider the structural aspects of development in Africa (including the Community's rehabilitation plan and the fight against desertification), food aid and food security in developing countries, the role of women in development and the promotion of developing countries' trade.

The Foreign Affairs Council meeting on 21 and 22 April will discuss preparations for the proposed new round of trade negotiations in the GATT and may also review the Community's trade relations with the United States of America. It will review progress in negotiations with Mediterranean partners on the adaptation of their co-operation-association agreements and may also consider a number of outstanding issues in preparation for an EC-Turkey Association Council in the autumn. The Council may review progress in negotiations with the ACP states on the guaranteed price for ACP sugar in 1985-86.

On 21 and 22 April the Agricultural Council is expected to consider the 1986 agriculture price proposals. The Council may also discuss pesticide residues and a prohibition directive on ethylene oxide.

The ACP-EEC Council will meet in Barbados on 24 and 25 April to consider ACP-EEC trade and aid issues arising in the context of the Lomé convention.

The Economic and Finance Council is expected to meet on 28 April to establish the budget reference framework for 1987 and to consider a report from the high level working party on tax approximation.

British Embassy, Japan

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what promotion efforts for British goods and services are made by the British embassy in Japan.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's embassy in Tokyo, and the British consulate-general in Osaka are actively involved in providing the normal range of export promotion services to help United Kingdom firms to establish themselves in the Japanese market. Special promotional activities in 1985 included support for 18 outward missions, for joint venture participations at 13 trade fairs and exhibitions, and for specialised store promotions in 25 branches of seven different department stores. To promote the interests of the services sector Her Majesty's embassy has on its staff a senior officer seconded from the Bank of England.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in the British embassy in Japan deal specifically with commercial matters.

Mr. Eggar: Seven UK-based and 20 locally-engaged members of Her Majesty's embassy in Tokyo as well as two UK-based and seven locally-engaged members of the consulate-general in Osaka deal specifically with commercial matters. In addition, Her Majesty's ambassador devotes a considerable amount of his time to commercial work.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the annual cost of the British embassy in Japan.

Mr. Eggar: Excluding FCO headquarters overheads, the cost of the British missions in Japan was:

	£ million
	1983-84	1984-85
HBM embassy Tokyo	5·2	5·9
Consulate-General Osaka	0·5	0·7

NORTHERN IRELAND

Education and Library Boards

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what budget cuts are faced by each Northern Ireland education and library board in 1986-87.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. The total recurrent budget available for area boards in 1986-87 is £216 million—an increase of 5·5 per cent.

Housing Executive

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) why the Housing Executive has cut planned housing starts for 1986-87 from 1,000 to 850;

(2) why the Housing Executive has cut planned improvement schemes for 1,200 to 400.

Mr. Boyson: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chairman that the figures quoted refer to the executive's programme proposals for the Belfast city council area published in draft during February. The Housing Executive is planning its activities in 1986-87 within the total resources available to it. Public expenditure on housing in Northern Ireland in 1986-87 will continue to be at a proportionally higher level than elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

Day of Protest

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the report of the Chief Constable on Royal Ulster Constabulary conduct during the day of protest on 3 March will be made public.

Mr. Scott: My right hon. Friend recently received a detailed and confidential report from the Chief Constable on the policing aspects of the protest on 3 March, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary's manpower commitments on the day. It is not proposed to publish this document.

Rates

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends to take any legal action against Northern Ireland councillors who have refused to strike a rate.

Mr. Needham: It will be for the local government auditor in each of the district council areas in question to consider what action, if any, should be taken.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on how much revenue has been lost due to the failure of various Northern Ireland councils to strike a rate.

Mr. Needham: As the rate to be struck is for the financial year 1986-87 no revenue has as yet been lost.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement about the implementation of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: A further meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference took place in Belfast on 11 March. It was useful and constructive and I gave a press conference afterwards. The issues discussed are set out in the joint statement issued after the meeting which I have placed in the Library.

Housing Executive

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay the latest accounts for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive before Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The accounts of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive for 1984-85 together with the reports of the Local Government Auditor and of the Comptroller and Auditor-General thereon were laid today (Cmnd. 9757). The matters raised have been discussed between the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland and the Housing Executive and the agreed follow-up action will be monitored. On this occasion the report is generally encouraging, but it also identifies some weaknesses in systems both in housing benefit administration and contracts procedures.

I have arranged for copies of a statement by the Housing Executive in response to the Local Government Auditor's report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Gosford Castle Hotel

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grant was paid to the properties of Gosford Castle hotel, Markethill, County Armagh; if this hotel is still operational; and if he will make a statement on the present status of the grant to this hotel.

Dr. Boyson: Between 1983 and 1985 historic buildings grant amounting to £34,797 has been paid in respect of repairs to Gosford Castle which has since ceased to be operated as a hotel. Further payment of grant is dependent upon satisfactory completion of approved works.

Russell Court Hotel

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants were paid to the Semi-State Authority from the Republic of Ireland to develop the Russell Court hotel, Lisburn road, Belfast; and if he will make a statement on the status of this grant now that this hotel is closed.

Dr. Boyson: Grants totalling £587,000 were paid to the Russell Court Hotel Limited during 1971-1973. When the building was sold for non-hotel purposes, the Department of Economic Development recovered £48,942 under the terms of the grant offer.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff are now employed in the secretariat to the Anglo-Irish Conference at Maryfield, Belfast; what is the total estimated cost of its operation during the first three months since it commenced work; and on what basis the respective proportions of these costs will be contributed, respectively, by the Northern Ireland Office and the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Scott: The United Kingdom side of the secretariat currently has nine staff, including support staff. The number of staff on the Irish side is a matter for the Irish Government.

The estimated running costs up to 9 March 1986 were £109,600. The costs of the secretariat will be shared by the two Governments. The basis of the apportionment of costs has not yet been determined.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many workers were employed in the tobacco industry in Northern Ireland in June 1979; and how many at the latest available date.

Dr. Boyson [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1986, c. 439]: The number of employees in the tobacco industry is as follows:

	Number
June 1979	6,129
December 1985	4,215

These figures relate to producers with more than 25 employees.

DEFENCE

Departmental Supplies

Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average time it takes his Department to pay suppliers of goods and services to his Department.

Mr. Lee: The average time taken to pay suppliers of goods or services to my Department is four to six weeks, from delivery to payment.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether permission was sought from Her Majesty's Government by the United States of America to discuss the contents of the memorandum of understanding at a strategic defence initiative office seminar on 25 March.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

NATIONAL FINANCE

General Practitioners (Expenses)

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give for each year since 1979 the total tax allowances given for the expenses of general practitioners; breaking the figures down by type of expense.

Mr. Moore: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Family Income

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will present in tabular form data for the financial years 1978-79 and 1986-87 on (a) the tax threshold for (i) a single person, (ii) a married couple and (iii) a married couple with two children and (b) the eligibility for supplementary benefit for each of these groups taking the latest data on average housing costs and assuming for the two child family one child is above and one below the age of 11 years; and what is the eligibility for family income supplement for a family with two children.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Finance Bill

Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Finance Bill will be published.

Mr. MacGregor: The Finance Bill will be published on Wednesday 16 April.

Drugs Smuggling

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the level of Customs and Excise manpower available at airports and seaports to carry out drug searches and seizures in the British Isles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986]: The level of Customs and Excise manpower is kept under constant review. The Government give a very high priority to the fight against drugs smuggling, and there has been a large increase in the number of Customs preventive officers, whose main priority is drugs detection. At 31 March 1986 it is estimated that there will be 3,000 preventive officers compared with 2,721 two years earlier; and a further 300 preventive officers will be appointed during the course of 1986-87. Additionally, the number of specialist drugs investigators has more than doubled since 1979, from 121 to 262 (estimated) at 31 March 1986; and a further 35 are to be added in 1986-87.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the percentage of passengers at airports and seaports in the British Isles who are checked on a random basis for the possession of drugs.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 25 March 1986]: The preventive checks made upon incoming passengers at airports and seaports are to detect the illegal importation of a wide range of goods including, for example, those liable to Customs and Excise duties, prohibited animals, firearms and drugs.

The percentage of passengers checked varies from place to place and from time to time and it is not possible therefore to give a reliable estimate of the overall figure.

Income Tax

Mr. Straw asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing (a) the proportion in percentage terms, (b) the amount in current prices and (c) the amount in constant 1985-86 prices of personal income taken by taxation and rates for the year 1986-87, taking account of any changes announced in his Budget statement and any previously announced changes, and for each of the years 1978-79, 1979-80, 1980-81, 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 for each level of average earnings, each category of taxpayer, and each category of taxation and rates, in the manner of the answers of 3 April 1985, Official Report, column 676, and of 2 July 1985, Official Report, column 112.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 18 March 1986]: Figures for all the years requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures for the years 1984-85 to 1986-87 are in the table.

Notes to Tables

Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that households have no other tax relief apart from the standard allowances. Earners, including working wives, are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate. The figures for NI contributions are financial year averages.

2. Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. The levels of average earnings in each year are given below. The figures for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are illustrative and assume growth of 8 and 7 per cent. respectively.

	£ per week
1984-85	185·00
1985-86	*199·80
1986-87	*213·80

* assumption

3. The married couple with both working is assumed to have joint earnings of the various multiples of average earnings. In calculating disposable income it is assumed that the joint earnings are split between husband and wife in the ratio 60:40.

4. For the married couple with two children, the percentage column expresses taxes etc. as percentages of gross earnings plus child benefit. For this purpose, financial year averages are used for child benefit.

5. The estimates of indirect taxes are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved. They are derived from the 1984 family expenditure survey. Estimates cannot reliably be made outside the income range for which figures are shown. There are also quite wide variations in spending patterns between households with similar incomes and compositions and, because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between the estimates obtained from different year's family expenditure surveys.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Council of Europe

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations have been given by the EEC Council to EEC participation in the work and activities of the Council of Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The EC Council of Ministers has not discussed this matter recently but there have been useful meetings between representatives of the EC Council and the Council of Europe to improve co-ordination between them.

United States Export Denials List

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what status his Department accords to the use of the United States export denials list in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The United States denied parties list has no status in United Kingdom law. Companies should contact the Department of Trade and Industry if they appear on the list in the course of legitimate trading.

Greece

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Greece.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend had most valuable and wide-ranging discussions with Mr. Papandreou and other Greek Ministers as well as the Leader of the Opposition. These confirmed our friendly bilateral relationship and our interest in trading and industrial collaboration with Greece. It contributed to the sort of understanding vital between NATO and EC partners.

My right hon. and learned Friend stressed the importance of Greece's role in maintaining NATO solidarity on the south-eastern flank and Britain's commitment to good relations with all our Alliance partners. On Cyprus he underlined our support for the Secretary General's initiative. On the EC, he outlined British priorities for our forthcoming presidency.

On Sunday 23 March in the company of Cretan veterans at the Commonwealth war cemetery at Souda bay, my right hon. and learned Friend paid tribute to the British and Commonwealth soldiers who fell in Crete during the second world war.

Conference Costs (Wilton Park, Sussex)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what finance was made available by his Department for the administration, conference organisation and provision of speakers at Wilton park, Sussex, in the last financial year; and what is his estimate of the cost for 1986-87.

Mr. Eggar: The net cost of the Wilton house conference centre at Steyning, West Sussex, venue for the Wilton park cycle of international conferences is estimated to be £434,160 in 1985-86. The comparable estimated figure for 1986-87 is £441,940.

Military and Security Training

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the military and security training given in the United Kingdom in the last 10 years to personnel from Uganda; and what steps were taken by Her Majesty's Government to seek to ensure that such personnel were not later involved in violation of human rights in Uganda.

Mr. Renton: The information requested by the hon. Member is not available in the precise form requested. However, between 1980 and 1985, 24 Ugandan students received training at military establishments in this country. Since the fall of the Obote regime no Ugandan students have been trained here.

Deployment of students after their training was a matter for the Ugandan authorities. However we have in this period taken every opportunity, at Ministerial and official level, to make known to successive Ugandan Administrations, our grave concern about human rights and to press them to take action to prevent abuses.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give the number of countries whose personnel received in the last 10 years military and security training in the United Kingdom; and if he will name the countries concerned.

Mr. Renton: The information requested by the hon. Member is not available in the precise form requested. However, over the past three years personnel from some 89 countries have received training in military establishments in this country. The countries are as follows:

Algeria
Australia
Bahamas
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belgium
Belize
Bermuda
Botswana
Brazil
Brunei
Burma
Canada
Chile
Denmark
Ecuador
Egypt
Eire
Ethiopia
Federal Republic of Germany
Fiji
Finland
France
Gambia
Ghana
Greece
Guyana
Hong Kong

Iceland
India
Indonesia
Iran
Iraq
Israel
Italy
Jamaica
Japan
Jordan
Kenya
Kuwait
Lebanon
Lesotho
Libya
Malawi
Malaysia
Maldives
Malta
Mauritius
Monserrat
Mozambique
Nepal
Netherlands
New Zealand
Nigeria
Norway
Oman
Pakistan
Philippines
Portugal
Qatar
St Kitts
St Lucia
St Vincent
Saudi Arabia
Senegal
Sierra Leone
Singapore
South Korea
Spain
Sri Lanka
Sudan
Swaziland
Sweden
Switzerland
Tanzania
Thailand
Trinidad and Tobago
Tunisia
Turkey
Uganda
United Arab Emirates
United States of America
Venezuela
Yemen Arab Republic
Yugoslavia
Zaire
Zambia
Zimbabwe

Records of other miscellaneous types of military assistance are not held centrally on a worldwide basis.

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will introduce legislation to ensure that training in military and security matters is not given in the United Kingdom to personnel from countries where it has been demonstrated that human rights abuses occur, and to ensure that military equipment is not exported to those countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: No. When considering whether to offer training in the United Kingdom under military training assistance schemes full account is taken of the human rights situation in the country concerned. We would not agree to train people if in our judgment this was likely to contribute to violations of human rights. Similarly in deciding whether or not to grant a licence for the export of defence equipment to a particular country full account is taken of the human rights situation and we would not agree to the supply of any item which in our judgment was likely to be used for internal repression or to violate human rights.

Mr. Colin Moore

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the diplomatic status and employment of Mr. Colin Moore at the United States embassy in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that Mr. Colin Moore, a British national, is employed in the commercial section of the United States embassy. He has not been formally notified to us. He does not have diplomatic status.

Kashmir

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to seek to facilitate implementation of the 1948 United Nation's resolution regarding the disputed territory of Kashmir.

Mr. Eggar: None. The question of Kashmir is one to be decided bilaterally between India and Pakistan.

Turks and Caicos Islands

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in the Turks and Caicos Islands following the burning down of a Government office building on 31 December 1985.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: On new year's eve 1985 certain Government offices in the Turks and Caicos Islands, a United Kingdom dependent territory, were gutted by fire. Arson was suspected and in the light of preliminary investigations carried out by the Royal Turks and Caicos Islands police force, which brought to light evidence suggesting not only arson but a conspiracy to commit this and possible other serious offences, I have decided, in consultation with the Governor of the Islands, that it is necessary, in the interests of the good government of the territory, to set up a commission of inquiry.

The commission will be headed by Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper QC and its terms of reference will be:

(a) to inquire into the alleged arson of Government offices on Grand Turk; and into

(b) allegations of corruption in the public works department; and into

(c) any other matters related thereto.

The commission will aim to submit its report by 1 June.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Inner City Strategy

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what official visits he intends to make to the west midlands to discuss with local councillors the Government's inner city strategy for improving job opportunities in areas of high unemployment.

Mr. Waddington: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to make a further visit to the west midlands for this specific purpose.

Community Relations Councils

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are currently employed by community relations councils; and what are their costs to the Government in terms of full-time, part-time, Commission for Racial Equality funded, local authority funded and Manpower Services Commission funded, respectively.

Mr. Waddington: I understand from the Commission for Racial Equality that in the financial year 1984-85, the latest period for which the information is readily available, it funded 180 community relations officers and the full-time equivalent of 3½ support staff. In addition, in the same year, the full-time equivalent of 428½ support staff were funded by local authorities, 305 by the Manpower Service Commission, 37 under the youth training scheme and four from other non-Government sources.

The most recent information about cost that is readily available is that given in appendix 10 to the Commission's report for 1984. That shows that the cost to the Commission for Racial Equality was £2,562,795 in 1984-85 and to local authorities £2,854,405 in 1983-84.

The cost to the other organisations is not available centrally.

Convicted Terrorists

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek early agreement among the nations of the European Economic Community on a definition of circumsances in which a convicted terrorist is returned to his country of origin.

Mr. Mellor: Arrangements among European Community countries already provide for the extradition of convicted terrorists. The Council of Europe convention on the suppression of terrorism also provides that fugitives accused or convicted of certain serious offences may not avoid extradition by claiming that their offences were political. We shall continue to press for the broadest application of that convention by our European partners. In addition, the United Kingdom has ratified the Council of Europe convention on the transfer of sentenced prisoners, which enables foreign prisoners to serve their sentences in their own country. This convention is open to all European Community countries, and a draft agreement among member states is at an advanced stage of preparation. We have previously explained that public policy considerations may cause us to refuse the transfer of a terrorist or any other prisoner who had been convicted of particularly horrific crimes.

Terrorism

Mr. George asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the date and nature of terrorist incidents in the United Kingdom, showing Northern Ireland separately for each of the last three years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers and immigration officers, and of what rank, were involved in operations in connection with alleged breaches of immigration control (a) in October 1985 at the San Lorenze restaurant, Worple road mews, London SW19, (b) in November 1985 at La Cabanita dancing club, Gloucester road, London SW7, (c) in November 1985 at the Carretto restaurant, Notting Hill, London, (d) in December 1985 at the Sol y Sombra Colombian club, Charlotte street, London W1 and (e) in February 1986 at the Rio Laundrette, Shepherds Bush, London; how many people, and of what nationality, were (i) interviewed and (ii) detained in each operation and for how long; and with regard to which alleged breaches of immigration law these people were interviewed or charged.

Mr. Waddington: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Parole

Viscount Cranborne asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time between application for parole by prisoners serving life sentences and the decision of the parole board.

Mr. Mellor: The average time at present taken between consideration of a case by the local review committee at the prison to consideration by the Parole Board is about 10½ months.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the purchase for his Department or recommendation for use in departmental establishments of computers or software which are subject to extra-territorial constraints as to their use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: My Department does not accept any extra-territorial constraints when making such purchases.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners who died in prisons in England and Wales during each of the past five years died from terminal illnesses; and, in respect of these, when he was notified that the prisoner was suffering from a terminal illness.

Mr. Mellor: In 1985 there were 20 deaths from natural causes (not including 15 in which the coroner's verdict is awaited). In the preceding four years the figures were:

Year	Number
1981	35
1982	28
1983	33
1984	31

Our statistical records do not enable us to identify all cases in which the medical officer formed the opinion, in advance of death occurring, that the patient's illness was likely to terminate fatally. As I indicated in my reply to a question by the hon. Member on 12 March 1986, at column 467 a report on such a case is required only in certain circumstances.

Custodial Institutions (Costs)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the total running revenue costs for 1985 and 1984 or the last 12 months for which figures are available for the following custodial institutions in Leicestershire: (a) Ashwell, (b) Welford road prison, (c) Stokenhall, (d) Gartree prison and (e) Glen Parva youth custody centre.

Mr. Mellor: In the financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85, the latest years for which information is available, the total (net) operating costs of the following custodial institutions in Leicestershire were:

	1983-84 £ thousand	1984-85 £ thousand
Ashwell	2,814	2,949
Leicester (Welford Rd)	5,686	6,155
Gartree	6,696	7,383
Glen Parva	7,635	7,677
Stocken	*	*

* (not applicable—establishment opened in July 1985).

Thomas More Street, EC1 (Access)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about restrictions placed on access to Thomas More street, London EC1 for (a) residents and (b) relatives of residents on Saturdays and Sundays.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the commissioner that on those occasions when demonstrations are held outside the News International plant at Wapping barriers are placed at the junction of Thomas More street and East Smithfield. Persons who wish to pass through the barriers are asked to state their destination. Residents and their relatives are allowed to pass through.

Metropolitan Police (Water Cannon)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is considering using dye or anti-riot irritant in the water during the testing of water cannon by the Metropolitan police force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Tests will concentrate on the use of the two prototype water cannon with plain water but will also include consideration of how additives might be used.

Leicester Prison

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 24 March, what has been the certified normal accommodation for Leicester prison in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The information is given in the following table:

Certified normal accommodation of Leicester prison at the end of February

Year	CNA
1976	238
1977	230
1978	230
1979	217
1980	205
1981	201
1982	201
1983	201
1984	201

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling university.

Mr. Hurd: Dr. Featherstone is not undertaking any work for the Home Office nor has he done so in the past.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish an analysis of the increase in the number of Civil Service employees in his Department between 1979 and 1985, together with an explanation of these increases, and an indication of the implications for the effectiveness of the various sections.

Mr. Hurd: The information sought is contained in table 3.11.5 and 3.11.7 of the Home Office section of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89" (Cmnd. 9702-II) and the accompanying text.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the longest period of imprisonment to which a fine defaulter was sentenced in 1984;

(2) how many prisoners were serving sentences of over 10 years on 30 June 1984.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend will reply as soon as possible.

Community Service Orders

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost of a community service order in (a) the financial year 1983-84 and (b) the financial year 1984-85.

Mr. Mellor: The average annual cost of each person on a community service order in the financial year 1983-84 is estimated in "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1984" (Table 12.3, page 118) at £630. The average cost of a community service order, which on average lasts about eight months, is estimated in paragraph 12.5, pages 115-116 at £420. These estimates involve a number of assumptions and should be treated with reserve. The information for 1984-85 is not yet available, but this will be included in "Probation Statistics, England and Wales, 1985", which it is planned to publish towards the end of 1986.

Prison Governors

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the prison governor grades were previously prison officers.

Mr. Mellor: A total of 43·5 per cent. of prison governor grades were previously prison officers.

Prison Officers (Assaults)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults on prison officers in the most recent convenient year required the officer to be off work for more than three days.

Mr. Mellor: The number of assaults on prison officers recorded centrally in 1985 which required the officer to be off work for more than three days was 363.

Prisoners (Segregation)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many male and female prisoners, resepectively, were segregated (a) for good order and discipline and (b) for their own protection on any recent convenient date; and on the same date how many prisoners were contained in the special wings for such prisoners at Maidstone, Gloucester and Wakefield prisons.

Mr. Mellor: The number of male sentenced prisoners segregated at 31 January 1985 (the most recent date for which information is available) was as follows (a) 93 for reasons of good order or discipline; (b) 542 for their own protection. Figures are not kept centrally for unconvicted or female prisoners. The number of persons in the special units at that date were as follows: Maidstone 98; Gloucester 76; Wakefield 24.

Prisoners (Special Units)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there are any plans to establish further special units for rule 43 prisoners on the lines of those at Maidstone, Gloucester and Wakefield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are no plans at present to establish further special units in addition to the national special units at Maidstone, Gloucester and Wakefield and the regional units for vulnerable prisoners at Gartree and Albany. It is our policy to ensure that prisoners resume association wherever this can be achieved by means such as transfer to another establishment. Special units are designed to cater for those who are unable to resume association under other conditions. We shall continue to keep the need and scope for provision of further special units under review, subject to the availability of accommodation and the overriding need to relieve overcrowding within the system.

Prisoners' Petitions

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the main findings of the research into prisoners' petitions undertaken following the report of the Expenditure Committee in 1978; and what changes were made as a result of this research in each year since then.

Mr. Mellor: A brief account of some aspects of this research, for which the fieldwork began in 1983, is contained in "Accountability in Prisons" (eds. M. Maguire, J. Vagg and R. Morgan) which was published by Tavistock Publications Ltd. in December 1985. A full report of the research is in preparation.

Prisons (Pay Telephones)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department in which penal establishments pay telephones have so far been installed for prisoners' use; how many pay telephones have been installed in each establishment; and when pay telephones will be installed in other open establishments.

Mr. Mellor: Pay telephones (using phonecards) are being introduced for the use of prisoners in open establishments. No such telephones have yet been installed; they should be installed in most open establishments by the end of April and as soon as practicable after that in other open establishments.

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now seek to amend section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to extend its provisions to meet the needs of Vietnamese refugees.

Mr. Waddington: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to amend section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received advocating the extension of section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to enable local auhorities to provide assistance to Vietnamese refugees.

Mr. Waddington: Since last September we have received representations from the British Refugee Council and the London borough of Greenwich.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial assistance is available from his Department to enable local authorities with substantial numbers of Vietnamese refugees in their area to provide specialised support and assistance to such refugees.

Mr. Waddington: No financial assistance to local authorities is currently available from the Department for this specific purpose. We do, however, continue to fund a programme of support for the Vietnamese, run under the auspices of the British Refugee Council; it will cost about £400,000 in 1986-87.

"Policing the Miners' Dispute"

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recommendations he has received from the Association of Chief Police Officers about the role, location and title of the national reporting centre;

(2) if, in the light of the Police Advisory Board's consideration of the Association of Police Officers' paper on "Policing the Miners' Dispute", he will take steps to encourage police authorities to provide their forces with standard personnel carriers in sufficient numbers to meet the whole of their mutual aid commitment, compatible telecommunications equipment capable of linking into a national emergency channel, common training standards, including regular inter-force exercises and consistent standards of charging for the provision of police support units to forces that need mutual support.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Our officials will discuss with the Association of Chief Police Officers the matters raised in its paper, including those relating to the national reporting centre.

Police Road Blocks (Tower Hamlets)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police road blocks have been set up since 25 January in the borough of Tower Hamlets; and where.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that under the powers conferred by section 52 of the Metropolitan Police Act 1839 barriers have been erected and pedestrian and vehicular access diverted at the following locations within the borough of Tower Hamlets on a number of occasions since 25 January 1986:

Thomas More street/East Smithfield
Wapping lane/Highway
Garnett street/Highway
Glamis road/Highway
Virginia street/Highway
Breezes hill/Highway
Artichoke hill/Highway
Chigwell hill/Highway

News International (Policing)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been engaged in policing the News International dispute in Wapping on successive Saturday nights since, and including, 25 January.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information is as follows:

	Numbers
25 January	281
1 February	333
8 February	368
15 February	1,009
22 February	1,102
1 March	1,098
8 March	1,751
15 March	878
22 March	1,380

Unruly Certificates

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to abolish or reduce the use of the unruly certificate by the courts in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend proposes to introduce an order defining more restrictively than does the Certificates of Unruly Character (Conditions) Order 1977 the circumstances in which a 15 or 16-year-old boy may be remanded to a prison department establishment. In particular, he proposes that the power should be confined to cases where the boy has been charged with murder, attempted murder, rape or certain other equally serious offences. He is also considering whether there are other ways in which the range of cases where remands to a prison department establishment is possible might be reduced to the minimum.

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unruly certificates were granted by the courts in England and Wales in respect of 15 and 16-year-old males in each year from 1980 to 1985, and during the first 10 weeks of 1986.

Mr. Mellor: The first column in the following table shows the number of certificates of unruliness issued in respect of boys aged 15 or 16. A fresh certificate is required each time a boy is remanded under the unruliness certification procedure, and the second column in the table shows the number of boys aged 14 to 16 first received into prisons and remand centres, on remand before or during trial, under the procedure. Information for 1986 is not yet available.

	Certificates for boys aged 15 or 16	Boys aged 14, 15 or 16*
1980	2,748	1,910
1981	2,494	1,766
1982	2,270	1,544
1983	1,829	1,507
1984	1,699	†1,441
1985	‡ —	†1,513

* The unruliness certification procedure ceased to be available for 14 year old boys on 31 March 1981.
† Provisional.
‡ Central recording of this information ceased at the end of 1984.

Young Persons (Custody)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15 and 16-year-old males who were sentenced to periods of custody by the courts in England and Wales served part of their sentence in an adult prison establishment during (a) 1984, (b) 1985 and (c) the first 10 weeks of 1986;

(2) how many males aged 15 and 16 years who were the subject of unruly certificates were remanded into adult prison establishments by the courts in England and Wales during (a) 1984, (b) 1985 and (c) the first 10 weeks of 1986;

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend will reply as soon as possible.

Wapping (Police Road Blocks)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Wapping residents have complained to the police since 25 January about access to their homes being affected by police road blocks.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that one member of the public has made such a complaint.

Mr. Norman Davis

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the judiciary were asked for their views on the possibility of releasing Mr. Norman Davis from prison following the hearing of the local review committee at Featherstone prison in December 1984.

Mr. Mellor: The papers were sent to the judiciary on 18 December 1985 and a reply was received on 14 January 1986.

Black and Ethnic Minority Youth

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking, following the abolition of the Greater London council, to seek to ensure that an all London forum of black and ethnic minority youth will continue to be resourced.

Mr. Waddington: As from 1 April 1986, it is for the London boroughs, singly or collectively as appropriate, to decide on the support, if any, to be provided by them to particular activities and voluntary organisations.

Independent Television Levy

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the revised arrangements for the independent television levy will take effect; and what will be the rates of levy under those arrangements.

Mr. Hurd: We intend to make the changes by means of the 1986 Finance Bill and to make them effective from 1 April 1986. However, levy will not be collected under the new arrangements until the new statutory provisions have been enacted. We propose that the standard rate of levy on ITV contractors' profits should be reduced from 66·7 per cent. to 45 per cent. and that the rate applying to profits from the provision of programmes abroad should be 22·5 per cent. We also propose to increase the value of the minimum "free slice" of profits which are not liable to levy from £650,000 to £800,000. This figure will be reviewed from time to time.

Direct Broadcasting by Satellite

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to bring into force sections 37 to 41 of the Broadcasting Act 1984 providing for the establishment of direct broadcasting by satellite services by the Independent Broadcasting Authority; whether he has any plans to seek to extend the length of the contract period stipulated in section 38 of that Act; and what transmission standards will be required for these services.

Mr. Hurd: I have made an order bringing these provisions into force on 1 April and intend to take an early legislative opportunity to extend the contract period for the provision of a DBS service from 12 to 15 years. The Government's policy on transmission standards is that, subject to any significant new factors emerging, C-MAC should be used for all DBS services.

Shops Act 1950

Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any estimate has been made of the annual costs to local authorities of enforcing the Shops Act 1950; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I regret that we have no information on the costs to local authorities of enforcing the Shops Act 1950. The number of convictions for illegal Sunday trading (743 in 1984) suggests that there is very little enforcement of the Sunday trading provisions. In order to achieve a reasonable level of enforcement, it is clear that considerable additional expenditure would be required by local authorities, and the costs would have to be met by the ratepayer.

Fraud

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of fraud were reported to the City of London police fraud squad in each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1986, c. 48]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the City of London that the available information is as given in the table:

Substantiated cases of fraud report to the City of London Police Fraud Squad

	Number
1979	53
1980	69
1981	54
1982	60
1983	60
1984	88
1985	81

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, of the cases of fraud reported to the City of London police fraud squad in each year since 1979 (i) how many in each year were subsequently reported to the Director of Public Prosecutions and (ii) of the cases subsequently reported to the Director of Public Prosecutions how many in each year resulted in prosecutions conducted by the Director of Public Prosecutions and how many were successful.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1986, c. 47-8]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the City of London that the available information is as follows:

Investigations of fraud started by the City of London Police

Year investigation started	Reported to the DPP	Resulted in prosecution conducted by the DPP
1979	12	7
1980	28	6
1981	20	9
1982	20	8
1983	26	7
1984	22	5
1985*	5	—

* 1 January to 31 October 1985.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) of the cases of fraud reported to the City of London police fraud squad in each year since 1979 (a) how many in each year were subsequently reported to the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department and (b) of the cases so reported to the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department, how many in each year resulted in prosecutions conducted by the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department, and how many were successful in each instance;

(2) of the cases of fraud reported to the City of London police fraud squad in each year since 1979, how many in each year were subsequently reported to the Department of Trade and Industry and of the cases subsequently reported to the Department of Trade and Industry how many in each year resulted in prosecutions conducted by the relevant prosecuting solicitor's department; and how many were successful in each instance.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1986, c. 48]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police for the City of London that more detailed information than that given in the replies to the hon. Member on 6 December 1985 at column 358 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Industry Year

6. Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the progress of Industry Year in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: Northern Ireland is playing its full part in the national Industry Year initiative. The local campaign was successfully launched on 16 January. Groups are at work on industry and education issues and on publicising the importance of industry as the generator of our future wealth and prosperity. One particular initiative is the mini-enterprise scheme, which is to be made available to every school in Northern Ireland with financial support from the Ulster Bank Limited.

Mr. Peter Barry (Talks)

7. Mr Parry asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what matters were discussed at his recent meeting with Mr. Peter Barry, Foreign Minister of the Irish Republic.

Mr. Scott: I would refer the hon. Member to a reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to questions by the hon. Members for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) and for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton), earlier today.

Intergovernmental Conference

11. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the cost to public funds of the security of the secretariat at Maryfield of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference, specifying the amounts attributable to meetings of the conference.

Mr. Scott: As at 19 March 1986, payments made or in the process of being made were £336,000. This figure includes the costs for the RUC personnel and for security works for the accommodation of the Secretariat building.

In addition, a further £64,500 was paid for policing the secretariat on the day of the first meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

15. Mr. Gow asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how he proposes to make the Anglo-Irish agreement more acceptable to the people of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I recognise that many in the Unionist community in Northern Ireland are unhappy about aspects of the agreement. I believe that their reaction is based on fundamental misunderstandings about the terms and operation of the agreement, which I will continue to make every effort to remedy. I hope that Unionist leaders will take up our offer of further dialogue, which was renewed in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's letter of 21 March.

18. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange an early meeting with Unionist right hon. and hon. Members representing constituencies in Northern Ireland to discuss the operation of the Anglo-Irish agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I am ready to talk to the elected representatives from the Unionist community about the Anglo-Irish agreement at any time. I hope that we can meet soon to pursue the matters most recently set out in the letter my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister sent to the right hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Molyneaux) and the hon. Member for Antrim, North (Rev. Ian Paisley).

All Children Together (Aid)

16. Mr. Burt asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money he has given to the educational charity All Children Together in each of the last three financial years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Apart from a small school's essay competition grant in 1984, the major demand for Government grant from All Children Together has been for Lagan college.

Wages Inspectorate

17. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many workers in Northern Ireland were found to be underpaid as a result of checks by the wages inspectorate; and what was the total of repayments made in the latest year for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: In 1985, 84 workers were found to be underpaid and the repayments made totalled £26,750.

Day of Protest

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the cost of overtime payments to (a) security forces and (b) clean-up crews due to the day of protest on 3 March.

Mr. Scott: The cost of overtime payments to members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary as a direct consequence of the day of protest on 3 March is estimated at £470,000. Her Majesty's Forces do not receive overtime payments. There were also some small overtime payments to employees of the Roads Service.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary as to how far the Royal Ulster Constabulary was extended on Monday 3 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) on 26 March 1986.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners died in prisons in Northern Ireland during each of the past five years for which records are available; what ages were the deceased; how many of such deaths were from natural causes; how many were from terminal illnesses; and, in respect of these, when he was notified that the prisoner was suffering from a terminal illness.

Mr. Scott: The information for the years 1981-85 inclusive is as follows:

Year	Deaths	Age	Number
1981	*11	23	2
1982	None
1983	None
1984	†2	28	1
		34	1
1985	‡2	23	1

* Including one in an outside hospital after the prisoner had undergone heart surgery; the others were prisoners who had taken part in a prolonged hunger strike.

† One in an outside hospital following injuries sustained in the course of an attempted escape in a bin lorry; one suicide.

‡ Both suicides.

Parades (Re-routeing)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has received from the Northern Ireland Police Authority, the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and elsewhere, to seek to prevent any bans or re-routeing of traditional parades from becoming a vehicle of disorder.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

City of Belfast

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he is taking for the administration of the city of Belfast following the decision by the courts that councillors acted illegally in delegating their function to the town clerk.

Dr. Boyson: It is for the Belfast city council to consider the implications of the recent court decision. Should the actions of councillors threaten the discharge of statutory functions, the Government will take such measures as are appropriate.

My hon. Friend will note that the Department of the Environment has now approved estimates, authorised expenditure and made a district rate for Belfast for 1986-87 because of the council's failure to discharge these functions.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list his powers in relation to giving directions to the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Tom King: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary operates under the law. He is not subject to direction by the Secretary of State in the operational control of the force. The Secretary of State does have powers of direction in relation to certain administrative areas, for example, under article 37(3) of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. However, a definitive list of such powers is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many unemployed persons in Northern Ireland have taken advantage of the enterprise allowance scheme since the scheme's introduction.

Dr. Boyson: Since the scheme was introduced in August 1982, 3,885 eligible participants have been admitted to the scheme.

District Council Commissioners

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to report to the House any cases of the appointment of commissioners to discharge district council functions.

Dr. Boyson: Yes, that would be the Goverment's intention. Any order made under the provisions of article 3 of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) (NI) Order would, of course, be made available to the House.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the names and qualifications of such persons who have been or may be, appointed as commissioners for the discharge if necessary of district council functions.

Dr. Boyson: Arrangements exist for the appointment of persons under article 3 of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) (NI) Order 1986 if necessary. No persons have been appointed to date.

Republic of Ireland

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what subjects he expects to discuss at his next meeting with representatives of the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question by the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer) earlier today.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to secure for Northern Ireland companies a share of the opportunities arising from the construction of the Channel fixed link.

Dr. Boyson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has personally contacted the chairman of the Channel Tunnel Group to enlist his support in ensuring, wherever possible, that Northern Ireland companies secure a share of the opportunities presented by the project. Officials of the Industrial Development Board are following this up with the group and with individual members of the consortium.

Autocrime

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prosecutions there have been in Northern Ireland for theft of a motor vehicle; and how many of these have been successful.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: The information requested in respect of the past three years is as follows:

	Magistrates' court			Crown court
	Persons proceeded against	Not guilty	Guilty	Committed for trial at Crown court	Proceeded against	Guilty	Not guilty
i. Theft and unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle
1983	77	3	53	21	21	18	3
1984	64	3	47	14*	21	20	1
1985	56	5	35	16	16	15	1
ii. Hijacking
1983	38	3	—	35	49	48	1
1984	17	1	—	16	26	26	—
1985	26	2	—	24	40	40	—
iii. Taking and driving away and allowing oneself to be carried
1983	553	32	521†	—	—	—	—
1984	563	29	533	*1	—	—	—
1985	†615	26	587	*2	—	—	—

* Charges reduced or changed at Crown court.

† I regret that the reply given to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North on 7 March did not take account of the persons proceeded against in 1985 for theft and hijacking. These figures are shown separately above.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many motor vehicles have been reported stolen in the Province in each of the last three years; and how many of these subsequently have been recovered.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 24 March 1986]: Information on the numbers of vehicles stolen is not available. However, the numbers of vehicles unlawfully taken* in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years, and the numbers of vehicles recovered in each of these years, are as follows:

	Vehicles taken†	Vehicles recovered
1983	6,346	5,847
1984	6,767	6,206
1985	6,849	6,169

* This term includes theft, taking without the owner's consent and hijacking.

† The totals do not include plant and machinery.

ENERGY

Sellafield

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list, year by year, from 1979 to the present day, how many accidents were reported at the Windscale/Sellafield nuclear establishment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: On 26 July 1982 my right hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Mr. Moore) announced at column 274 revised procedures for the more prompt reporting to Ministers of significant nuclear incidents. Since then there have been one reportable incident at Sellafield in 1982, and two each in 1983 and 1984. Under the previous criteria, which included many insignificant incidents, there were 25 incidents at Sellafield in 1979, 20 in 1980 and 16 in 1981. Details of these incidents are reported in the Health and Safety Executive quarterly statements of reportable nuclear incidents, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list those civil servants from his Department currently involved in negotiations with the European Commission to achieve a mutually satisfactory safeguards regime for the joint civil-military material balance area at Sellafield.

Mr. Goodlad: Officials from the safeguards office of the Department of Energy are involved in these negotiations.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the maximum electricity output of the projected Severn barrage.

Mr. David Hunt: Two sites have been studied by the Severn tidal power group for a possible tidal energy barrage in the Severn estuary. The estimate for a barrage at the Cardiff-Weston super Mare site is an average annual energy output of approximately 14 Terrawatt hours. The estimate for the second site close to the Severn bridge is an average annual energy output of approximately 3 Terrawatt hours.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is his policy towards the purchase for use in his Department of computers or software which are subject to the extraterritorial control on their use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: This Department does not accept any extraterritorial constraints when making such purchases.

Plutonium

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the civil nuclear reactors in which plutonium was generated and subsequently transferred to military use under article 14 of the tripartite safeguards agreement 1978.

Mr. Goodlad: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown) on 26 July 1985.

Plutonium (CEGB)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will place in the Library the exchange of letters between his Department and the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board advising the latter not to publish details of plutonium produced in Central Electricity Generating Board reactors.

Mr. Goodlad: The position has not changed since my right hon. Friend wrote to the hon. Member on 9 April 1985.

Nuclear Materials

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether any (a) plutonium, (b) enriched uranium or (c) other special nuclear materials in the United Kingdom have ever been withdrawn from EEC ownership under the Euratom treaty, article 86, and redesignated non-civil.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Oil Exports (Israel)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Energy what guidance he has given to oil companies on the export of oil to Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave my hon. Friend on 8 December 1983 at column 222.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Energy what are the implications for United Kingdom policy of the recent decision of the European Court regarding the export of oil to the state of Israel.

Mr. Peter Walker: The recent rulings of the European Court of Justice confirm Her Majesty's Government's view that the guidance given to exporters of North sea crude oil is in conformity with European Community law.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will define the three forms of radioactive waste storage repositories (a) above ground, (b) near surface subterranean and (c) deep cavity subterranean in terms to be adopted by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate in licensing these storage sites; if he will identify and place in the Library the particular Nuclear Installations Inspectorate publications that describe the licensing procedures and criteria for nuclear materials storage sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 6 March at column 208.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Land Resources Development Centre

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the annual budget and staffing levels at the Land Resources Development Centre for each of the last five years; and if he will specify which areas of the centre's work, including specific posts, have been reduced as a result of expenditure cuts.

Mr. Raison: Total staff numbers serving with LRDC on 1 April each year (vacancies excluded) were:

	Number
1981	87·5
1982	78·5
1983	74·5
1984	62·5
1985	48·0

These figures include United Kingdom-based staff and those serving overseas (of whom there were 17 on 1 April 1985).

The LRDC budget comprises the salaries and so on of United Kingdom-based staff, salaries and so on of certain expanded home-based staff, general expenses including accommodation charges, and capital expenditure. Outturn figures for the past five years are:

	£ million
1981-82	0·855
1982-83	0·891
1983-84	0·963
1984-85	1·021
1985-86	*0·971

* Estimate

The salaries of staff serving overseas on assignments for ODA's country technical cooperation programmes are charged to those programmes and do not appear in the LRDC budget.

Since 1 April 1981 a total of 35 professional staff have retired, resigned or been transferred without replacement. The specific areas of reduction and numbers of posts are: Water Resources Engineering (4), Agriculture/Agronomy (5), Livestock Management (2), Forestry (2), Soil Science (3), Socio-economics (1), Ecology (2), Information (1), Soil Conservation Training (1), Soil Chemistry (1), Statistics/Computer (2), Cartography (7). 4½ administrative posts have also been shed.

Middle East Projects (Departmental Funding)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those projects in the middle east which receive funding from his Department; and which of the projects cater for Palestinians.

Mr. Raison: Details of the British bilateral aid programme in the middle east are provided in "British Aid Statistics" which is available in the Library of the House. Information in more detail could be provided only at disproportionate cost. We also contribute to projects in the middle east being undertaken by British voluntary agencies, the European Community, the World Bank and United Nations agencies.

Aid is given to Palestinians mainly through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine refugees in the near east (UNRWA). We also give assistance, mainly through British voluntary agencies, for projects in the occupied West Bank and Gaza. The European Community also contributes to UNRWA and has a programme of projects for the West Bank and Gaza, as do certain United Nations agencies.

South Africa (Disadvantaged Persons)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what projects his Department supports to assist disadvantaged persons (a) in South Africa and (b) who have left South Africa as refugees.

Mr. Raison: Disadvantaged groups within South Africa benefit from scholarships for study in the United Kingdom and from our support (expert advice, books and equipment) for several non-formal education projects in the Republic. We expect to spend about £1 million on these activities in the coming financial year. Our support for South African refugees is channelled through the United Nations Educational Training Programme for Southern Africa and the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation which undertake various training and educational activities.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Child Abuse

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what measures he intends to take to ensure that there is a proper investigation into the background of those in the independent further education sector and in voluntary youth centres for evidence of offences of child abuse, drink or drug abuse and of other misconduct against children;

(2) what measures he intends to introduce to vet teachers entering the profession for evidence of offences against children and drink or drug abuse, or of other misconduct.

Mr. Chris Patten: Joint guidance from the Secretaries of State for Education and Science, Home Affairs, Social Services, and for Wales is at an advanced stage of preparation on new arrangements for checking the criminal background of those, including teachers, who are seeking to work with children in the statutory sector. It also deals with improvements in the arrangements for reporting convictions for offences committed after engagement. Similar arrangements for the voluntary and private sectors are at an earlier stage of consideration.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy on the purchase for the use of his Department, or the recommendation for use in educational establishments, of computers or software which are subject to extraterritorial constraints as to their use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: This Department does not accept any extraterritorial constraints when making such purchases.

Hearing-impaired Students

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the reply, Official Report, 17 March, columns 5-6, if he will take steps to ensure that his Department holds centrally the information on the numbers and proportions of hearing-impaired students who continue with higher education of various kinds and on the policies of local education authorities in assisting and encouraging these students.

Mr. Chris Patten: It would be invidious to collect such information on hearing-impaired students only, as distinct from the generality of handicapped students. My right hon. Friend does not consider that the cost, both centrally and locally, of maintaining a central record of such information would be justified by the contribution it might make to Government policies.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 6, when he expects to be able to make a statement on his policy towards the principle of charging the parents of hearing-impaired children aged over 16 years for board and lodging costs which arise because no appropriate further education opportunities are available within the county boundary and to continue their education the children have to go elsewhere.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend will consider the principle of such charges in the light of the examination of the several complaints on this score which the Department is currently conducting. The reply to the National Deaf Children's Society, to which my answer of 17 March referred, will furnish a statement of his policy on the matter and I shall ensure that the right hon. Member receives a copy of this.

Nursing Education

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, in the light of the Royal College of Nursing commission on nursing education and the consultation paper issued by the English National Board, he will include in the proposed White Paper on higher education proposals on nursing education.

Mr. Waiden: The Government are not yet ready to publish their response to the proposals that they have received about the future of nursing education. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services is awaiting a report from the National Health Service management board following the board's consultation on the proposals with local health authoorities. The Government will publish their response in the form that seems most appropriate at the time when they are ready to do so.

Donna de Groot and Stuart Ford

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, when he expects to receive a response from Bedfordshire education authority in respect of the request from the parents of Donna de Groot and Stuart Ford for the provision of further education to assist their deafness.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend is assured that Bedfordshire LEA will send a response to the Department's inquiries about further education provision for these young people early next month.

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling university.

Sir Keith Joseph: Not so far as I am aware.

Private Schools

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in respect of the procedures followed by his Department in the registration of a private school.

Mr. Dunn: The registration procedures are laid down in part III of the Education Act 1944. No recent representations on these have been received.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list in the Official Report those schools which have received provisional registration from his Department in the last six years, giving the name and location of the school, the date of provisional registration, the date of inspection and date of final registration in each case.

Mr. Dunn: 428 independent schools provisionally registered with the Department in the last six years. The detailed information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list in the Official Report those private schools which have been inspected by his Department over the last six years, giving the month and year of inspection in each case and whether the school is still in operation.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he is satisfied with the current time taken by his Department between the provisional registration of a private school and the inspection of those schools.

Mr. Dunn: Yes.

PRIME MINISTER

EC (Budget Abatements)

Q24. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she has any reason to revise her conclusion that the European Economic Community will be in a position to pay the abatements to the United Kingdom agreed at the Fontainebleau Council, following the address given by the European Community Budget Commissioners to the European Assembly on 13 March; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The abatement system for the United Kingdom agreed at the Fontainebleau European Council has now been incorporated in the European Community's new own resources decision, which has been adopted by all member states and has been in force since 1 January 1986. As this decision has treaty status, the United Kingdom has a right to these abatements, and the Community has an obligation to provide for them in the Community budget.

Land Rover

Q40. Mr. John Marshall asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to pay an official visit to the Land Rover plant in Solihull; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Baldry asked the Prime Minister why the Secretary of State for Employment has responsibility for the technical and vocational education initiative.

The Prime Minister: The initiative is concerned with providing a better preparation for adult and working life. The Manpower Services Commission, which administer, the initiative on behalf of the Secretary of State for Employment, is in touch with the employers' needs and has the necessary powers to fund appropriate curriculum development within individual education authorities.

Education and Training

Mr. Baldry asked the Prime Minister which areas of education and training are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Education and Science and which are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Employment.

The Prime Minister: The responsibilities of the two Secretaries of State are not divided on the basis of specific areas of education and training.

The Secretary of State for Education and Science is responsible for securing the effective implementation of national policies for education in partnership with local education authorities in England and with the universities in Great Britain.

The overall responsibility of the Secretary of State for Employment is to contribute towards maximising productive, fair and safe employment in Great Britain. In doing so, he is concerned with education and training programmes relevant to working life.

Within the broad scope of these objectives, both Secretaries of State direct and undertake specific programmes in accordance with the needs and priorities identified by the Government. Some programmes are undertaken by the Manpower Services Commission under the joint supervision of Education and Employment Ministers.

Middle East Visit

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister if she intends to visit east Jerusalem and the West Bank during her forthcoming visit to the middle east.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow), at column 595.

Goods and Products (Extra-territorial Controls)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Prime Minister what is her policy towards the support by her presence or that of Ministers or senior colleagues at public functions of companies which seek to supply in the United Kingdom goods and products which are sold subject to extra-territorial controls.

The Prime Minister: Decisions about ministerial participation in company functions are based on all available facts, rather than on particular aspects such as foreign claims to extra-territorial controls over a product that a company happens to supply.

British Nuclear Fuels Ltd

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Prime Minister whether she plans to transfer British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. share ownership to the Secretary of State for Defence in proportion to the military work undertaken by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

The Prime Minister: No.

Auxiliary Oil Replenishment Vessels

Mr. Clay asked the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with Unionist politicians in recent weeks on the Royal Navy's requirements for auxiliary oil replenishment vessels; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received several representations from hon. Members about this competition, both in support of the Swan Hunters and Harland and Wolff bids.

Engagements

Mr. Hirst asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 27 March.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 27 March.

Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 27 March.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 27 March.

Mr. Skinner asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 27 March.

The Prime Minister: In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having meetings with ministerial colleagues and others later today.

TRANSPORT

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his policy on the usage of Scottish lowland airports with a view to encouraging international carriers to use Glasgow.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government's policy for the Scottish lowlands airports is set out in the airports policy White Paper (Cmnd. 9542). International carriers are already encouraged to use Glasgow and Edinburgh airports for short-haul services; Prestwick is to continue to serve as the gateway for long-haul (primarily transatlantic) services although, if its financial results do not improve, the policy will be reviewed in 1989.

M50 (Crash Barriers)

Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he proposes to erect central crash barriers on the M50.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. I am keeping the position under review.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on the purchase or recommendation for use in departmental establishments of computers and software which are subject to extra-territorial constraints as to their use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Ridley: The computing procurement policy of my department is to obtain the best value for money in line with the department's plans for information technology. Procurements are carried out through the central computer and telecommunications agency in the Treasury and in accord with Government policy, on which I refer to the corresponding answer from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Passenger Transport Executives (Travel Cards)

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has had any discussions with passenger transport executives concerning the validity of travel cards issued by them after abolition of the metropolitan county councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: The Department has regular meetings with the passenger transport executives. I am aware of no difficulties concerning the validity of travel cards arising from the abolition of the metropolitan county councils.

Roadside Litter

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review his current policy on the provision of roadside litter bins at laybys in view of the evidence outlined in the 11th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have noted the comments contained in the commission's report. The evidence available to the Department shows that the removal of litter bins from trunk road laybys has reduced rubbish dumping at these sites. This suggests that a change in policy is not warranted. I shall continue to monitor the situation.

Okehampton Bypass

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the public health authorities in Devon about the likelihood of toxic metal contamination, including arsenic, of the East and West Okement rivers during the construction of the southern route of the Okehampton bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have had no such discussion with public health authorities. We rely on the South-West water authority for advice on measures to take during the construction of the bypass to protect water supplies.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has undertaken to ascertain the extent of mineral deposits including arsenic under the southern route of the Okehampton bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have carried out no studies to ascertain the extent of mineral deposits or arsenic under the route of the Okehampton bypass, because it is not a normal pre-construction activity.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the results of the soil tests on the southern route of the Okehampton bypass which he has commissioned from the Wimpey Laboratories; and if he will publish these results.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We expect to receive the report of the soil investigation in July. As the information is of a specialist nature for road construction purposes, the information will be supplied to those firms invited to tender for the construction of the bypass.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the correspondence he has had with the South-West Wales authority on the subject of the metallic contamination of water courses in the vicinity of the southern route of the Okehampton bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There has not been any such correspondence.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Transport if agreement has yet been reached between the Channel Tunnel Group and British Railways and SNCF as to the amount which the respective railway undertakings will pay Channel Tunnel Group over the life of the fixed-link concession; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Yes. The details are a commercial matter for BR-SNCF and CTG.

British Airways

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether British Airways has sought consent for the separate disposal of its Highland division; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No such consent has been sought.

London (Traffic Surveys)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current estimate of the total cost of the four London area assessment studies.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: When completed the first stage of the studies about the problems of the areas concerned and the associated wide public consultation are expected to cost altogether some £3 million. Lack of co-operation from the GLC has delayed the work and increased the cost. We hope to be able to publish the stage one reports later this year. The cost thereafter will depend upon work commissioned after the public have been able to comment on these reports.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will share information from the London assessment studies traffic surveys with the boroughs and seek their co-operation for the surveys.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. This information will be of great value to all of us.

Cycle Facilities

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent (a) by local authorities and (b) by his Department on cycle facilities during the financial year 1984-85 and how much is planned to be spent (i) by local authorities and (ii) by his Department on cycle facilities during the financial year 1985-86 and the financial year 1986-87.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Figures are not collected centrally on the amounts spent by local authorities on cycle facilities or on the Department's continuing expenditure on cycle elements in its trunk road improvement schemes. The Department spent £126,000 and £160,000 in the past two years and plans to spend a further £160,000 in the coming year on a special programme of experimental cycling facilities of various kinds to test and develop good design solutions for general use.

Residential Areas (Road Safety)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek to visit the Netherlands during European Road Safety Year, to consider the ways in which it has improved both the traffic safety and environment of large residential areas; and whether he will pursue an experimental project in the United Kingdom aimed at achieving these goals.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The Urban safety project, being implemented in Bradford, Bristol, Nelson, Reading and Sheffield is designed to achieve similar goals in a United Kingdom context.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the number of occasions during the past 10 years on which aircraft departing from Heathrow airport have suffered failure of an engine (a) whilst still on the runway between starting of roll and normal point of take-off, (b) after take-off and below a 1,000 ft altitude and (c) between, 1,000 ft and 2,500 ft altitude.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority, which is statutorily responsible for aviation safety, has informed me that it is not able to provide a full answer to this question for the following reasons:

1. Their records over United Kingdom operators only, except for a small number of particularly significant occurrences to foreign operated aircraft.
2. A precautionary engine shut-down with no other critical aspects (for example, fire, aircraft control problems and so on) is not a "reportable occurrence" on three and four-engined aircraft.
3. An engine problem resulting in an abandoned take-off at slow speed is not a "reportable occurrence" unless other critical aspects are involved.
4. Records do not include the precise altitude at which engine loss occurred—only the flight phase.

Given the above limitations the total number of engine losses on CAA records since 1976 is:

(a) Take-off (start of roll to lift off)—33
(b) Initial climb (lift off to approx 1,500 ft)—36
(c) Climb (approx 1,500 ft. to cruise)—70.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the number of occasions during the last 10 years on which the radar approach control at Heathrow airport has suffered a blackout failure and as to the duration of control loss on each occasion.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Details for the last 10 years are not readily extractable from the Civil Aviation Authority's records. In 1984 and 1985, however, there was a single incident of equipment failure in each year resulting in a total loss of approach radar for four minutes in both cases. In addition there were two incidents in 1985 when radar coverage was lost for a few minutes because of an interruption in electricity supply. The CAA assures me that none of these incidents imperilled the safety of aircraft under approach control at the time.

The CAA has proposed, and my Department has sanctioned, the building of a new approach control room at Heathrow.

Rural Bus Grant

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much per mile will be available to bus operators from the Government's transitional rural bus grant; and when it will become available.

Mr. David Mitchell: From 1 April 1986 for 12 months, the grant available will be 6p per vehicle mile. Grant will also be available, at reducing rates, for the following three financial years.

SOCIAL SERVICES

"Reform of Social Security"

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how the figures on (i) sick and disabled and (ii) lone parents in table 10B in the technical annex which accompanied the Government's White Paper "Reform of Social Security", Cmnd. 9691, were arrived at; and whether the numbers in receipt of the long-term rate of benefit and additional requirements were taken into account.

Mr. Newton: Table 10B of the technical annex shows the effect that the illustrative rates of income support would have on claimants' underlying entitlement to benefit, after allowing for the minimum contribution to rates. It compares that with the latest information held on their receipt of supplementary benefit including the long-term rate of benefit and additional requirements. As explained in the technical annex this information is taken from a sample survey of claimants receiving regular weekly payments of supplementary benefit in a week in December 1983, adjusted to 1985 benefit rates and to allow for policy changes between 1983 and 1985. A further explanation of the data sources used, the assumptions applied and the illustrative rates of income support is given in pages 9 to 14 of the annex.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the ratio of successful to unsuceessful applications for mobility allowance for each year since 1975.

Mr. Newton: The information from 1976, when the allowance was introduced, is as follows:

	(a) Number of successful claims	(b) Number of unsuccessful claims	(c) Ratio of column (a) to column (b)
1976	35,100	14,800	2·37 : 1
1977	31,200	15,800	1·97 : 1
1978	42,900	15,300	2·80 : 1
1979	41,700	20,200	2·06 : 1
1980	60,200	25,500	2·16 : 1
1981	41,400	19,300	2·15 : 1
1982	59,000	29,100	2·03 : 1
1983	69,900	36,900	1·89 : 1
1984	73,600	34,400	2·14 : 1
1985	79,400	50,300	1·58 : 1

Community Health Services

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whom he has appointed to make up the panel to initiate the inquiry into the future of community health services.

Mr. Hayhoe: The members of the Inquiry into the future development of the public health function and the specialty of community medicine are as follows:

Mrs. Juliet Baxter—a vice president of the Pre-School Playgroups Association;
Sir Michael Carlisle—Chairman, Trent Regional Health Authority;
Professor Alasdair Geddes — Honorary Professor of Infectious Diseases, University of Birmingham, and Senior Physician in infectious diseases, West Midlands Regional Health Authority;
Mr. Peter Griffiths — District General Manager, Lewisham and North Southwark Health Authority;
Dr. Roderic Griffiths—Director of Health Care Policy, Central Birmingham Health Authority;
Dr Michael O'Brien—Regional Medical Director, East Anglian Regional Health Authority;
Dr. Joseph Smith — Director, The Public Health Laboratory Service;
Mr. Alfred Stocks CBE—retiring on 31 March 1986 as Chief Executive, Liverpool City Council.

The inquiry is chaired by the Chief Medical Officer, Dr. Donald Acheson.

Child Care Workers

Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will seek powers to prohibit unsuitable people, such as those with convictions for offences against children, from being employed as child care workers in view of the first report of the joint review of the Home Office and Department of Health and Social Security on disclosure of criminal convictions of those with access to children;

(2) what measures he intends to introduce to vet child care workers entering the profession for evidence of offences against children, drink and drug abuse or other misconduct.

Mr. Whitney: The joint review report did not recommend that powers should be taken to prohibit the employment of unsuitable people in caring for children, nor do we propose to seek such powers. It is for employers to decide on the suitability of applicants. The recommendations in the report were directed to ensuring that, in making such decisions, adequate arrangements are available to enable employers to be informed of the criminal background of applicants for posts involving substantial access to children.

Consultations on the implementation of the recommendations in the report are at an advanced stage—and it is hoped to announce shortly the establishment of new procedures to provide employers in the statutory child care sector with direct access to police records. Further consideration is being given to arrangements for the voluntary sector.

Worthing District Health Authority

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what changes have been made in the revenue and other resources made available to the Worthing district health authority over the past 10 years in cash and real terms.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not held centrally. My right hon. Friend may therefore wish to contact the chairman of the South-West Thames regional health authority for the information he seeks.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what has been the total amount of benefit paid out in Wales as exceptionally severe weather allowance during the last three months;

(2) if he will estimate the total expenditure on exceptionally severe weather payments in Wales in the winters of 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Newton: Total expenditure on exceptionally severe weather payments in Wales in the winter of 1984-85 was £92,679. Information for 1985-86 is not yet available, and will not be collected until the period during which payments are likely to be made is over.

Hypothermia

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths with any mention of hypothermia were reported in the borough of Solihull during the winter of 1985-86.

Mr. Whitney: The provisional number of deaths with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it did or did not appear as the underlying cause of death, to usual residents of Solihull metropolitan district which were registered in the period 1 November 1985 to 28 February 1986 inclusive, is two.

Breast Milk (Organo-chlorine Residues)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what research has been conducted by his Department into the incidence of levels of organo-chlorine residues in breast milk from mothers which would, if fed to babies, exceed international safety levels for the daily intake of such chemicals in adults.

Mr. Whitney: Surveys were conducted by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in 1963-64, 1979-80 and 1983-84. A further more comprehensive survey is planned for 1987. Though results from the last two surveys showed a general decline in organo-chlorine residues in human milk, the levels of some of the compounds in the majority of the samples were such that breast-fed infants would exceed the acceptable daily intake recommended by the World Health Organisation.

The acceptable daily intake is the quantity which may be safely taken every day for a person's lifetime, and the figure includes a substantial safety margin. Furthermore, the intake of organo-chlorine residues can be expected to fall considerably after weaning; the levels in the United Kingdom diet have shown a decline over the last two decades.

The Department's committee on the toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment has considered the results of the latest survey. It has advised that there is insufficient information about the possible health effects, if any, to infants of organo-chlorine residues in breast milk, and has recommended further studies and continued monitoring. The committee emphasised that the known advantages of breast feeding are major ones and these have to be borne in mind when evaluating possible harmful effects of residues in milk.

The results of the surveys and the advice of the Committee on Toxicity have been published, the latest being the report of the working party on pesticide residues (1982-85), food surveillance paper No. 6 (HMSO 1986). A copy is in the Library.

Benefits (Payment Overseas)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to change the method of payment of social security benefits to people who live overseas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Yes. Generally, United Kingdom pensioners living overseas are at present paid by four-weekly payable orders sent from Newcastle or North Fylde central offices of the Department. As a result they incur postal delays, delays in changing the order into local currency, bank fees and handling charges.

A departmental study has shown that these problems can be substantially reduced by making these payments by automated credit transfer directly into pensioners' bank accounts in the local currency. We have therefore decided to offer this optional service to all pensioners living in countries where the local banking arrangements make it possible.

Initially, we expect it to be possible to offer the new service to pensioners in Australia, Canada, Irish Republic, USA, South Africa, West Germany, France, Belgium, Netherlands, Switzerland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden; in the case of New Zealand, United Kingdom pensioners are already paid through the New Zealand social security authorities rather than by payable order. It is estimated that the new service will cover about 300,000 of the 400,000 United Kingdom pensioners living overseas, and that they will gain by about £3 per payment. Invitations to them to change to the new system will start to be issued later this year.

Following examination of 11 tenders to provide the transfer service, that from the Bank of Scotland has been accepted. Additional jobs at the Bank of Glasgow are likely to result.

Tinnitus

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many specialised tinnitus centres there are in the United Kingdom; in which district health authorities they are situated; and what are their sources of funding;

(2) if he will establish a supra-regional network of tinnitus centres with central funding.

Mr. Whitney: Information on the numbers, funding and situation of tinnitus clinics is not collected centrally. No application for supra-regional funding has been received from any regional or special health authority.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will categorise the number of people known to be suffering from tinnitus according to the severity of the complaint; and if he will give the source of the information.

Mr. Whitney: It is estimated that some 15 per cent. of the adult population experiences symptoms of varying frequency, degree and duration which might be defined broadly as tinnitus, and that some 2 per cent. of adults experiences continuous tinnitus, a proportion of whom would be seriously troubled by the symptom. This information is based on data collected in the 1981 general household survey carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. A copy of its Report is available in the Library.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what proportion of the patients who participated in trials of tinnitus maskers were not helped by using the maskers;

(2) when he received the study of the multi-centre trials of masking devices used to relieve tinnitus; and when he intends to respond to it.

Mr. Whitney: The report of the multi-centre trials of masking devices was received in December 1984. It is a long, technical and complex report which has proved difficult to interpret. The report has been considered by independent scientific referees.

It has been hoped that the report would allow clear guidance to be given about the effectiveness of this form of treatment, but this has not proved possible. It does suggest that some sufferers from tinnitus, particularly those who also suffer from hearing loss, can be assisted by tinnitus maskers although for very few would there be long-term inhibition of the condition. A higher proportion appear to receive some degree of comfort from the device although it does not appear possible to identify such patients in advance. Other forms of treatment, for instance counselling, can also be effective for some patients. I shall shortly be writing to the co-ordinator of the project.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received regarding the funding of tinnitus clinics and the National Health Service provision of maskers; what response he has given; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many tinnitus sufferers have received maskers supplied by the National Health Service; and how many National Health Service patients have had to pay for maskers.

Mr. Whitney: In recent years there have been numerous letters from hon. Members and the public about funding of tinnitus clinics, including the suggestions that they should be regional facilities, supra-regional or centrally funded. The response has been that facilities for the treatment of tinnitus sufferers ought to be available at all hospital ear, nose and throat departments. As for the provision of tinnitus maskers, this is entirely a matter for the clinical judgment of a consultant in relation to a particular patient. He would be aware of the variable benefit that patients derive from this form of treatment. However I am advised that there is not yet general agreement about the effectiveness of this form of treatment compared to others. We have no central information on how many maskers are being provided. Health authorities have no powers to charge National Health Service patients for maskers.

Personal Pensions

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from financial institutions and companies about his proposal in the Social Security Bill for an extra contribution of 2 per cent. payable for five years to all employees taking out personal pensions.

Mr. Newton: A variety of views has been expressed in representations about the extra 2 per cent. contribution for personal pensions and occupational pension schemes which contract out from 1 January 1986. Some share the Government's view that it will serve principally as an encouragement. Others take the view — which the Government do not accept — that it might be taken existing occupational pension schemes.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet decided who to appoint to the group which he intends to establish to advise him on aspects of marketing personal pensions and consumer protection.

Mr. Fowler: Membership of the group which will advise Ministers on personal pensions will be announced shortly.

Civil Defence

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what responses he received from medical officers of health authorities in the west midlands region in respect of the survey concerning National Health Service plans in preparation for a nuclear war.

Mr. Whitney: The Department invited comment from health authorities and other bodies on a draft consultation document it issued in June 1985 about civil defence planning in the National Health Service. The West Midlands regional health authority included in its reply advice about the distinction between planning for conventional and for nuclear war, and drew attention to the extent of disruption and the numbers of casualties which could result from a nuclear attack. Officials are considering the large amount of comment received.

Claims (Statistics)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the average number of claims administered each day during the last 12 months at the main social security offices in Wolverhampton, Birmingham, Coventry, Halesowen and Walsall.

Mr. Major: The information requested is not available in respect of the last 12 months. The latest available figures are for the year ending 9 April 1985 and are as follows:

Average number of claims administered each day

Area Covered	Supplementary Benefit	Contributory Benefits
Wolverhampton	134	74
Birmingham	654	296
Coventry	151	77
Halesowen	89	28
Walsall	109	66

Whooping Cough Vaccine

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his present policy regarding the issuing of warnings to parents about the dangers of the vaccine for whooping cough; and what actions of legal proceedings have been instituted against his Department in respect of the administration of this vaccine.

Mr. Whitney: The Department funds Health Education Council literature for parents which explains the risks associated with whooping cough vaccination and sets out the contra-indications. Doctors and community nurses have also been advised by the Department about the contra-indications to whooping cough vaccination and urged to discuss the matter with parents to help them make informed decisions. Proceedings have been issued against the Department in seven cases.

London Teaching Hospitals (Waiting Times)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the waiting time in each of the London teaching hospitals for hip and knee replacements, arthritis surgery and removal of slipped discs.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. The numbers in the central data sample are too small for reliable estimates to be made below regional level. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairmen of the special health authorities about the information requested.

Abortions

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total number of abortions performed since 1968 to the present date.

Mr. Hayhoe: The number of notifications of legal abortions carried out under the Abortion Act 1967 from 27 April 1968 to 31 December 1984 in England and Wales is 2,288,255. The provisional number for 1985, including notifications received by the end of February 1986, is 171,580, giving a provisional total to the present date of 2,459,835.

Nurse Education

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the funding of education for nurse teachers in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hayhoe: The funding of education for nurse teachers over the last five years has been:

	£ million
1981-82	3·8
1982-83	4·1
1983-84	4·2
1984-85	4·0
1985-86*	3·7

* provisional

These figures cover the cost of training qualified nurses to become teachers and a small proportion is for any further training, funded through the English national board, for those nurses who are already qualified teachers. It is not possible readily to identify the equivalent cost for district nurses from those for midwives and health visitors.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the answer given on statutory sick pay, 27 April 1984, Official Report, columns 627-8.

Mr. Major: The updated information is presented in the table. From September 1984 information can be supplied only on a quarterly rather than a four-weekly basis because of an organisational change within the Department. Additionally, in looking at these figures, it must be appreciated that from September 1984 the Department's inspectors have been concentrating their visiting upon employers who are considered to be at risk. Consequently the errors shown are not representative of employers in general but rather of those who are most likely to make mistakes.

In order that the Department can gauge the level of errors made by employers in general, it is intended that a random selection of employers will be visited towards the end of 1986.

Benefits (July Uprating)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social services (1) if he will estimate the cost of administration involved in applying the July rise in pensions;

(2) if he will estimate the cost of administration involved in applying the July rise in unemployment benefit;

(3) if he will estimate the cost of administration involved in applying the July rise in child benefit;

(4) if he will estimate the cost of administration involved in the forthcoming changes in (a) supplementary benefit and (b) supplementary pension levels.

Mr. Newton: The estimated administrative cost of implementing the July benefit uprating is around £16 million. A reliable breakdown of this figure between the different benefits is not available.

Benefit Claimants (Fuel Bills)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if supplementary benefit claimants who have paid their fuel bills for February but meet the conditions for eligibility for the exceptionally severe weather allowance will be allowed to claim the benefit.

Mr. Newton: Claimants who pay their fuel bills before claiming an exceptionally severe weather payment are not eligible for help under regulation 26 of the Single Payments Regulations 1981, although they may in certain circumstances be eligible for help under regulation 28. A copy of the relevant regulations, and of the Chief Adjudication Officer's revised guidance issued on 6 December 1985, is in the Library.

Departmental Office (Regent Street)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Minister for Social Security and the Disabled is expected to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby of 13 February on the work of the Westminster office of the Department of Health and Social Security in Regent Street.

Mr. Major: I replied to the hon. Member today.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reconsider the tests which are applied in cases of claims for mobility allowance in the light of recent decisions taken by the Tribunal of Commissioners and the House of Lords.

Mr. Newton: The decisions to which the hon. Member refers simply clarify existing legislation and earlier decisions by Social Security Commissioners. Any changes to the qualifying criteria for the allowance have to be considered in the light of the resources available and priorities for other social security spending.

Social Security Budget

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list (a) the size of the total social security budget in 1979 and at the latest available date and (b) to what extent this increase can be accounted for by (i) an increase in real expenditure and (ii) a rise in unemployment.

Mr. Newton: Total expenditure on social security benefits was £15,870 million in 1978-79 and is estimated to be £40,930 million in 1985-86. Of this increase of about £25 billion, some £14 billion is the effect of inflation proofing. Of the remainder, about £5·5 billion reflects real increases in the average amounts of benefit paid, and about £3·75 billion is due to increased numbers of unemployed people receiving benefit.

Prescriptions (Fraud)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list and describe the checks which are made to control fraudulent claiming of exemption status on paying for prescriptions.

Mr. Hayhoe: A proportion of prescription forms bearing declarations that the patient is exempt from charges is sent to every family practitioner committee in respect of prescriptions dispensed in April and October of each year. Family practitioner committees are responsible for checking the validity of these declarations and for recovering any charges that may be due.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the level of fraud in monetary terms arising from fraudulent claiming of exemption from paying for prescriptions.

Mr. Hayhoe: The latest available estimated loss of revenue through incorrect claims for exemption from prescription charges was £4·1 million for the financial year 1984-85.

Hereford and Worcester Ambulance Service

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the financial resources made available to the Hereford and Worcester ambulance authority for each of the years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86; and if he will give the same figures on a constant price basis.

Mr. Whitney: We allocate funds to the West Midlands regional health authority and it allocates part of these funds to the Worcester and district health authority which manages and provides the Hereford and Worcester ambulance service.

My hon. Friend may wish to approach the chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority direct to obtain the information he requires.

Mr. Christopher Herrick

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the claim for industrial injury benefit submitted on 10 November 1985 by Mr. Christopher Herrick of 20 Chapel Walk, Worksop, following an accident last August has not yet been processed; and what action he intends to take.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Press Office (Information)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidelines are issued by the press office of his Department to managers of his Department's local offices in respect of communicating information to journalists.

Mr. Major: Social security local office managers are encouraged to maintain contact with their local press and, within the strict constraints of claimant confidentiality, to provide information about the social security system and the work of their offices.

District Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply of 24 March, Official Report, column 384, about the district health authority chairmanships, the various sources included any Conservative party officials and organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people currently receive (i) housing benefit and (ii) supplementary benefit broken down into client group and family status categories used in the technical annex to the White Paper, "Reform of Social Security"; and how many receive (i) rent rebate-allowance and (ii) rate rebate broken down into the categories of pensioners, working households with children and working households without children.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 309-10]: Estimates of the numbers receiving supplementary benefit at December 1983, the latest date for which information is available, are given in the table. Similar estimates are not routinely available for housing benefit in the categories requested. The estimates given in the table for housing benefit, therefore, have been made on a similar basis to that described in paragraphs 2.6-2.10 of the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691).

Notes to tables

(1) Estimates for supplementary benefit are derived from the 1983 Annual Statistical Enquiry.

(2) Estimates for housing benefit are rounded to the nearest 10,000 and consequently totals may not equal exactly the sum of their component parts.

(3) The housing benefit estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.

(4) The total housing benefit caseload implied by this methodology is somewhat different from that derived from local authority subsidy claims (as published in the Public Expenditure White Paper), which reflect local authorities' forward estimates for a full year.

Disabled People

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of totals and age ranges for (a) registered disabled persons (b) registered mobility allowance holders; and what projections of future trends have been made in each case.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1986, c.509]: Information on the numbers of persons registered with Social Services Departments as physically or sensorily handicapped is collected triennially and the latest available data are given in the table.

† But excludes persons on the Register of the Blind.

The reliability of registration as a guide to the incidence of disability is affected by the fact that registration is voluntary and also by uncertainties about the regularity with which authorities review and update their records. Projections of future trends are not made centrally.

The available information for registered mobility allowance holders as at 20 January 1986 is set out in the following table. Reliable forecasts for future years by reference to age are not available. Table 3.15.6 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89"

(Cmnd. 9702) shows the estimated average number of recipients during the years 1986-87 and 1987-88 as 450,000 and 495,000 respectively.

Disease Statistics

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has broken down by numbers, ages, sex, regional basis etc. of polio victims, brittle bone sufferers, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, Parkinson's disease and spinal injuries.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply 28 January 1986, c. 511]: The available information for the diseases referred to and the relevant international classification of diseases codes is given in the tables. The tables giving estimated number of discharges and deaths are based on the Hospital Inpatient Inquiry, a 10 per cent. sample of records from National Health Service non-psychiatric hospitals. In addition, a regional breakdown of deaths from multiple sclerosis and from Parkinson's disease has been published by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys in "Mortality Statistics: area series DH5 No. 11 1984", copies of which are in the Library.

Dewsbury DHA

Mrs. Peacock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he is satisfied with the discharge of its functions by the Dewsbury district health authority;

(2) for what reasons the services of Mr. Sam Lyles as chairman of the Dewsbury district health authority are being terminated.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 17 March 1986, c. 65]: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) on 26 March.

WALES

Housing Defects

Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether all local authority bids for funding under the Housing Defects Act have been met in full by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Local authority bids for expenditure under the Housing Defects Act were met in full for 1985-86 and for 1986-87 by means of separately identified HSIP allocations.

Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cardiff, North on 27 November 1985, Official Report, column 581, what further information is necessary to enable him to decide whether a higher expenditure limit under the Housing Defects Act is necessary.

Mr. Mark Robinson: We are at present costing the various types of reinstatement schemes which are becoming available.

NHS (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to seek to overcome the problem of a six months waiting list for National Health Service treatment for certain conditions at Ysbyty Gwynedd and Bangor.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The management of waiting lists is a matter for the district health authority. However, to assist authorities in this area the Department has asked them to validate their inpatient waiting lists. On 9 April a workshop will be held with all nine authorities and a group of experts to help identify problems, the reasons for them and develop solutions. Progress will be monitored in the process of the annual review of performance of all district health authorities.

Care Concern Centre, Llangwyfan

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set up an inquiry into the management of the care concern centre for mentally handicapped people at Llangwyfan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Clwyd county council is responsible for registring and inspecting Care Concern, Llangwyfan, under the Registered Homes Act 1984. I have asked the county council for a report and will write to the hon. Gentleman once it has been considered.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the numbers of unfilled junior hospital doctor posts in each of the health authorities in Wales in each of the recognised specialty departments; and how many posts have been unfilled for three months, six months and longer than six months, respectively.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The required information is not available centrally.

Cold Weather (Deaths)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the numbers of people who died as a result of the cold weather in Wales in January, February and March, respectively.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: There are no official estimates of the number of people who die as the result of cold weather in Wales. Of all deaths registered in Wales in January and February 1986, hypothermia was mentioned in four and 13 cases, respectively. Figures are provisional and include cases where hypothermia was not recorded as the underlying cause of death. March figures are not yet available.

Retired People

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people there were in Wales over the age of retirement in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Mid year estimates of population made by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys give 508,800 and 530,900 as the numbers over pensionable age in Wales in 1979 and 1984 respectively. The comparable figure for 1985 is not yet available.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the percentage change in the number of people in Wales over the age of retirement in the last 20 years.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Between 1964 and 1984 the number of people over retirement age increased by 29·7 per cent., from 409,400 to 530,900.

Disabled People

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many registered disabled people there are in (a) Alyn and Deeside and (b) Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The figure for Wales was 119,091 at 31 March 1985. The information is not disaggregated to district council level.

Nursery Places

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many children under the age of five years there are in Wales; and how many nursery places there are.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: According to the latest estimates made by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, there were 177,900 children aged under five in 1984. A total of 20,515 places were available at day nurseries and playgroups in 1984 and 21,264 in 1985. Information is not available on the number of nursery places in schools: but in January 1984 the number of pupils aged under five in the previous August attending schools was 61,629, and in January 1985, 62,858.

Residential Homes

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to seek to change the requirements for registering residential homes for the elderly and nursing homes in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The fees payable for the registration and inspection of residential care and nursing homes will be increased on 1 April 1986 with the coming into effect of the Residential Care Homes (Amendment) Regulations 1986 and the Nursing Homes and Mental Nursing Homes (Amendment) Regulations 1986 (SI Nos. 457/1986 and 456/1986). The Residential Care Homes (Amendment) Regulations 1986 also make a few other minor amendments to the existing regulations.

The Department will shortly be issuing additional guidance to health and local authorities on certain aspects of the registration and inspection of residential care and nursing homes.

Informal Carers

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of informal carers (a) in Wales and (b) in Alyn and Deeside.

Mr. Mark Robinson: There are no estimates available centrally.

Orthopaedic Operations

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average length of time patients have to wait for orthopaedic operations in Welsh hospitals.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In 1984, the latest year for which information is available, the average length of time on the waiting list for orthopaedic operations was 164 days.

Industrial Production

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales, taking 1979 as a base year, what has been the yearly index of industrial production in (a) the manufacturing sector, (b) the construction industry and (c) both sectors together for each year in (i) Wales, (ii) Scotland and (iii) the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The index of production for Wales is, at present, based on the year 1980. To rebase this index accurately to 1979 would incur disproportionate cost. Press notices are produced quarterly on the index and an historical series is contained in Welsh Economic Trends, and they are both available in the House of Commons Library.

Indices of production for Scotland and the United Kingdom are also published in press notices which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Nurses (Accommodation)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will consider compensating nurses who have been required to leave their nurses' homes as a result of the Government's policy of disposing of National Health Service property in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Government policy is to dispose only of surplus NHS property. There is no automatic requirement to provide staff residences except in the case of some junior doctors. Health authorities, however, have discretion to provide residential accommodation for certain staff groups, including nurses, as deemed necessary in local circumstances.

Ambulance Service

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the recommended national ambulance call-out reaction time.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The recommended standards for ambulance services within Wales are that 50 per cent. of emergency calls should have a response within eight minutes of the call being received and 95 per cent. within 20 minutes.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average ambulance call-out reaction time in Caernarfon, Bangor and Llandudno to calls for ambulance service during the hours of 6 pm to 8 am.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average ambulance call-out reaction time in response to ambulance call-outs from Bala ambulance station, from Dolgellau station and Barmouth station to calls for ambulance service during the hours of 6 pm to 8 am.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not available centrally.

Welsh National Opera Company

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether he will make special financial provision for the Welsh National Opera to allow it to visit a greater number of venues in Wales and to spend more time performing in Wales in general;

(2) whether he will take special measures to alleviate the current financial problems which face the Welsh National Opera Company.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Funding of the Welsh National Opera's activities in Wales is a matter for the Welsh Arts Council.

Singleton Hospital

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what date and by whom it was first officially proposed by Her Majesty's Government or the West Glamorgan health authority that the casualty unit at Singleton hospital should be closed.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The transfer of the major accident service from Singleton to Morriston was approved by the then Secretary of State in April 1977 and the provision of a minor casualty unit at Singleton was the subject of the health authority's planning policies from that time until May 1985, when the health authority made a proposal to abandon that commitment which my right hon. Friend was unable to accept.

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling university.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: No.

Student Grants

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table indicating for each local education authority in Wales what range of maintenance grants are paid to help students from their area undertake non-degree courses at technical colleges.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Mandatory awards are available to help students attend designated courses: these include some non-degree courses such as those leading to a diploma of higher education or a BTEC higher national diploma. Details of the value of these awards for the current academic year are contained in the Department of Education and Science publication "Grants to Students —A Brief Guide 1985-86".

Local education authorities also have powers to make discretionary awards to support students on other courses. Any amounts paid under these powers are at the discretion of the individual local authority.

Departmental Jobs

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish an analysis by function of the jobs that were lost from his Department between 1 July 1979 and 1 July 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: On the dates concerned permanent staff in my Department were deployed as follows:

Function	1 July 1979	1 July 1985	Difference
Agriculture, fisheries and food	698	543½	−154½
Industry, energy, trade, employment and tourism	90½	*159½	+69

Education Expenditure

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amounts in constant terms for each of the last 10 years for which figures were available for expenditure on education in (a) the maintained sector and (b) the private sector, in Wales, both expressed in total and per pupil; and if he will also express the figures for the private sector as a percentage of the figures for the maintained sector.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Information is not collected about total expenditure on education in the private sector.

In the maintained sector, the bulk of the expenditure is incurred by local education authorities. The relevant figures (comprising both current and capital expenditure) for spending by local authorities in Wales, with expenditure on the schools sector shown separately and in terms of provision per pupil, are as follows (at 1984-85 prices using the GDP deflators).

	Total (Net) Expenditure on Education £ million	Expenditure in the Schools sector £ million	Expenditure in the Schools Sector per pupil £*
1975-76	767·5	614·7	1,103
1976-77	748·7	598·2	1,072
1977-78	689·7	551·5	994
1978-79	697·7	557·9	1,018
1979-80	674·6	541·5	1,006
1980-81	694·3	550·2	1,048
1981-82	686·5	542·5	1,060
1982-83	691·7	544·3	1,091
1983-84	731·6	572·3	1,168
1984-85	688·3	538·0	1,114

* Pupil numbers at January in each year.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Social Security Commissioner for Wales

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Attorney-General (1) whether he has any plans to review the status of the post of Social Security Commissioner for Wales;

(2) if the Lord Chancellor has any plans to abolish the adminstrative office of the Social Security Commissioner for Wales.

The Attorney-General: Consultations are in progress on a proposal to discontinue the administrative functions of the Cardiff office of social security commissioners and the permanent location of a commissioner there. No final decision has been taken. It is in any event the Lord Chancellor's intention that hearings will continue to take place in Cardiff.

THE ARTS

South Bank Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he was consulted about the appointment of South Bank Board members.

Mr. Luce: Yes.

National Youth Orchestra

Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the financial resources available to the National Youth Orchestra for the forthcoming financial year; and if he will list the representations he has received in respect of the future of the orchestra.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Thamesday

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if Lambeth borough council was invited to the meeting held on 24 March at the Arts Council to discuss the future of Thamesday.

Mr. Luce: No. The South Bank Board has sought discussions with Lambeth borough council on several previous occasions, but without success.

Jubilee Gardens

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when he expects the lease to be agreed between the London Residuary Body and the South Bank Board in respect of Jubilee Gardens.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Pornographic Video Tapes

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will issue guidelines to procurators fiscal regarding prosecution policy in relation to the rental of pornographic video tapes; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Procurators fiscal are aware of the standard of obscenity which merits prosecution in cases involving the sale or rental of obscene video cassettes. The only instruction which has been issued to procurators fiscal in this connection is that where an offence could be dealt with under the Video Recordings Act 1984, proceedings should not be taken at common law for offences of obscenity or indecency, or under section 51 of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982, without express instructions from Crown counsel. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate does not intend to issue any further instructions at this time in connection with cases involving obscene video cassettes.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many prosecutions have taken place in the years 1983 to 1985 and in 1986 to date against persons who have allegedly supplied pornographic video tapes to shops in Scotland.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: It is not possible to obtain the information sought from the statistics which are kept.

SCOTLAND

Housing (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of people on Scottish Special Housing Association waiting lists at 31 March in each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Ancram: No meaningful total can be provided as the SSHA houses tenants nominated predominantly from district council waiting lists.

Housing Action Areas

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will make a decision on the Woodlands (Maryhill Road number 1) housing action area for improvement.

Mr. Ancram: Glasgow district council will be advised shortly of my right hon. and learned Friend's decision.

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses in draft housing action areas for improvement have had to be demolished since 1979 during the period when a decision was awaited from Government or a Government agency; and what information he has as to the financial loss suffered by home owners as a result of such demolitions.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not held centrally.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners died in prisons in Scotland during each of the past five years for which records are available; what ages were the deceased; how many of such deaths were from natural causes; how many were from terminal illnesses; and, in respect of these, when he was notified that the prisoner was suffering from a terminal illness.

Mr. John MacKay: The numbers and ages of prisoners who died in penal establishments in Scotland in each of the past five years are as follows. Deaths from natural causes are indicated by an asterisk. None of the deaths was from a terminal illness. The figures do not include prisoners who died following transfer to an NHS hospital or following early release on medical grounds.

1981 Four aged 17, 18, 24, 31.
1982 Four aged 18, 19, 19, 42*.
1983 Seven aged 18, 20, 26, 31, 34, 36, 55.
1984 Six aged 17, 27, 35, 39, 48, 48*.
1985 Ten aged 16, 17, 25, 26, 28*, 32, 38, 44*, 47, 49*.

Cattle (Abortions)

Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department collects statistics on abortions in cattle and the causes if determined for such abortions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Under the terms of the Brucellosis (Scotland) Order 1979 all bovine abortions or premature calvings are required to be notified to the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland. A total of 4,168 notifications were received in 1985. This compared with 4,160 in 1984 and 4,335 in 1983. Subsequent investigations by the state veterinary service, which are confined to testing for brucellosis, proved negative in all cases.

Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the bodies and individuals who have submitted representations on the report of the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council; which of these commented on the recommendation regarding colleges of education; whether any supported the council's recommendation on the colleges; when he expects to announce the result of the consultation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The bodies and individuals who had commented on the report by 25 March are listed below, those commenting on the recommendation regarding colleges of education being indicated with an asterisk. Although the majority of respondents oppose the recommendation, some have supported it. Decisions on those recommendations which are directed at the Government will be announced after due consideration has been given to all the views expressed.

Responses to the STEAC Report had been received from the following organisations and individuals by 25 March 1986.

Crofter Housing Grant and Loan Scheme

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the crofter housing grant and loan scheme; what representations he has received about the present levels of financial assistance it provides; and if he will increase the sums available to take account of the effect of inflation since the last revision in 1982.

Mr. John MacKay: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 26 March to the right hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Stewart). The revised rates of assistance fully reflect movements in building costs since 1982. I believe the scheme continues to be a necessary and effective means of raising the standard of crofter housing.

Student Fees

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will announce the fees to be charged to students attending Scottish institutions other than universities in the academic year 1986-87

Mr. Rifkind: For the academic year 1986-87, I have prescribed the following fee levels for home students and for students from other European Community countries on full-time advanced courses in the central institutions and colleges of education (fees for 1985-86 are shown in brackets):

	Fee levels
Postgraduate courses	£1,680	(£1,632)
Undergraduate and equivalent courses	£536	(£520)

Fees for home and other European Community students on courses at local authority colleges are the responsibility of the local authorities. I understand that the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities has decided to recommend fees as follows:

	Fee levels
Postgraduate courses	£1,680	(£1,632)
Advanced full-time courses	£536	(£520)
Non-advanced full-time courses	£325	(£265)

For overseas students the Government's policy is that students should pay fees that cover the cost of their education. Local authorities and institutions are free to determine the fees to be charged in accordance with that policy, and in the light of their own circumstances.

I understand that the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities has decided to recommend to local authorities the following fees for students at local authority colleges paying the overseas rate who began their courses on or after 1 September 1980:

Advanced courses	£3,540
Non-advanced courses	£1,947

Land Reclamation

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent by the Government, local authorities and the National Coal Board on land reclamation in Scotland in 1975 and every year until 1985; and what acreage of land was reclaimed by each body.

Mr. Allan Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 370-371]: Overall responsibility for the rehabilitation of land in Scotland rests with the Scottish Development Agency. Figures for the agency are as follows:

Year	Amount £	Acreage
1975-76	8,000	0
1976-77	993,000	4·5
1977-78	13,005,000	189
1978-79	19,136,000	981
1979-80	24,611,000	1,144
1980-81	27,582,000	3,386
1981-82	19,876,000	1,621

Year	Amount £	Acreage
1982-83	24,793,000	6,063
1983-84	22,926,000	1,448
1984-85	25,016,000	793
1985-86 (to date)	21,789,000	355

No grant-aided reclamation has been undertaken by the NCB in Scotland during the period 1975-85; the NCB normally release redundant colliery sites to local authorities for reclamation. However, I understand from the board that during the past 10 years, some 267 hectares of derelict land has been reclaimed following opencast operations.

Crime Statistics

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many crimes of violence have taken place in Scotland in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1986]: The figures for 1975 to 1984 are set out below. Figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Recorded Crimes of Violence: Scotland

	Number
1975	9,946
1976	10,864
1977	11,181
1978	11,226
1979	11,279
1980	12,347
1981	13,419
1982	13,222
1983	14,285
1984	15,181

Note: The figures include all non-sexual crimes of violence (Group 1 of the standard crime classification), rape, assault with intent to rape, indecent assault and assault to commit unnatural crimes.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Labelling

Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about the regulations concerning the labelling of food; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: I regularly receive comments and inquiries from many sources on a wide range of labelling matters. We are currently consulting interested organisations on proposals for the fat content labelling of foods and on guidelines for the nutrition labelling of foods.

Organo-chlorine Residues

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what levels of organo-chlorine residues have been detected in rabbit, processed pork and poultry imported from the People's Republic of China; and what progress is presently being made in discussions between the Governments of the United Kingdom and the People's Republic of China in attempting to detect the source of chemical compounds in meat products in China.

Mrs. Fenner: The hon. Member will find the information requested in the report of the working party on pesticide residues (1982 to 1985) which was published on 4 March this year and is available in the Library of the House. The Chinese authorities were alerted to the working party's findings in April 1985 and officials from the state veterinary service visited the People's Republic of China in August 1985 and made recommendations for establishing a monitoring system for contaminants. Following further contacts between officials we are making arrangements for experts of both countries to meet to determine the cause of the contamination.

Potatoes

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many registered growers planted potatoes in excess of quota in 1985 and by how many hectares; and how many planted below quota, and by how many hectares.

Mr. Jopling: The information requested is not available from Government records. The administration of the potato quota arrangements and the collection of information about the levels of plantings by registered producers are matters for the Potato Marketing Board.

EC (Regulation No. 765/86)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sales have been authorised by the Commission in terms of Commission regulation (EEC) No. 765/86 of 14 March; if he will specify the price, amount and country of destination of each sale; if he will further explain which countries are covered by the definition Zone C2(i) in the regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

EC (Price Review)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress was made in the Council of Ministers on the issue of the price review at the meeting on 24 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 26 March 1986 to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland (Mr. Maclennan)

EC (Dairy Produce)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if the Commission has authority under its regulation No. 765/86 to sell butter to Zone C2(i) countries at prices lower than the minimum prescribed under the general agreement on tariffs and trade; if any instructions have been given to the Commission by the Council of Ministers on this matter; and if he will make a statment;

(2) if the Commission sought the agreement of the Council of Ministers to its decision not to publish the rates of subsidy for exports of dairy products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Badgers

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions his officials have had with the members of the Dunnet committee on that committee's draft report on badgers and bovine tuberculosis; what requests for redrafting of the report have been made to the committee by his officials and for what reasons; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: No such discussions have been held with Professor Dunnet and his team and no such requirements have been put to them. The aim has always been that Professor Dunnet and his colleagues should produce an independent report. Any suggestion that anything has been said or done by my Department to infringe their freedom in this regard in entirely without foundation.

DEFENCE

Army Support Buildings and Facilities (Devon)

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that any new support buildings and facilities required by the Army in Devon should be outside the Dartmoor national park.

Mr. Lee: No. However, any new facilities required in connection with service training on Dartmoor will continue to be the subject of full consultation with the Dartmoor national park authority.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation to the development of a strategic defence initiative for the European part of the Alliance.

Mr. Norman Lamont: None. The strategic defence initiative is a United States research programme to determine the feasibility of establishing an effective system of defence against ballistic missile attack. The United States Government have made clear that the research programme is designed to enhance Allied security as well as United States security.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the specific arrangements outlined in the memorandum of understanding on the strategic defence initiative which cover the following issues (a) security procedure, (b) administration of contracts, (c) limitations to the memorandum of understanding, (d) the right for Anglo-American partners within the strategic defence initiative programme to attend conferences together, (e) the arrangements which must be made for face-to-face meetings, (f) any other administrative procedures with a bearing on security or on the classification of research and development work, (g) intellectual property rights, (h) national and international trade laws and (i) the requirement for Government guarantees to underwrite strategic defence initiative research.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As the Government have stated on a number of occasions recently the content of the memorandum of understanding and supporting administrative documentation related to British participation in the strategic defence initiative research programme is confidential.

Military Lands Acts (Byelaws)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all sites in the United Kingdom for which byelaws had been made or proposed under the Military Lands Acts (i) since 1956 and prior to 31 December 1983, (ii) between 1 January 1984 and 31 December 1985, and (iii) since 1 January 1986.

The following byelaws have been made after 1 January 1984 and before 31 December 1985:

1985
Upper Hulme Range
RAF Greenham Common
RAF Molesworth
RAF Alconbury

1984
British Underwater Test and Evaluation Centre
Bellerby Moor and Wathgill Ranges

The following byelaws have been made since 1 January 1986:

Faslane, Coulport and Rhu Narrows
HMS Forest Moor and Menwith Hill Station
RAF Lakenheath
RAF Mildenhall

The following byelaws have been proposed, but not yet made, since 1 January 1986:

Dockyard Port of Rosyth
Holy Loch
RAF Upper Heyford
RAF St. Mawgan
RAF Brawdy
RAF Burtonwood
RAF Caerwent
RAF Waddington
Aircraft and Armament Experimental Establishment
Boscombe Down
Atomic Weapons Research Establishment Aldermaston
Royal Ordnance Factory Burghfield
Royal Ordnance Factory Cardiff

In addition, byelaws for RAC Range Castlemartin were proposed in 1985, but have not yet been made.

Youth Training

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate how many YTS places will be taken up by his Department during the current year.

Mr. Lee: In 1985-86 the Ministry of Defence offered 1,126 places on the civilian YTS and, by the end of February, 672 places had been allocated. The armed services YTS, which runs parallel to but separate from the civilian scheme, offered some 2,200 places in 1985-86 of which 1,006 had been allocated by the end of February 1986.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has for the modernisation of Britain's contribution to NATO battlefield nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 20 January, at columns 90-91, and to the communiqúe issued at the NATO nuclear planning group's meeting in March, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

HMS Dreadnought

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future uses for HMS Dreadnought now situated at Her Majesty's Rosyth naval base.

Mr. Lee: HMS Dreadnought has been taken out of service and is laid up at Rosyth. No future uses are planned for the vessel. Plans for her final disposal have not yet been drawn up.

Commercial Management

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will update his calculations of the annual cost to the defence budget of the introduction of commercial management; and if he will list the consequential annual cost or charges to his Department for the following items (a) redundancies, (b) pension arrangements, (c) staff costs for supervisory organisations within the dockyards, (d) value added tax contributions, (e) efficiency savings and (f) supply facilities for stocks and spares.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Warship Propellers

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his procurement policy for warships' propellers; what percentage have been purchased abroad; and what percentage was purchased in the United Kingdom in each of the last six years.

Mr. Lee: The policy for the procurement of Defence equipment, including propellers, is contained in the publication "Value for Money in Defence Equipment Procurement", Defence Open Government Document 83/01, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

All contracts placed by the Ministry of Defence in the past six years for propellers for warships have been placed with United Kingdom manufacturers or through United Kingdom shipbuilders. The Ministry of Defence does not require contractors to notify their sources for lower value subcontracts and we cannot therefore determine what portion of work is undertaken overseas.

Arms Sales (Middle East)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the scale of expenditure of Her Majesty's Government used to aid arms sales in the middle east, for each of the financial years 1982 to date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Net expenditure attributable to the middle east (including North Africa) is as follows, covering the costs of staff specifically concerned with the support of sales of defence equipment to this region and the waiver of training costs in support of such sales:

	£ million
1984-85	0·530
1985-86	*1·044

* Estimated

Figures for earlier years are not readily available. The above totals exclude the costs of other staff whose activities cannot be apportioned by areas of the world and of embassy staff who cannot be apportioned to sales of defence equipment, and expenses on visits by potential customers and on activities which are financed by charges to exporters or customers. The net costs to Her Majesty's Government of supporting exports of defence equipment worldwide are more than covered by the levies that are charged to exporters in recognition of research and development expenditure funded by the Ministry of Defence.

Trident

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about Government proposals to locate the Trident base in Scotland.

Mr. Stanley: A wide variety of representations about the Government's Trident proposals have been received. No separate record is maintained of representations dealing specifically with the proposal to locate the Trident base in Scotland.

Berlin Brigade (Equipment)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any orders are to be signed in the near future for armoured personnel carriers intended for use by the Berlin Brigade of the British Army.

Mr. Stanley: The possible purchase of hard-skinned troop carrying vehicles for the Berlin Brigade remains under consideration. No decisions have yet been taken.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Maintenance

Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about raising the ceiling for the payment of maintenance for spouses and children in line with the raising of personal allowances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the limits for small maintenance payments which must be paid without deduction of tax. A Treasury order was made in February (SI 1986 No. 328) introducing new limits for payments due on or after 6 April 1986 as follows:

(a) £48 a week or £208 a month for payments made by one spouse to another, and for payments made to a person under 21 for his or her own benefit; and

(b) £25 a week or £108 a month for payments to any other person for the benefit of a person under 21.

These new limits exceed the current personal allowances and were announced in an Inland Revenue Press Release on 27 February.

Public Sector Construction

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average per capita cost of one man employed in public sector construction work in the United Kingdom.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not possible to calculate reliable estimates of cost per job for any category of Government spending. Such estimates depend on the definitions and assumptions used, as well as the time scale chosen.

Income Tax

Dr. MacDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1986 Budget, the information on income tax reductions provided in his reply of 4 April 1985 to the hon. Member for Thurrock, Official Report, columns 709-710.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the amount of income tax collected, the amount of taxable income, and the number of taxpayers in each Scottish region, English and Welsh county, and in Greater London.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Personal Taxation

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out full details of the personal taxation and structure as at present in force in (a) France, (b) Japan, (c) Canada, (d) (e) the United States of America and (e) West Germany.

Mr. Moore: Personal income tax systems are complex and the details differ substantially from country to country.

The information given in the tables below provides some indication of the rates and structures of taxation levied at national level in the countries mentioned.

Table 1
Income Tax Thresholds in £—employment income

	Single Person	Married Couple with no dependent children
France	4,215	4,635
Japan	2,475	3,385
Canada	2,130	3,970
USA	1,810	3,135
West Germany	1,795	3,100

Notes:

(a) The thresholds represent the gross employment income at which liability to tax begins.

(b) the thresholds are those for 1986, except in the case of France where the 1985 thresholds are quoted. This is because France will not fix its rate for 1986 until the end of the year.

(c) It is assumed in the case of the married couple that the husband is the sole earner.

(d) All thresholds take account of the universal minimum deductions for expenses, personal allowances, the deductability, where applicable, of social security contributions and other standard reliefs.

(e) The thresholds have been converted to sterling at the purchasing power equivalent of sterling in Novermber 1985 (the latest date for which we have figures). The purchasing power equivalents are calculated on the basis of updated OECD figures.

No income tax is levied on the first £1,030 of net taxable income.

A 22 per cent. rate applies to the band of taxable income from £1,030 to £4,060.

Thereafter the rate rises gradually to 56 per cent. which applies to the band of taxable income in excess of £29,220.

Married couple with no dependent children making a joint return

No income tax is levied on the first £2,060 of net taxable income.

A 22 per cent. rate applies to the band of taxable income from £2,060 to £8,120.

Thereafter the rate rises gradually to 56 per cent. which applies to the band of taxable income in excess of £58,440.

Notes:

(a) The figures relate to 1986 except in the case of France where the 1985 figures are quoted. France will not fix its rates for 1986 until the end of the year.

(b) The bands of taxable income have been converted to sterling at the purchasing power equivalent to sterling in November 1985 (the latest available figures). The purchasing power equivalents are calculated on the basis of updated OECD figures.

(c) There are also local income taxes in Japan, Canada and the United States of America. These constitute a not insignificant additional tax burden.

(d) Social security contributions vary from country to country and are paid in addition to income tax.

(e) Methods of computing taxable income differ widely from one country to another. Greater or larger reliefs and deductions are allowed in calculating taxable income. A mere comparison of tax rates does not therefore give a complete picture.

Married Man's Tax Allowance

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer at the 1986-87 tax rates announced in the Budget of the married man's tax allowance in excess of the corresponding single persons' allowance; how much of this cost is attributable to taxpayers aged below 65 years; and what is the weekly value of this extra relief to the married man paying income tax at the standard rate.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

EC Budget

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the most up-to-date figures for the United Kingdom contribution to the EEC budget in each year from 1975 (a) at current prices and (b) at 1985 prices.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Structural Funds

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the payments received from the United Kingdom for each of the structural funds from 1975 for each year for (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Scotland.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will give further details of the proposal announced in his Budget statement to restrict eligibility for tax relief under the business expansion scheme where the company has a high proportion of its assets in land and buildings.

Mr. Moore: My right hon. Friend's Budget proposal for changes to the business expansion scheme have given rise to a number of queries which go beyond what was covered in the Budget day press release put out by the Inland Revenue. I have authorised the Inland Revenue to issue today a further Press Release giving a fuller description of the proposed restriction on a company's holding of land and buildings.

Tax Relief

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for 1978-79 and for the latest available date the revenue cost of granting tax relief for (i) life assurances, (ii) mortgage tax relief, (iii) approved pension schemes, (iv) employers' contributions to funded pension schemes, (v) retirement annuity premiums, (vi) age allowance and (vii) capital gains exemption for selling main residence; if he will express the growth in each of these totals in terms of a percentage increase in (a) money terms and (b) real terms; and if each set of data for both points in time could be expressed as a percentage of total Government revenue.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1986, c. 222-23]: The information for 1978-79 and the latest year, for which comparable data are available, is as follows: 1985-86 for all items except (iii) and (iv) where data relate to 1984-85. The figures represent the reduction in tax liability resulting from the existence of the reliefs; they should not be interpreted as the tax yields from withdrawing each relief.

Notes for items:—

(i) Life assurance premium relief was abolished for contracts made on or after 14 March 1984. Costs are net of the public expenditure element.

(ii) Includes the cost of the former option mortgage scheme which was subsumed under the arrangements for giving mortgage interest relief at source (MIRAS) from April 1983 The cost of the option mortgage scheme was as follows:

	£ million
1978-79	148
1979-80	189
1980-81	228
1981-82	262
1982-83	306
1983-84	*17

*(for claims in respect of earlier years)

(iii) Composite estimates published in the relevant Public Expenditure White Paper on the basis set out in the Inland Revenue's note of February 1978 to the General Sub-Committee of the Expenditure Committee (second report 1977-78, Appendix 15). The latest comparable estimate is for 1984-85. This approach to the calculation of the cost of pension scheme reliefs included the cost of relief for employees' contributions, and funds' investment income, net of tax paid on pensions received, plus tax in excess of the basic rate on the estimated income element of pensions received. The cost of the exemption from Capital Gains tax is not known.

Costs of three of the components of pensions reliefs for 1985-86 are shown below. The total cost of tax reliefs for pension schemes cannot be calculated by summing the costs of the individual reliefs since this would imply a considerable degree of multiple taxation.

Cost of Reliefs for:—	1985-86 £ million
Employees' contributions to funded pension schemes	1,400
Pension funds' investment income (excluding capital gains for which no reliable estimate is available)	3,500
Lump sums on retirement (assuming relief at the basic rate)	1,000

(iv) Calendar year series. Latest comparable data are for 1984-85. These estimates are particularly tentative and are on the basis that employers' contributions are not taxed as a benefit in kind of the employee.

(vi) Cost of the excess of age allowances over and above the corresponding single person's and married man's allowances.

Taxation

Mr. Rooker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will construct an index, with 1978-79 equalling 100, of the changes in the level of income tax and national insurance contributions for each subsequent year for a taxpayer on (a) half, (b) two thirds, (c) average, (d) five times and (e) 10 times average earnings for households where the taxpayer is (i) single, (ii) married, no children, (iii) married with two children and (iv) married with four children, in all cases assuming the wife does not work.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1986, c. 307-8]: The following table shows (a) income tax plus national insurance contributions less child benefit, where appropriate, as a percentage of gross earnings; and (b) real net income after income tax, national insurance contributions and child benefit in index number form with 1978-79 equalling 100. The calculations assume that the taxpayer has no reliefs other than the appropriate personal allowance and that national insurance contributions are at the contracted-in rate. Average earnings are those for full-time males paid at adult rates whose pay was not affected by absence. Figures for 1985-86 and 1986-87 are provisional.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will present in tabular form data for the financial years 1978-79 and 1986-87 on (a) the tax threshold for (i) a single person, (ii) a married couple and (iii) a married couple with two children and (b) the eligibility for supplementary benefit for each of these groups taking the latest data on average housing costs and assuming for the two child family one child is above and one below the age of 11 years; and what is the eligibility for family income supplement for a family with two children.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office (Wales)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the numbers of people employed by the Post Office in Wales in (a) 1979, (b) 1982 and (c) at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Butcher: I understand from the Post Office that the available information relates only to staff employed in the area covered by the postal board for Wales and the Marches (which, apart from Wales, includes parts of Cheshire, Hereford and Worcester, and Shropshire). The figures are as follows:

February	Number
1979	8,660
1982	8,644
1986	8,847

The figures include part-time staff counted as equivalent to half full-time employees.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the numbers of (a) post offices and (b) sub-post offices in Wales in (i) 1979 and (ii) the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Butcher: I understand from the Post Office that the information requested is as follows:

	Crown offices	Sub-post offices
1979	98	1,752
1986*	91	1,647

* February.

The figure for 1979 is an estimate, because at that time the Post Office did not maintain records separately identifying offices in Wales and those in England within the area covered by the postal board for Wales and the Marches. The estimate assumes that 80 per cent. of the offices in that area are within Wales.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the policy of (i) the Central Computer Telecommunications Agency and (ii) his Department regarding the purchase or the receipt of tenders for computers and software from companies which seek to impose extra-territorial controls on the movement and resale of their products; and if he will make a statement

Mr. Alan Clark: This Department does not accept any extra-territorial constraints when making such purchases. The Central Computer and Telecomunications agency is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

United States (Export Denials List)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his policy towards the implementation and publicising of the United States export denials list in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United States denied parties list has no status in United Kingdom law. Companies should contact my Department if they appear on the list in the course of legitimate trading.

United States Products (Extra-territorial Controls)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the policy towards the support with grants and other public funds of companies which build products which are subsequently sold in the United Kingdom on the basis of United States extra-territorial controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Decisions about the payment of grants and other public funds to companies are made on the basis of all relevant circumstances.

Cable Form (Electrical Engineers)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Cable Form (Electrical Engineers) Ltd. of Romiley has received any public funds since 1979.

Mr. Butcher: Cableform Ltd. of Romiley in Cheshire has received assistance from the Department of Trade and Industry under the Science and Technology Act 1965 and the Industrial Development Acts. The normal terms and conditions of Departmental assistance apply.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will set up an inquiry under section 435 of the Companies Act 1985 into the performance of the directors' duties under section 309—directors to have regard to interests of employees—in respect of the sale of Cable Form (Electrical Engineers) Ltd. of Romiley to Fisher Karpark Industries Ltd.

Mr. Howard: If the hon. Member would send me details of his reasons for suggesting an inquiry, I will consider his request further.

Fisher Karpark Ltd.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has received any application from Fisher Karpark Ltd. for financial assistance from his Department in connection with the transfer of production from Cable Form at Romiley to its factories at Sowerby Bridge.

Mr. Butcher: I am not aware of any such application.

Systime plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Department of Trade and Industry representatives and those of the British Technology Group at the board meeting of Systime plc on 19 January 1983 received a copy of the revised minutes of that meeting dated 27 January 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: Copies of the revised minutes referred to were received by both the Department and the BTG.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) why Mr. Alastair MacDonald and Mr. Bill Wigglesworth of his Department attended a board meeting of Systime plc on 19 January 1983; what action was taken by them arising from the meeting; and if he will make a statement;

(2) why Sir Jeffrey Sterling attended a board meeting of Systime plc on 19 January 1983; what action was taken by him arising from the meeting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: Department of Industry officials attended a number of meetings and discussions in the early months of 1983 which were aimed at finding a resolution to the serious financial difficulties which Systime faced at that time. Sir Jeffrey Sterling participated in some of these discussions in his capacity as special adviser to the then Secretary of State for Industry.

Property Ownership

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received on the subject of unitisation in property ownership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have received a number of representations from those interested in the concept of unitising property, and the subject was discussed on 6 March in the Standing Committee considering the Financial Services Bill. I refer my hon. Friend to what my hon. Friend the Member for Coventry, South-West (Mr. Butcher) said on that occasion at columns 465 to 467. Discussions are continuing with interested parties, including other Government Departments.

Citizens Band Radio

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will itemise (a) the total number of prosecutions brought and (b) the total number of convictions secured for offences involving unauthorised possession and use of citizens band radio equipment in each of the last six years; and if he will further categorise these by the type of offence charged.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

South Africa

Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report on how British companies have complied with the European Community's code of conduct for companies with interests in South Africa during the 12-month period to 30 June 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: By 18 March 1985, 172 companies had submitted reports to the Department under the code of conduct. Copies of the reports, and of the Department's analysis and summary have, as in previous years, been placed in the Library of each House. These documents may also be inspected at the Department's library, at the British embassy in Pretoria, at the British consulate-general in Johannesburg, and at the British consulates in Cape Town and Durban.

Reports were received from the overwhelming majority of British companies with interests in South Africa. Of those companies whose interests are known or believed to warrant a full report under the code, only three declined to submit returns.

The reporting period was characterised by continued economic recession in which wage rates throughout the South African economy generally failed to keep pace with consumer price inflation. Against this background, the performance of British subsidiaries in increasing the provision of fringe benefits to their black employees seems particularly creditable. Once again, the returns also showed evidence of increased dealings with South Africa's emerging trade unions and a growing commitment to training, education and community projects.

The Government are grateful to companies for their continued efforts in reporting and will be urging them to comply fully with the revised code which is operational for the ensuing reporting period.

Mr. Graham Day

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the position of Mr. Graham Day, a non-executive director of the Laird Group, in the light of the possible acquisition by that company of Leyland Bus.

Mr. Channon: I told the House on 5 March that Mr. Graham Day is to become chairman of BL plc in succession to Sir Austin Bide once decisions have been made on the future of the main Land Rover-Leyland businesses. The Government hope that it will be possible to reach decisions on the future of Leyland Bus shortly after that.

Mr. Day is aware, as a director of The Laird Group, of their strategy regarding bus manufacture. If he were to become a director or chairman of BL before the matter of the disposal of the bus business had been concluded, he would therefore be unable within BL to deal with that matter. In that event he would nominate a BL executive to act in his place and report to the board and deal with the Government on it as necessary.

Newspaper Industry (Grants)

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government grants in 1985 and 1986 have been given to the newspaper industry in (a) Scotland and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom, for the installation of high technology equipment.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 26 March 1986]: I regret that information is not available in the form requested.

However, since 1 January 1985 newspaper printers and publishers have been offered a total of £122,000 of new style regional development grants in respect of projects in Great Britain.

Payments of old RDG are categorised by reference to the Standard Industrial classification 1968 and can only be attributed to groups of related industries (SIC orders). The newspaper industry falls within SIC order XVIII—paper printing and publishing. The latest figures available of such payments to companies within that SIC order for Great Britain for the period 1 January 1985 to 31 December 1985 total £26·6 million, of which £7·1 million relates to projects in Scotland.

In addition companies in Northern Ireland falling within that SIC Order received £3·5 million of regional assistance in the financial year beginning 1 April 1984.

ENVIRONMENT

Insulation

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the public alleging the abuse of the insulation grant system through pressure selling; and if he has any plans to discuss with local authorities more effective supervision of contractors for grant-aided work.

Mr. John Patten: The Department has in the past received representations from the public about pressure selling in connection with the Homes Insulation Scheme. Local authorities are primarily responsible for the operation of the scheme and the department's regional offices discuss regularly with authorities the operation of the scheme in practice, including the problems and types of malpractices. If the hon. Member is concerned about a particular case perhaps he would write to me with the details.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the work of the interdepartmental group examing the future of the homes insulation scheme; which Departments are represented on it; what representations it has received; if it will be issuing a consultative paper; and when he expects it to report.

Sir George Young: There is no such group. My Department keeps the scheme under continuing review and consults the energy efficiency office of the Department of Energy and other Government Departments as necessary.

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is considering any alterations to the home insulation grant scheme, so as to incorporate other effective energy-saving measures within its remit.

Sir George Young: The scope of the homes insulation scheme is kept under review including possible extensions to other energy saving measures. However, my right hon. Friend has no plans at present to widen or extend the scheme.

Draughtproofing

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to promote an effective standard for draughtproofing in the United Kingdom; and what bodies he is consulting about this.

Sir George Young: A comprehensive draughtproofing standard would need to cover both new and replacement windows and doors, as well as the draughtproofing of existing windows and doors. Many new replacement windows and some doors are draughtproofed in the factory, and for windows such work is already covered by a series of British Standards. The draughtproofing of existing windows and doors is not yet covered by standards. Officials met the Draughtproofing Advisory Association last December to discuss the results of research carried out by the Building Research Establishment in draughtproofing materials and performance with a view to developing standards for materials.

Land Compensation

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to extend the Land Compensation Act 1973 to include works undertaken by nationalised industries.

Mr. Tracey: Part I of the Land Compensation Act 1973 creates an entitlement to compensation where the value of land is depreciated by the use of new public works and no other legal remedy is available. These provisions already apply to works undertaken by nationalised industries, and I am not aware of any problem requiring amending legislation.

Housing Defects

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will include post-1960 Lindsay Parkinson built properties as defective for the purposes of the Housing Defects Act; and what representations he has received about this matter.

Mr. John Patten: I have had no recent representations that Lindsay Parkinson houses should be designated under the Housing Defects Act. However, I am aware that some owners of Lindsay Parkinson HSSB houses built by Basildon development corporation appear to be having difficulties with their resale. My Department has recently received an assessment of the situation from the corporation and we will of course consider this most carefully.

Cherwell District Council (Precept)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the district council precept for the Cherwell district council for 1986-87 compares in real terms with the precept for 1976-77; and how this change compares with the average of changes for all district councils in England over the last 10 years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The figures for local rates in the two years are not comparable due to changes made in 1981-82 to the method of distributing government grants. At ratepayers level the domestic rate in Cherwell has risen by 50 per cent. in real terms (using the GDP deflator) between 1976-77 and 1986-87 compared with the average for all English shire districts of 47 per cent.

Since 1981-82, Cherwell has reduced its local rate by 6 per cent. in real terms compared with an increase of 7 per cent. for the average of all English shire districts.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority rate fund expenditure in England has been paid by central Government and what proportion by local authority ratepayers for each of the last five years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Latest estimates are as follows:

Percentage of rate fund revenue expenditure

	1981-82 per cent.	1982-83 per cent.	1983-84 per cent.	1984-85 per cent.	1985-86 per cent.
Aggregate Exchequer grant plus non-relevant grants	56·0	52·7	51·7	50·6	47·6
Rates rebates (see notes)	1·6	2·3	4·5	5·0	5·3
Rates (excluding rebates) (see notes)	43·5	45·3	42·8	44·4	46·5

Notes:

1. Expenditure is net of sales, fees and charges.
2. Non-relevant grants include mandatory student awards and housing benefit.
3. The figures do not sum exactly to 100 per cent. because of net drawings or additions to balances.
4. Rates rebates figures include grant paid in respect of certificated rate rebates to supplementary benefit recipients. Prior to the partial introduction of Housing Benefit in November 1982 and its full implementation from April 1983 such sums were included with rates (net of rebates).

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities in England received more in real terms in their rate support grant settlement for 1986 as compared with 1985.

Computers and Software

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the purchase or use in his Department of computers or software which are subject to extraterritorial control on their use, movement or resale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The computing procurement policy of my Department is to obtain the best value for money in line with the Department's strategy for information technology. Procurements are carried out through the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency in the Treasury and in accord with Government policy.

Countryside Act 1968 (Management Agreements)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the cost of long-term management agreements under section 15 of the Countryside Act 1968, making the distinction between alternative methods of payment and whether or not the sites are in less favoured areas; how many new agreements have been made in each of the last five years; and if he will classify these by cost per hectare for England, Scotland and Wales, respectively.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council as follows:

(a) It is not practicable, without disproportionate effort, to distinguish between agreements in less Favoured Areas and those in other areas. However, annual payments for net profits forgone are normally lower in less Favoured Areas than elsewhere because of lower potential productivity of the land.

(b) It is similarly impracticable to provide figures of agreements in each of the past 5 years. However, at 31 December 1985, the number of section 15 management agreements completed since the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 was:

Section 15 management agreements

	Number of agreements	Hectares	Lump sums paid £	Annual payment commitment £ per annum*
England	174	4,803	256,114	274,340
Scotland	70	4,741	170,456	105,395
Wales	12	231	5,022	9,348
Total	256	9,775	439,591	389,083

* Excluding arrears.

c. Detailed analysis by country is:

	Number of agreements	Hectares	Lump sum paid £	Average cost per hectare (lump sum) £/ha
England	34	1,257	256,114	204

England	140	3,546	274,340	77
Scotland	52	3,831	105,395	28

Lifeline Project (Manchester)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement concerning the future of the Lifeline project in Manchester, the funding of which under urban aid is due to expire on 31 March.

Mr. John Patten: The submission by Manchester city council for renewal of urban programme funding of time expired projects, including the Lifeline project, is currently under consideration. A decision will be issued as soon as possible.

Greater London Enterprise Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why he has refused the Greater London council consent to release £8 million to the Greater London Enterprise Board; if he has sought to meet board representatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend was not satisfied that further expenditure in support of the Greater London Enterprise Board's activities at the expense of London ratepayers as a whole would be expedient.

Prior to reaching that decision a meeting was held with representatives of the Greater London council, the Greater London Enterprise Board and the London boroughs that are taking up membership of the Board.

GLC (Property Transfer)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to make a statutory instrument to transfer Greater London council seaside and country homes from the London Residuary Body to the Anchor Housing Association; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: It is our intention that the homes will pass to a housing association and I will consider with the London Residuary Body the best means of achieving this.

Thamesmead (Property Transfer)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to make a statutory instrument to transfer property in Thamesmead from the London Residuary Body to the Thamesmead Community Trust; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The means of transfer to Thamesmead Town Ltd. has yet to be decided.

National Coal Board Tenants

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to extend to National Coal Board tenants the same rights to exchange homes, as provided to secure tenants by the Housing and Building Control Act 1984.

Sir George Young: No. But I understand that the National Coal Board already allows its tenants to arrange exchanges.

Rate Demands

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require local authorities to include in rate demands a statement of the amount demanded for the previous two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: No. There are no plans to add to the information local authorities are required to provide under the Rate Demands and Notice of Rates and Precepts Rules 1985.

Water Authorities

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the total capital assets of each individual water authority;

(2) what was the total outstanding financial debt of all the water authorities for the periods 1984-85 and 1985-86;

(3) what was the outstanding financial debt of each individual water authority for the periods 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively;

(4) what are the total capital assets of all the water authorities.

Mr. John Patten: Information on the final debt of all the water authorities for the period 1985-86 will only be available when authorities have closed and published their accounts. I shall write then to the right hon. Gentlemen. The other information requested is as follows:

£ million

Regional Water Authority	Net current cost assets at 31 March 1985	Loans outstanding at 31 March
		1984	1985
Anglian	3,241	792	838
Northumbrian	1,457	397	407
North West	4,277	811	851
Severn Trent	4,309	748	787
Southern	1,990	312	321
South West	1,079	133	140
Thames	4,633	423	385
Wessex	1,082	213	226
Yorkshire	3,300	469	507
All authorities	25,368	4,298	4,462

Net current cost assets exclude land drainage assets.

Water Analysis

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that the regional water authorities are maintaining full, accurate and up-to-date records of all analyses of water samples as required under the Control of Pollution Act 1974;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that the Anglian water authority compiles and publishes full and accurate records of all analysis of water samples as required under the Control of Pollution Act 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Regulations under the Control of Pollution Act were made last year prescribing the particulars to be included in the registers which the Anglian and all water authorities are required to maintain. The registers are available to officers of my Department and are open to public inspection. The particulars include details of samples of effluent taken under section 113(1) of the Water Resources Act 1963, of samples taken for water pollution control purposes of discharges of effluent by the authorities themselves and of samples of water taken for water pollution control purposes.

As part of its water privatisation plans, the Government will shortly issue a consultation paper on environmental issues and is considering seeking suggestions for possible ways of improving the value of the public registers.

Thamesmead

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the London Residuary Body will determine the purchase price to the Thamesmead Community Trust for the land and property at Thamesmead currently owned by the Greater London council.

Sir George Young: The price will be negotiated between the London Residuary Body and Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Housing (London)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made to facilitate surveys of the whole of London's housing stock after the abolition of the Greater London council.

Sir George Young: We undertook a comprehensive inquiry in 1985 into the condition of local authority housing stock. In 1986, we intend to fund a comprehensive English house condition survey and there will be a parallel and more detailed survey of the local authority stock.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessments of Greater London's housing requirements are currently in preparation by his Department.

Sir George Young: Assessments of housing needs are prepared annually by London boroughs and discussed in detail with my Department as the basis for any housing investment programme allocations.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities he consulted over the terms of the order conferring on himself nomination rights to former Greater London council housing after 31 March.

Sir George Young: All London boroughs plus: the City; those district councils which received GLC housing stock under the housing transfer orders; and those councils where the GLC is able to exercise nomination rights on housing stock under town development schemes.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those Greater London council housing responsibilies, functions and activities which his predecessor originally proposed should become the responsibility of the London boroughs and which will now be transferred to the London Residuary Body.

Sir George Young: The ownership of Thamesmead estate will transfer to the LRB temporarily, but Thamesmead will shortly pass to Thamesmead Town Ltd. The GLC mortgage account will pass to the LRB, who will be expected to offer borrowers an opportunity to have their mortgage transferred to a private sector company. But no mortgage will be transferred without the consent of the borrower.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how, in the treatment of capital receipts from Greater London council mortgages, he proposes to ensure that there is no loss of housing investment resources to local authorities in London as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council.

Sir George Young: As I said in my reply of 11 February at column 396 to my hon. Friend the Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes) we shall ensure that the spending power associated with the repayment of mortgage principal will be passed on to the boroughs.

House Building (London)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current assessment of the need for the building of new homes in London over the next 10 years and of the number of renovations required over the same period.

Sir George Young: Assessments of housing needs are prepared annually by London boroughs and discussed in detail with my Department as the basis for any housing investment programme allocations.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to issue to all hon. Members in London the budget statement for 1986-87 of the London Residuary Body; if he will publish in the Official Report the impact on each London borough of the budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: This information is in the London Residuary Body's budget book, which is available from the LRB.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which authority received the highest housing investment programme allocation in England for 1985-86; and what was the amount of the allocation.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Seaside and Country Homes

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications to build new seaside and country homes his Department has received from London authorities since 1 April 1985; and in how many of those cases he has intervened.

Sir George Young: None.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many additional staff have been employed or will be offered employment in his Department as a result of the new planning arrangements for London following the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Tracey: Staff required for this work will be accommodated within planned manpower totals.

Crown Suppliers

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to privatise the Crown Suppliers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I am still considering the recommendations of the team of officials which was asked to consider whether it would be in the public interest to transfer to the private sector all or part of the activities of the Crown Suppliers.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the Crown Suppliers' business is conducted with United Kingdom registered firms.

Sir George Young: Over the past three calendar years the amount of Crown Suppliers' non-fuel business placed with United Kingdom registered firms has varied between 94 per cent. and 96 per cent. of its total business.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the report on the future of the Crown Suppliers.

Sir George Young: The report of the review team, excluding only the material which is commercially sensitive, has been made available to the Civil Service trade unions but I do not propose to publish it more widely.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has held any consultations with the Civil Service unions on the future of the Crown Suppliers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Yes; the Civil Service trade unions have been consulted and their views will be fully taken into account before decisions are made about the future of the Crown Suppliers.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations from firms dealing with the Crown Suppliers over the future of the Crown Suppliers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: None direct, but the views of a number of firms were obtained by the review team and are included in the team's report.

EMPLOYMENT

Visual Display Units

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what representations have been received by the Health and Safety Executive in respect of visual display unit screens.

Mr. Trippier: The executive has received many inquiries at national and local level, from employers, trades unions, members of the public and others about the possible health effects of working with visual display units. It continues to keep the subject under review and has recently published a free leaflet "Working with VDUs". A copy has been placed in the Library.

Job Creation

Mr. Dormand asked the Paymaster General if he will list all the Government measures aimed at providing additional employment and the conditions relating to each one, including financial incentives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Our Department is responsible for a wide range of measures designed to generate employment and enterprise, support youth and adult training and provide help to long-term unemployed people.

The main measures aimed at providing additional employment are:

1. The enterprise allowance scheme which helps unemployed people who want to start up in business. Participants are paid a flat-rate taxable allowance of £40 a week for a maximum of 52 weeks. The scheme will be expanded to 100,000 places in 1986-87.
2. The small firms loan guarantee scheme which assists new or existing small businesses to raise loan finance. The scheme was extended in the Budget for a further three years and it is expected that up to 7,000 small firms will be helped over the next two years.
3. The community programme which provides jobs of up to a year's duration for longer-term unemployed adults on projects of benefit to the community. Those eligible are benefit recipients aged 18 to 24 who have been unemployed for at least six in the past nine months, and those aged 25 and over who have been unemployed for at least 12 in the past 15 months. Participants receive a wage, subject to an overall average for a project or group of projects of £67 per week from 1 April. An expansion of the programme, to 255,000 places was announced by the chancellor in his Budget statement.
4. The new workers scheme announced by the Chancellor in his budget statement, will, from 1 April subject to parliamentary approval, provide help in getting jobs to under 21 year olds who have just left YTS or who are too old for it; this will involve a payment of £15 per week for up to 52 weeks to employers who recruit people aged 20 and under in their first year of employment at wages of £55 a week or below and 20 year olds at £65 per week or below.
5. The job release scheme which makes it easier for older workers to give up work early and to release their jobs to unemployed people. It offers a range of weekly allowances from the date the applicant leaves work until the state pension age, provided the applicant's employer agrees to replace him or her by an unemployed person. The scheme is at present open to men aged 64, women aged 59, and disabled men aged 60 to 63.
6. The job splitting scheme is designed to encourage employers to provide more job opportunities by splitting an existing full-time job, or by combining regular overtime hours into a part-time job or by creating two new part-time jobs for people leaving particular Government schemes. For part-time jobs created and maintained for a period of at least 12 months a grant of £840 is paid to an employer in three equal instalments of £280.

I shall write to the hon. Member with details of the full range of assistance available.

Liverpool

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the Secretary of State's recent visit to Liverpool.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and noble Friend visited Merseyside on 21 March at the invitation of Councillor Neville Goldrein, Leader of the Conservative Group on Merseyside county council. During the morning he met county councillors and representatives of local industry and commerce at an informal reception, and visited Mullard Southport information technology Centre where he was extremely impressed by the standard of training given.

The afternoon's itinerary consisted of a visit to the prestigious Albert Dock complex in Liverpool. My right hon. and noble Friend expressed particular interest in the development's potential for job creation and tourism.

Radioactive Waste Storage

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Paymaster General where information is to be obtained on the procedures for licensing the three forms of radioactive waste storage repositories proposed by the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive, namely (a) above ground storage, (b) near surface subterranean storage and (c) deep cavity subterranean storage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Nuclear Installations Inspectorate will in due course publish its guidelines for licensing these sites. They will be available on request from the Inspectorate.

Enterprise and Employment

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General what proportion of the further £195 million to be devoted to enterprise and employment measures in 1986-87 will be devoted to programmes in the west midlands region.

Mr. Lang: The measures operated by our Department are demand led and the proportion of spending in any region will be related to take-up. We have asked the Manpower Services Commission to consider how best the additional places can be allocated on the measures for which they are responsible.

Dr. K. Featherstone

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General whether any work is being or has been undertaken for his Department by Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling University.

Mr. Lang: Dr. K. Featherstone of Stirling University is not now and has not previously been engaged to do work for the Department of Employment.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General what would be the value of the present day YTS allowance if it had been increased since its inception in 1978 by (a) the rise in earnings and (b) the rise in the retail prices index.

Mr. Trippier: The youth opportunities programme allowance was £19·50 in 1978. If it had been increased in line with movements in the retail price index it would now be £38·05; if increased in line with movements in the average earnings index it would be £44·06.

The current YTS allowance is £27·30, and the allowance for second year trainees will be £35 from 1 April this year. Allowance levels must reflect the fact that trainees are only learning, and YTS provides substantially upgraded training compared with the youth opportunities programme.

Self-employed Persons

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General what information is available to his Department on the proportion of the work force in other advanced economies who are classified as self-employed.

Mr. Lang: The latest available information for most other advanced countries is contained in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's "Labour Force Statistics 1963-83", a copy of which is in the Library. The proportion of people in civilian employment who are classified as self-employed or employers can be obtained from country tables III. It should be noted that for several countries the self-employed figures include the group unpaid family workers, and so are not comparable.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General if he will list for each year since 1956 the number of people in the United Kingdom classifed as self-employed and the proportion they represented of the total work force.

Mr. Lang: Quarterly estimates of the self employed and working population in the United Kingdom for the dates specified may be found in the following publications, copies of which are in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 94

SESSION 1985-86

17th March–27th March 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
